Foreword

THE EUROPA YEAR BOOK was first published in 1926, and this edition is the fifteenth in a consecutive series of annual two-volume editions which began in the late 1950s. During that time THE EUROPA YEAR BOOK has established itself as the authoritative reference work which covers both international organizations and the political and economic life of the countries of the world. While Volume I of the 1974 edition was being prepared many European countries were experiencing economic crisis and political change. Every effort has been made to include the latest available information on these topics in this volume. In addition, all statistics and directory entries have been thoroughly revised and brought up-to-date, ensuring that THE EUROPA YEAR BOOK 1974 is as complete and as up-to-date as possible.

The work of compiling and checking the information contained in THE EUROPA YEAR BOOK would be impossible without the generous co-operation of many individuals and organizations throughout the world, especially statistical offices, departments of information and diplomatic missions. In particular, the editors wish to express their thanks to the United Nations for permission to use statistical material from the UN Demographic Yearbook and the UN Statistical Yearbook, to the Food and Agricultural Organization of the United Nations for permission to reproduce statistics from its various publications, most notably the Production Yearbook 1972, to the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development for assistance with Gross National Product estimates, and to the International Institute for Strategic Studies, 18 Adam Street, London, WC2N 6AL, for permission to use data on defence manpower and finance from The Military Balance 1973-1974.

INTERNATIONAL COMPARISONS

The following tables provide a general comparison of population and economic statistics for every independent state (excluding the Vatican City) and every other territory with more than 25,000 inhabitants (excluding the Gaza Strip). An attempt has been made to provide comparable information under each heading and the figures presented refer to the latest period for which uniform data are available in each category.

Area figures refer to total area, including inland water. Unless otherwise indicated, population figures are mid-year estimates. Most of the data refer to de facto population (persons actually present in the area), though some are estimates of de jure population (persons normally resident). Figures for life expectancy are estimates, prepared in the Population Division of the United Nations, of the average number of years of life remaining to a new-born child if subject to the mortality conditions (recorded or assumed) of the period 1965-70. It should be stressed that the figures refer to the average life expectancy at birth for both sexes. In many developing countries mortality rates are high during the first few years of life, but those who survive infancy have a life expectancy much greater than the average at birth. It is also noteworthy that in all developed countries females have a greater life expectancy than males.

Gross National Product figures can be taken as indicators of the comparative sizes of the various national economies, and Gross National Product per capita figures provide an index of the comparative wealth and poverty of the countries. Owing to unequal distribution of wealth a G.N.P. per capita figure can by no means be taken as an average income. Sources are quoted at the end of the tables, but it must be stressed that the G.N.P. and G.N.P. per capita figures are approximations and may be used only as a general index. In particular, a wide margin of error may be expected in estimates for socialist economies, and in G.N.P. per capita figures under $100, where the subsistence sector is unusually important and the degree of precision tends to decrease as the ratio of subsistence production to total G.N.P. increases. Figures refer to G.N.P. in U.S. dollars at market prices, with totals rounded to the nearest ten of the unit employed. Adjustments have been made to some published figures of G.N.P. per head to take account of revised population estimates.

PART I

INTERNATIONAL ORGANIZATIONS

THE UNITED NATIONS

First Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10017, U.S.A.

Founded in 1945 to maintain international peace and security and to develop international co-operation in economic, social, cultural and humanitarian problems.

THE UNITED NATIONS CHARTER

PREAMBLE

We the peoples of the United Nations determined

TO SAVE succeeding generations from the scourge of war, which twice in our lifetime has brought untold sorrow to mankind, and

TO REAFFIRM faith in fundamental human rights, in the dignity and worth of the human person, in the equal rights of men and women and of nations large and small, and

TO ESTABLISH conditions under which justice and respect for the obligations arising from treaties and other sources of international law can be maintained, and

TO PROMOTE social progress and better standards of life in larger freedom,

And for these ends

TO PRACTISE tolerance and live together in peace with one another as good neighbours, and

TO UNITE our strength to maintain international peace and security, and

TO ENSURE, by the acceptance of principles and the institution of methods, that armed force shall not be used, save in the common interest, and

TO EMPLOY international machinery for the promotion of the economic and social advancement of all peoples,

Have resolved to combine our efforts to accomplish these aims

Accordingly, our respective governments, through representatives assembled in the city of San Francisco, who have exhibited their full powers found to be in good and due form, have agreed to the present Charter of the United Nations and do hereby establish an international organization to be known as the United Nations.

The United Nations was a name devised by President Franklin D. Roosevelt. It was first used in the Declaration by United Nations of January 1st, 1942, when representatives of twenty-six nations pledged their governments to continue fighting together against the Axis powers.

The United Nations Charter was drawn up by the representatives of fifty countries at the United Nations Conference on International Organization, which met at San Francisco from April 25th to June 26th, 1945. The representatives deliberated on the basis of proposals worked out by representatives of China, the U.S.S.R., the United Kingdom and the United States at Dumbarton Oaks in August-October 1944. The Charter was signed on June 26th, 1945. Poland, not represented at the Conference, signed it later but nevertheless became one of the original fifty-one members.

The United Nations officially came into existence on October 24th, 1945, when the Charter had been ratified by China, France, the U.S.S.R., the United Kingdom and the United States, and by a majority of other signatories. October 24th is now universally celebrated as United Nations Day.

PURPOSES AND PRINCIPLES

The purposes of the United Nations are:

- To maintain international peace and security;
- To develop friendly relations among nations;
- To co-operate internationally in solving international economic, social, cultural and humanitarian problems and in promoting respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms;
- To be a centre for harmonizing the actions of nations in attaining these common ends.

The United Nations acts in accordance with these principles:

- It is based on the sovereign equality of all its members.
- All members are to fulfil in good faith their Charter obligations.
- They are to settle their international disputes by peaceful means and without endangering peace, security and justice.
- They are to refrain in their international relations from the threat or use of force against other states.
- They are to give the United Nations every assistance in action it takes in accordance with the Charter, and not to assist states against which preventive or enforcement action is being taken.
- The United Nations is to ensure that states which are not members act in accordance with these principles in so far as it is necessary to maintain international peace and security.

Nothing in the Charter is to authorize the United Nations to intervene in matters which are purely the national concern of any state.

The official languages of the United Nations are Arabic, Chinese, English, French, Russian and Spanish. Its working languages are Chinese, English and French. Spanish is also a working language of the General Assembly and of the Economic and Social Council.

Membership of the United Nations is open to all peace-loving nations which accept the obligations of the United Nations Charter and, in the judgment of the Organization, are able and willing to carry out these obligations.

The original members of the United Nations are those countries which signed the Declaration by United Nations of January 1st, 1942, or took part in the San Francisco Conference, and which signed and ratified the Charter.

Other countries can be admitted by the General Assembly upon the recommendation of the Security Council. A two-thirds majority vote by the Assembly is required.

Members may be suspended or expelled by the General Assembly on recommendation of the Security Council. They may be suspended if the Security Council is taking enforcement action against them or expelled if they persistently violate the principles of the Charter. The Security Council can restore its rights to a suspended member.

TOTAL MEMBERSHIP 135 (December 1973)

¹ From 1945 until 1971 the Chinese seat was occupied by the Republic of China (confined to Taiwan since 1949)

³ Indonesia withdrew from the United Nations in January 1965 but resumed membership in September 1966.

⁵ Tanganyika was a member of the United Nations from December 1961 and Zanzibar was a member from December 1963. From April 1964, the United Republic of Tanganyika and Zanzibar continued as a single member, changing its name to United Republic of Tanzania in November 1964.

THE MAIN ORGANS

GENERAL ASSEMBLY

The General Assembly was established as a principal organ under the United Nations Charter; first met January 10th, 1946. It is the main deliberative organ of the United Nations.

MEMBERS

All members of the UN. Each delegation consists of not more than five representatives and five alternates with as many advisers, technical advisers and experts as may be required.

ORGANIZATION

President for 28th Session (September-December 1973):
LEOPOLDO BENITES (Ecuador).

Vice-Presidents: Chairmen of the delegations of Cameroon, China, Czechoslovakia, Fiji, France, Ghana, Guyana, Honduras, Netherlands, Spain, Sri Lanka, Tunisia, Uganda, U.S.S.R., United Arab Emirates, United Kingdom and U.S.A.

The Assembly meets regularly once a year, but special sessions may also be held. It has the power to adopt recommendations only, not binding decisions. Important questions are decided by a two-thirds majority. Each nation has one vote and each vote is equal.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY COMMITTEES AND COMMISSIONS

MAIN COMMITTEES

There are seven Main Committees, on which all members have a right to be represented. The First to Sixth were appointed on January 11th, 1946. An ad hoc Political Committee was first established in November 1948 and re-established annually until November 1956, when it was made permanent and renamed Special Political Committee.

First Committee: Political and Security.

SECURITY COUNCIL

Established as a principal organ under the United Nations Charter; first met January 17th, 1946. The task of the Security Council is to promote international peace and security in all parts of the world.

MEMBERS

Permanent members:

China	United Kingdom
France	U.S.A.
U.S.S.R.

The remaining ten members are normally elected by the General Assembly for two-year periods:

Until December 1974: Australia, Austria, Indonesia, Kenya, Peru.

Until December 1975: Byelorussia, Cameroon, Costa Rica, Iraq, Mauritania.

ORGANIZATION

The Security Council has the right to investigate any dispute or situation which might lead to friction between two or more countries, and such disputes or situations may be brought to the Council's attention either by one of its members, by any member state, by the General Assembly, by the Secretary-General or even, under certain conditions, by a state which is not a member of the United Nations.

The Council has the right to recommend ways and means of peaceful settlement and, in certain circumstances, the actual terms of settlement.

In the event of a threat to or breach of international peace or an act of aggression, the Council has powers to take "enforcement" measures in order to restore international peace and security. These include severance of communications and of economic and diplomatic relations and, if required, action by air, land and sea forces.

All members of the United Nations are pledged by the Charter to make available to the Security Council, on its call and in accordance with special agreements, the armed forces, assistance and facilities necessary to maintain international peace and security. These agreements, however, have not yet been concluded.

The Council is organized to be able to function continuously. The Presidency of the Council is held monthly in turn by the member states in English alphabetical order.

Each member of the Council has one vote. On procedural matters decisions are made by the affirmative vote of any nine members. For decisions on other matters the required nine affirmative votes must include the votes of the five permanent members. This is the rule of "great power unanimity" popularly known as the "veto" privilege. This right has so far been exercised 127 times, as follows: China (2), France (4), U.S.S.R. (107), United Kingdom (9), U.S.A. (5) (as at March 1974).

THE UNITED NATIONS—(THE MAIN ORGANS)

In practice, an abstention by one of the permanent members is not regarded as a veto. Any member, whether permanent or non-permanent, must abstain from voting in any decision concerning the pacific settlement of a dispute to which it is a party.

SUBSIDIARY BODY

Military Staff Committee: Consists of the Chiefs of Staff (or their representatives) of the five permanent members of the Security Council and assists the Council on all military questions.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL—ECOSOC

Promotes world co-operation on economic, social, cultural and humanitarian problems.

MEMBERS

Fifty-four members are elected by the General Assembly for three-year terms: eighteen are elected each year. Current membership:

Until December 1974: Argentina, Bolivia, Burundi, Canada, Chile, China, Czechoslovakia, Ethiopia, Finland, India, Japan, Kenya, Pakistan, Poland, Sweden, U.S.S.R., U.K., Zaire.

Until December 1975: Algeria, Brazil, Fiji, France, Federal Republic of Germany, Guatemala, Guinea, Indonesia, Mali, Mongolia, Netherlands, Senegal, Spain, Trinidad and Tobago, Turkey, Uganda, Venezuela, Yugoslavia.

Until December 1976: Australia, Belgium, Colombia, Congo, Egypt, German Democratic Republic, Iran, Italy, Ivory Coast, Jamaica, Jordan, Liberia, Mexico, Romania, Thailand, U.S.A., People's Democratic Republic of Yemen, Zambia.

ORGANIZATION

The Council, normally meeting twice a year in New York and Geneva, is mainly a central policy-making and co-ordinating organ. It has a co-ordinating function between UN and the specialized agencies, and also makes consultative arrangements with approved voluntary or non-governmental organizations which work within the sphere of its activities. The Council has functional and regional commissions to carry out much of its detailed work.

President (1974): AARNO KARHILO (Finland).

Vice-Presidents (1974): IQBAL AKHUND (Pakistan), VICTOR MANUAL BARCELO (Mexico), ZEWDE GABRE-SELASSIE (Ethiopia), LADISLAW ŠMÍD (Czechoslovakia).

FUNCTIONAL COMMISSIONS

Statistical Commission: Standardizes terminology and procedure in statistics.

Population Commission: Tries to raise the standard and broaden the scope of national censuses.

Commission for Social Development: Plans Social Development Programmes.

Commission on Human Rights: Seeks greater respect for the basic rights of man, the prevention of discrimination and the protection of minorities. (Sub-commission: on Prevention of Discrimination and Protection of Minorities.)

Commission on the Status of Women: Aims at equality of political, economic and social rights for women.

Commission on Narcotic Drugs: Mainly concerned in combating illicit traffic.

THE UNITED NATIONS—(THE MAIN ORGANS)

THE TRUSTEESHIP COUNCIL

New York, N.Y. 10017, U.S.A.

One of the six main organs of the UN, the Trusteeship Council supervises United Nations' Trust Territories through the administering authorities to promote the political, economic, social and educational advancement of the inhabitants towards self-government or independence.

TERRITORIES UNDER TRUSTEESHIP SYSTEM

New Guinea (Australia).

Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands (U.S.A.).

MEMBERS OF TRUSTEESHIP COUNCIL

The Council consists of member states administering Trust Territories, permanent members of the Security Council which do not administer Trust Territories, and enough other non-administering countries elected by the Assembly for three-year terms to ensure that the membership is equally divided between administering and non-administering members.

Administering Countries:

Australia
United States

Other Countries:

China
France
U.S.S.R.
United Kingdom

ORGANIZATION

The Council meets once a year, generally in June. Each member has one vote, and decisions are made by a simple majority of the members present and voting. A new President is elected at the beginning of the Council's regular session each year.

The Council is under the authority of the General Assembly for New Guinea but not for the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands. This has been designated a strategic area, and the supervisory functions of the United Nations are, in its case, exercised by the Trusteeship Council under the authority of the Security Council.

INTERNATIONAL COURT OF JUSTICE

Peace Palace, The Hague 1012, Netherlands

Set up in 1945, the Court is the principal judicial organ of the UN. All members of the UN are parties to the Statute of the Court, and also Switzerland, Liechtenstein and San Marino. In addition, the Court is open to the Republic of Viet-Nam. States parties to the Statute: 138. Official languages: English, French. Channel of communication: the Registrar.

COMPOSITION OF THE COURT

The Judges. The Court is composed of fifteen independent judges of different nationalities, elected from among persons of high moral character who possess high judicial or legal qualifications. Representation of the main forms of civilization and legal systems of the world is required to be borne in mind in their election. Candidates are nominated by national groups appointed by governments under special conditions, and for election require an absolute majority in both the General Assembly and the Security Council sitting independently. Judges, known as Members of the Court, are elected for nine years and may be re-elected; elections for five seats are held every three years. The Court elects its President and Vice-President for each three-year period. Members may not have any political, administrative, or other professional occupation, and may not sit in any case with which they have been otherwise connected than as a judge of the Court. They undertake to exercise their powers impartially and conscientiously. For the purposes of a case, each side—consisting of one or more States—may, unless the Bench already includes a judge with a corresponding nationality, choose a person from outside the Court to sit as a judge on terms of equality with the Members. Judicial decisions are taken by a majority of the judges present, subject to a quorum of nine Members. The President has a casting vote.

JURISDICTION OF THE COURT

The International Court of Justice operates in accordance with a Statute which is an integral part of the UN Charter and is based on the Statute of the former Permanent Court of International Justice, established in 1920 under the League of Nations and dissolved in 1946. References conferring jurisdiction on the Permanent Court in treaties or conventions still in force are deemed to be references to the present Court. Only States may be parties in cases before the Court; those not parties to the Statute may have access in certain circumstances and under conditions laid down by the Security Council.

A review of the role of the Court is on the agenda of the General Assembly.

The Jurisdiction of the Court comprises:

1. All cases which the parties refer to it jointly by special agreement (there have been five such).
2. All matters concerning which a treaty or convention in force provides for reference to the Court. Nearly 700 bilateral or multilateral agreements make such provision. Among the more noteworthy: General Act for Pacific Settlement of International Disputes (1949), Treaty of Peace with Japan (1951), European Convention for Peaceful Settlement of Disputes (1957), Single Convention on Narcotic Drugs (1961), Protocol relating to the Status of Refugees (1967).
3. Legal disputes between States which have recognized the jurisdiction of the Court as compulsory for specified classes of dispute. Declarations by the following 45 States thus accepting the compulsory jurisdiction of the Court are at present in force: Australia, Austria, Belgium, Botswana, Canada, Colombia, Costa Rica, Denmark, Dominican Republic, Egypt, El Salvador, Finland, The Gambia, Haiti, Honduras, India, Israel, Japan, Kenya, Khmer Republic, Liberia, Liechtenstein, Luxembourg, Malawi, Malta, Mauritius, Mexico, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Nigeria, Norway, Pakistan, Panama, Philippines, Portugal, Somalia, Sudan, Swaziland, Sweden, Switzerland, Uganda, United Kingdom, United States of America, and Uruguay.

Disputes as to whether the Court has jurisdiction are settled by the Court.

Judgments are without appeal, but are binding only for the particular case and between the parties.

Compliance with Judgments. States appearing before the Court undertake to comply with its Judgment. If a party to a case fails to do so, the other party may apply to the Security Council, which may make recommendations or decide upon measures to give effect to the Judgment.

Advisory opinions on legal questions may be requested by the General Assembly, the Security Council or, if so authorized by the Assembly, other United Nations organs or specialized agencies.

PAST CASES

Forty-five cases have been referred to the Court by States. Some were removed from the list as a result of settlement or discontinuance, or on the grounds of a lack of basis for jurisdiction. Cases which have been the subject of a Judgment by the Court include:

Corfu Channel (United Kingdom v. Albania), Fisheries (United Kingdom v. Norway), Asylum (Colombia/Peru), Haya de la Torre (Colombia v. Peru), Rights of Nationals of the United States of America in Morocco (France v. United States), Ambatielos (Greece v. United Kingdom), Anglo-Iranian Oil Co. (United Kingdom v. Iran), Minquiers and Ecrehos (France/United Kingdom), Nottebohm (Liechtenstein v. Guatemala), Monetary Gold Removed from Rome in 1943 (Italy v. France, United Kingdom and United States), Certain Norwegian Loans (France v. Norway), Right of Passage over Indian Territory (Portugal v. India), Application of the Convention of 1902 Governing the Guardianship of Infants (Netherlands v. Sweden), Interhandel (Switzerland v. United States), Sovereignty over Certain Frontier Land (Belgium/Netherlands), Arbitral Award made by the King of Spain on 23 December 1906 (Honduras v. Nicaragua), Temple of Preah Vihear (Cambodia v. Thailand), South West Africa (Ethiopia and Liberia v. South Africa), Northern Cameroons (Cameroon v. United Kingdom), Barcelona Traction, Light and Power Co., Ltd. (New Application: 1962) (Belgium v. Spain),

THE UNITED NATIONS—(THE MAIN ORGANS)

North Sea Continental Shelf (Federal Republic of Germany/Denmark and Netherlands), Appeal relating to the Jurisdiction of the ICAO Council (India v. Pakistan).

Advisory Opinions on the following matters have been given by the Court at the request of the United Nations General Assembly:

Condition of Admission of a State to Membership in the United Nations; Competence of the General Assembly for the Admission of a State to the United Nations; Reparation for Injuries Suffered in the Service of the United Nations; Interpretation of the Peace Treaties with Bulgaria, Hungary and Romania; International Status of South West Africa; Voting Procedure on Questions relating to Reports and Petitions concerning the Territory of South West Africa; Admissibility of Hearings of Petitioners by the Committee on South West Africa; Reservations to the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide; Effect of Awards of Compensation Made by the United Nations Administrative Tribunal; Certain Expenses of the United Nations.

In 1971 the Court gave its fourth Advisory Opinion in regard to South West Africa (Namibia), this time at the request of the Security Council: Legal Consequences for States of the continued presence of South Africa in Namibia (South West Africa) notwithstanding Security Council resolution 276 (1970).

In 1973 the Court gave an Advisory Opinion at the request of the Committee on Applications for Review of United Nations Administrative Tribunal Judgments (see below).

The Court has also, at the request of Unesco, given an Advisory Opinion on Judgments of the Administrative Tribunal of the ILO upon Complaints made against Unesco and, at the request of IMCO, on the Constitution of the Maritime Safety Committee of the Inter-Governmental Maritime Consultative Organization.

RECENT JUDICIAL ACTIVITY OF THE COURT

From January 4th to July 13th, 1973, the Court held 16 public sittings and 90 private meetings.

On April 14th, 1972 the United Kingdom had filed an Application against Iceland in a dispute concerning Fisheries Jurisdiction, contending that the proposed extension by Iceland of the limits of its exclusive fisheries jurisdiction from 12 to 50 nautical miles from the baselines round its coasts was contrary to international law and that Iceland would not be entitled unilaterally to exclude the fishing vessels of other countries from the additional area. A similar Application had been filed against Iceland by the Federal Republic of Germany on June 5th, 1972. In both cases Iceland had informed the Court that the 1961 exchange of Notes on which the Applicant founded the Court's jurisdiction was in its view no longer applicable and that it would therefore not appear before the Court. At the request of the Applicants the Court had on August 17th, 1972, issued Orders indicating that for the time being Iceland should not enforce the regulations, that the Applicants should not exceed certain prescribed tonnages of annual catch, and that all three should avoid aggravating the dispute.

After hearing the Applicants, the Court, on February 2nd, 1973, found, in two Judgments, that it had jurisdiction in both cases. On July 12th, 1973 it confirmed the provisional measures of August 17th, 1972 pending judgment in either case, but stated that these did not exclude interim arrangements between the respective Governments. By August 1st, 1973, Memorials on the merits had been filed by the United Kingdom and by the Federal Republic of Germany.

Nuclear Tests: On May 9th, 1973, Australia filed an Application against France contending that the carrying-out of further atmospheric tests of nuclear weapons in the South Pacific would not be consistent with applicable rules of international law. Australia filed the same day a request for the indication of interim measures to the effect that France should desist from any further such tests pending the judgment of the Court. A similar Application and request were filed against France by New Zealand on May 9th and 14th. On May 16th France stated that the Court was manifestly not competent in the cases, that it could not accept the Court's jurisdiction and that it requested the Court to remove the cases from its list.

After six public sittings, which France did not attend, the Court granted the requests for interim measures in two Orders issued on June 22nd, 1973, indicating that, pending its final decision, the Parties should each of them ensure that no action was taken which might aggravate the dispute or prejudice the rights of the other Party, and that, in particular, France should avoid nuclear tests causing the deposit of radio-active fall-out on the territory of the other Parties. By the same Orders the Court set time-limits within which the States concerned could submit written pleadings to be addressed to the questions of the jurisdiction of the Court and of the admissibility of the Applications. The Applicants' Memorials on these subjects were filed in November. (France withdrew from ICJ jurisdiction in January 1974).

On May 11th, 1973, Pakistan filed an Application against India in a dispute originating in the fact that, according to Pakistan, India was proposing to hand over 195 Pakistani prisoners of war to Bangladesh, which intended to try them for acts of genocide and crimes against humanity. On the same day Pakistan also filed a request for the indication of interim measures of protection. India stated that there was no legal basis whatever for the jurisdiction of the Court in the case and that the Application and request were without legal effect. After three public sittings, which India did not attend, Pakistan asked the Court to postpone further consideration of its request for interim measures in order to facilitate negotiations. By an Order issued on July 13th, 1973 the Court set time-limits within which Pakistan and India could submit written pleadings on the question of its jurisdiction.

On July 12th, 1973 the Court gave an Advisory Opinion, requested on July 3rd, 1972 by the Committee on Applications for Review of United Nations Administrative Tribunal Judgments, concerning an Application for Review of Judgment No. 158. In answer to the Committee's questions, the Court was of opinion that the Administrative Tribunal had not failed to exercise jurisdiction vested in it, and had not committed a fundamental error in procedure occasioning a failure of justice.

REGIONAL ECONOMIC COMMISSIONS

ECONOMIC COMMISSION FOR EUROPE—ECE

Palais des Nations, Geneva, Switzerland

ECE was established in 1947. Representatives of all European countries and of the United States and Canada study European economic and technological problems and recommend courses of action.

MEMBERS

Albania	Federal Republic of	Portugal
Austria	Germany	Romania
Belgium	Greece	Spain
Bulgaria	Hungary	Sweden
Byelorussian S.S.R.	Iceland	Switzerland
Canada	Ireland	Turkey
Cyprus	Italy	Ukrainian S.S.R.
Czechoslovakia	Luxembourg	U.S.S.R.
Denmark	Malta	U.K.
Finland	Netherlands	U.S.A.
France	Norway	Yugoslavia
German Democratic Republic	Poland

ORGANIZATION

COMMISSION

ECE is one of the four regional economic commissions set up by the UN Economic and Social Council. The Commission holds an annual plenary session and brief meetings of subsidiary bodies are convened throughout the year. Specialists seek agreements for later government approval, collect statistics and exchange technical information, both at meetings and through distribution of reports and special papers. ECE itself takes no action affecting governments.

SECRETARIAT

Executive Secretary: JANEZ STANOVNIK (Yugoslavia).

The Secretariat services the meetings of the Commission and its subsidiary bodies and publishes periodic surveys and reviews, including a number of specialized statistical bulletins on coal, timber, steel, housing and building, electric power, gas and transport.

COMMITTEES

Committee on Agricultural Problems. Keeps under review the market conditions, follows developments under the Protocol on the Standardization of Fruit and Vegetables, examines problems arising from mechanization of agriculture, and drafts standard clauses for the international sale of certain agricultural products (cereals and citrus fruits). Chair. A. GANEV (Bulgaria).

Timber Committee. Regularly reviews the market in sawn softwood, small-sized roundwood and hardwood, studies forest working techniques, compiles statistics, watches trends in the use of wood and its products and of wood waste, and drafts standard clauses for the international sale of certain categories of timber. Chair. A. MADAS (Hungary).

Coal Committee. Concentrates on problems of production and trade, makes recommendations on the use of solid fuel. With agreements reached on the international classification of brown coals and lignites, ECE has completed the classification by type of all existing coals. Drafts general conditions of sale for solid fuels. Chair. R. DURLOU (Belgium).

Committee on Electric Power. Studies hydro-electric resources, thermal power plants, legal questions, rural electrification and the cost of financing new projects. ECE's relationship with the International Atomic Energy Agency is close. Chair. G. VAJDA (Hungary).

Committee on Gas. Deals with the economic and technical aspects of the production, transport and utilization of gas, natural and manufactured as well as liquefied petroleum gases, and forecasts demand. Chair. G. ROBERT (France).

THE UNITED NATIONS—(REGIONAL ECONOMIC COMMISSIONS)

Committee on Housing, Building and Planning. Periodically reviews trends and progress, with special reference to industrialization of construction and building costs. Studies land use and prices, urban renewal and physical planning. Housing problems of less industrialized countries receive special consideration. Chair. J. T. REDPATH (U.K.).

Inland Transport Committee. Covers road, rail and inland water transport, customs, contracts, transport of dangerous and perishable goods, equipment, statistics, tariffs, river law, road transport régime and road traffic accidents, construction of vehicles and passenger transport services by road. A number of international agreements are in force following their adoption through ECE. Chair. L. FÖLDVÁRI (Hungary).

Steel Committee. Annually reviews trends in the European and world markets, changes in price policy, growth of capacity supply factors and future prospects. Also studies long-term economic and technological problems. Chair. P. NATCHEV (Bulgaria).

Committee on the Development of Trade. Examines intra-European trade, especially east/west trade. Organizes facilities in arbitration, trade fairs and technical shows, standardization of general conditions of sale of goods, insurance, simplification and standardization of export documents, payments arrangements, including multilateral compensation procedures, and consultations. Chair. Miss A. M. WARBURTON (U.K.).

Conference of European Statisticians. Promotes improvement of national statistics and their international comparability in economic, social and demographic fields; facilitates exchange of information between European countries. Chair. Sir C. MOSER (U.K.).

Senior Economic Advisers to ECE Governments. Brings together high-calibre governmental experts for an exchange of views and experience on selected problems of governmental economic policy. Also, organizes—under its auspices—groups of experts, joint research projects and seminars on methodological problems relating to medium- and long-term planning and projections. Chair. J. KOOYMAN (Netherlands).

Committee on Water Problems. Reviews annually major trends and policies with regard to water resources use and developments. Studies problems relating to the methodology of surveying water resources and needs including the establishment of relevant balances and statistics. Also studies selected problems of water pollution control and of governmental policy related to the formulation and administration of water management plans. Chair. Prof. A. VOLKER (Netherlands).

Chemical Industry Committee. Regularly reviews the market of chemical products and their raw materials in Europe, U.S.A. and Japan. Compiles annual statistics on production of and trade in chemical products. Carries out studies on special problems arising in connection with the development of the chemical industry. Chair. F. PONTI (Italy).

Senior Advisers to ECE Governments on Science and Technology. Keeps under review developments in the sphere of science and technology in the UN/ECE region and makes proposals to promote international co-operation. Priority activities are: review and analysis of problems of scientific and technological policy; technological forecasting; transfer of technology; dissemination of scientific and technological information; co-operative research; co-operation with other subsidiary bodies of the Commission and other international organizations. Chair. R. NEGRU (Romania).

Senior Advisers to ECE Governments on Environmental Problems. Exchanges experience and information on environmental problems of common concern; surveys and assesses the state of the environment in the UN/ECE countries; considers national policies, institutions, and legislation and the international implications of environmental policies, with emphasis on socio-economic questions. Chair. J. SPAANDER (Netherlands).

BUDGET

ECE's budget for the biennium 1974-75 is U.S. $10,113,000.

PUBLICATIONS

Economic Survey of Europe (annual); Economic Bulletin for Europe; frequent statistical and technical studies and bulletins.

ORGANIZATION

The Commission meets yearly in different member countries (first session, Shanghai, 1947; thirtieth session scheduled for Colombo, 1974).

The work of the Commission is conducted through its annual sessions; meetings of its main committees and bodies in specific fields; field missions; training courses and seminars; year-round work of a secretariat with headquarters in Bangkok; and technical assistance to governments. Fields of work include:

Development Research and Planning

Trade
Industry and Housing
Natural Resources
Agricultural Development
Transport and Communications
Statistics
Population
Social Development
Public Administration

Executive Secretary: J. B. P. MARAMIS (Indonesia).

ACTIVITIES

Since its founding, ECAFE has developed its activities on three levels—the promotion of regional co-operation in combating region-wide problems, increasing aid in sub-regional approaches, and helping individual Governments plan and carry out balanced development programmes.

Currently the Commission is stressing new priorities aimed at reducing mass poverty, population pressures and unemployment in Asia, with intensified efforts to solve agricultural problems, speed the application of science and technology to development, and at the same time avert environmental damage. ECAFE's Executive Secretary has urged concentration on "those strategic areas which promise the greatest possible impact in the region". Although ECAFE does not itself distribute capital aid, it has helped set up and attract funds for regional and sub-regional projects that, in turn, provide development assistance. The Asian Development Bank, for example, grew out of an ECAFE decision on the need for a source of additional capital; since 1966 it has operated as an independent institution in Manila (see separate chapter below).

ECAFE initiatives have resulted in the establishment of the Committee for the Co-ordination of Investigations of the Lower Mekong Basin, composed of the Khmer Republic, Laos, the Republic of Viet-Nam and Thailand, in 1957; the Asian Highway Co-ordinating Committee, which is served by a Transport Technical Bureau operating at ECAFE headquarters; and the Asian Institute for Economic Development and Planning, set up in 1964. All three are now working in Bangkok, with links to ECAFE and with aid from the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP).

ECAFE efforts to stimulate regional economic co-operation have also led to the establishment of the Asian Industrial Development Council, in 1966; the Committee for

THE UNITED NATIONS—(REGIONAL ECONOMIC COMMISSIONS)

Co-ordination of Joint Prospecting for Mineral Resources in Asian Offshore Areas, in the same year; ECAFE Trade Promotion Centre, in 1968; the Asian Coconut Community, formally inaugurated in 1969; the ECAFE/World Meteorological Organization (WMO) Typhoon Committee, in 1968; and the Asian Statistical Institute, which began training of senior government statisticians in Tokyo in June 1970.

The Asian Centre for Development Administration (ACDA) began work in Kuala Lumpur in 1973, and ECAFE continued to provide secretariat services for the Pepper Community, Trans-Asian Railway Network Project, and an offshore prospecting committee for the South Pacific.

Other co-operative undertakings in formative stages include an Asian Rice Trade Fund, intended to promote intra-regional trade in rice and encourage economic stability for importing and exporting countries, a three-pronged trade and monetary programme calling for expanded regional trade among developing countries, an Asian Clearing Union, and a proposed Asian Reserve Bank.

Newer proposals are being investigated in fields such as mineral resources development, industries, agriculture, transport, communications and shipping.

ANNUAL SESSIONS

At its yearly sessions the Commission as a whole examines the region's problems, reviews progress or setbacks, sets new goals and priorities, and may launch new operational projects. Recent sessions have called, for example, for special efforts towards the goal of self-sustained growth and economic self-reliance for the region's developing countries (Bangkok, 1972) and for "social justice hand-in-hand with economic progress" (Manila, 1971). In line with a request by the Tokyo session in 1973, member Governments and the secretariat are taking a "new look" at ECAFE's conference structure, procedures and priorities to ensure maximum effectiveness.

MINISTERIAL CONFERENCES

To speed up economic co-operation, ECAFE has convened four ministerial conferences—in Manila in 1963 and 1965, in Bangkok in 1968 and in Kabul in 1970. The most recent session adopted the "Kabul Declaration"—a call for further efforts to expand regional trade, improve monetary mechanisms, and concerted action on a variety of other problems, with special aid to the least developed countries.

FIELDS OF ECAFE WORK

In its current work, ECAFE is giving special attention to ways of achieving regional growth during the current United Nations Second Development Decade (1971–1980). Some current and recent activities in major fields—with an increasingly interdisciplinary approach cutting across sectoral lines—are outlined below.

Development Research and Planning: As a foundation for action programmes, the ECAFE secretariat carries out an annual Economic Survey of Asia and the Far East; studies specific problems involved in development planning, plan harmonization and regional co-operation; maintains a watch on progress in the Second Development Decade; and aids with national planning problems.

Co-operation relating to commodity production, research and marketing has been fostered through the formation of the Asian Coconut Community, in 1969, and the Pepper Community, in 1972, under ECAFE auspices. ECAFE has also worked with the Association of Natural Rubber-Producing Countries, and is studying possibilities for co-operation in timber, jute and other commodities. Harmonization in development planning is encouraged through aid in sub-regional approaches, as among South-East Asian countries or Mekong riparian States.

Intra-regional trade projections, and studies of growth prospects for the region, are among other research activities.

International Trade: ECAFE is seeking to help members in the region expand trade among themselves and with the rest of the world—for example, through liberalization, easing of customs formalities, promotional efforts, and improved regional payments arrangements. In 1973 an agreement for an Asian Clearing Union received first signatures and negotiations towards regional trade expansion began. A draft agreement for an Asian Reserve Bank is before Governments. ECAFE's Trade Promotion Centre, established in 1968, organizes training courses, offers advisory services to governments, collects and disseminates trade information, and aids in national and international exhibitions designed to stimulate commerce. Three Asian International Trade Fairs have been held (in Bangkok, Teheran and New Delhi) since 1966 in response to an ECAFE proposal. Possibilities for a multi-national export credit insurance scheme, as an aid in the promotion of exports from developing countries of the region, are being explored. ECAFE's Centre for Shipping Information and Advisory Services, set up in 1968, aids governments with problems such as freight rates, establishment of shippers' councils, development of merchant marines, and other steps designed to encourage trade. The Centre for Commercial Arbitration has drawn up standards in this field and carries out research intended to improve arbitral facilities and practices in the ECAFE region. Special attention to problems of land-locked and other least-developed countries is being provided by a unit set up in 1971.

Industry and Housing: Ways of speeding industrial development in the region are sought by ECAFE through field missions, studies, advisory services, and expert meetings dealing, for example, with iron and steel, joint ventures in the petrochemical industry, manufacture of improved farm machinery, application of advanced technology in coconut-processing, promotion of building research and development, low-cost automation for small-scale industries, and handicrafts. The establishment of a South East Asia Iron and Steel Institute in 1971, in Singapore, is one outgrowth of ECAFE activities in this field. Guidance is provided by the Asian Industrial Development Council (AIDC) and ECAFE's Committee on Industry and Natural Resources, which also has a work programme in human settlements and housing and in mineral and energy resources development. Asia's need to build its own "innovative technology", and to guard against environmental problems in the course of development, are stressed in ECAFE's programmes. In the field of housing, building and planning ECAFE emphasizes the urgent need for the formulation of sound housing policies and programmes; the diversification of methods for the production of more low-cost housing, including the mobilization of domestic savings for the financing of housing and urban development; and the improvement of slums and squatter settlements.

Natural Resources: ECAFE is working to help members make maximum use of mineral, energy and water resources, with co-operative regional or sub-regional approaches wherever possible. Examples follow below:

Offshore Resources: The ECAFE-fostered Committee for Co-ordination of Joint Prospecting for Mineral Resources in Asian Offshore Areas (CCOP), set up in 1966, seeks to promote and co-ordinate exploration, using advanced technology, to locate undersea resources of mineral wealth adjoining land areas of countries in the Western Pacific region. Specially equipped vessels, aircraft and other facilities have been provided by industrialized countries to aid in this effort. A 1971 report on CCOP comments that the Committee's technical publications "have undoubtedly been a major factor in attracting risk capital to explore in more detail the prospects for mineral resources on the marine shelves of eastern Asia". In 1972, the UNDP approved funds for technical support for CCOP's Bangkok-based secretariat. New co-operative efforts for South Pacific countries were launched under ECAFE auspices late in 1972.

Water Resources: ECAFE is working on problems of river-basin development, improved use of delta land, conservation and development of national water resources, and typhoon forecasting services. A Typhoon Committee was set up by ECAFE and the World Meteorological Organization (WMO) in 1968 to help in the task of minimizing the damage caused by typhoons and associated floods in the region, which cost an estimated U.S. $600 million a year. Possibilities for launching a similar ECAFE/WMO project designed to lessen damage caused by cyclones in the Bay of Bengal area are being investigated. Under the auspices of ECAFE's Water Resources Consulting Group, organized in 1967, groups of experts from donor countries have provided advisory services relating to water conservation and development.

Mineral Resources: Steps are being taken towards a regional mineral resources development centre, and a tin industry development and research centre.

Agriculture: Economic problems of agriculture, and agricultural aspects of economic programmes that are of interest to both ECAFE and the Food and Agriculture Organization, are dealt with by a Joint ECAFE/FAO Agriculture Division. Activities include studies in these fields, meetings of expert groups, and advisory aid to governments.

Citing the important role of agriculture in most of Asia's developing countries, the Commission in 1973 called for intensified work in this field and urged support for an ECAFE-fostered agreement for an Asian Rice Trade Fund, which received first signatures at the annual session.

Transport and Communications: As part of its efforts to help member countries expand and modernize travel and transport facilities, ECAFE is seeking a Trans-Asian Rail Network to provide greater uniformity of services in Asia and permit links with Europe and Africa. The network proposed, from Istanbul to Singapore, would total about 14,000 km. In addition, ECAFE is working on highway transport problems and co-operates with the Asian Highway Transport Technical Bureau (see below). Other activities relate to inland water transport; maritime and coastal shipping and ports; containerization and inter-modal transport; urban traffic problems; ways of expanding tourism; and the easing of restrictions on international travel and traffic. ECAFE's Port Information Advisory Centre offers technical assistance with port-facilities problems. A joint unit of ECAFE and the International Telecommunication Union (ITU) is stressing efforts to improve telecommunication services in the region, upgrade technological training, and lay the groundwork for the introduction of satellite communications in the area.

With the support of UNDP an ITU team, co-operating with twelve ECAFE countries has completed surveys of existing systems, routes and operating methods as the basis for an Asian regional telecommunications network. In co-operation with the Universal Postal Union (UPU), ECAFE is also making efforts to improve regional postal services.

Statistics: As a basic activity, the ECAFE secretariat publishes the Statistical Yearbook for Asia and the Far East, the Quarterly Bulletin of Statistics, Statistical Indicators of ECAFE Countries, and Foreign Trade Statistics for Asia and the Far East. Other activities include compilation of statistics in specific fields, aid to governments through advisory services, and servicing of the Conference of Asian Statisticians and its subsidiary bodies. Under the aegis of ECAFE, the Asian Statistical Institute for training and research was opened in Tokyo in 1970 as an undertaking of governments in the region and the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP).

Population: The ECAFE Population Division assists Governments in developing population policy, in strengthening national population and family planning programmes, and in organizing training courses for personnel engaged in these activities. It also carries out research; renders advisory services; organizes conferences, seminars, workshops and other meetings in various population fields; and collects, disseminates and encourages exchanges of information on population programmes, data and studies.

In 1973 ECAFE worked to give effect to recommendations of the Second Asian Population Conference, held in Tokyo in late 1972, which called for intensive, innovative action to solve urgent population problems in the region as an integral part of overall economic and social development.

Social Development: ECAFE seeks to promote unified development—social and economic—with special efforts designed to aid in the eradication of mass poverty, to ensure social justice together with economic growth, and to widen public participation in and benefit from development programmes. Among other activities, ECAFE assists Governments, at their request, with development planning, programming of community social services, training for community development and social work, and activities intended to enhance the role of women and youth in development. One project in 1973 provided for a mobile training course for personnel of the least developed and land-locked countries.

THE UNITED NATIONS—(REGIONAL ECONOMIC COMMISSIONS)

Public Administration: In this field ECAFE seeks to increase the organizational and administrative capability of Governments, through studies, "training of trainers", and provision of advisory services on request from countries of the region. Its newly established Asian Centre for Development Administration, in Kuala Lumpur, undertakes training programmes for high-level administrators and managers, problem-orientated studies and research, systematic dissemination of information on contemporary issues, and consultancy services.

Technical Assistance: In many of the individual subject fields cited above, technical assistance activities are undertaken by ECAFE with funds from the regular United Nations budget and from the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP), which is financed with voluntary contributions, as well as from ECAFE Governments on an extra-budgetary basis. These activities include seminars, advisory services, training aid, and fellowships for advanced studies within the ECAFE region.

BUDGET AND STAFF

For 1973 ECAFE's regular annual budget totalled about U.S. $7.5 million, including funds for the 1973 share of costs for new building construction. ECAFE's budget (which forms part of the regular budget of the United Nations in the economic and social field) was supplemented by technical assistance funds, as well as certain funds from governments and institutions.

In 1973 the work of ECAFE proper was carried out by a staff of 161 professionals and 290 general-service employees whose posts were financed from the regular budget, plus 20 regional advisers and supporting staff members paid from technical assistance sources. Other staff members serve in the Mekong Office, the Asian Institute for Economic Development and Planning, the Asian Highway Transport Technical Bureau, and the offshore prospecting project for East Asia (which have separate budgets). Overall, the 1973 list totals about 700.

MAJOR REGIONAL PROJECTS

MEKONG DEVELOPMENT PROJECT

The Mekong Project seeks to develop the water resources of the Lower Mekong Basin, including mainstream and tributaries, in terms of hydroelectric power, irrigation, flood control, drainage, navigation improvement, watershed management, water supply and related benefits. The project is directed by the Committee for the Co-ordination of Investigations of the Lower Mekong Basin consisting of the Khmer Republic, Laos, the Republic of Viet-Nam and Thailand, which operates under the auspices of ECAFE and the UNDP. Its work has been supported by 25 governments outside the region, a total of 16 United Nations agencies or bodies, and a number of foundations and business firms. (Further information on the Mekong Project appears in a separate chapter below.)

ASIAN HIGHWAY

The Asian Highway Project, approved by ECAFE in 1959, calls for a network of 64,363 km. in 15 countries. During the first United Nations Development Decade, ending in 1970, efforts were concentrated on establishing at least one through route from west to east, with connections to all other countries not served by that route. Route A-1, from Iran to the Republic of Viet-Nam (10,800 km.), considered one of the most important routes, is now 95 per cent complete (above minimum Asian Highway Standard). As for the entire network, more than four-fifths is now motorable in all weather.

To demonstrate the availability of the various sections of the Asian Highway to trade and tourist traffic, the first Asian Highway motor rally, from Vientiane to Singapore, was organized in April 1969. A second rally for the western section of the highway between Teheran (Iran) and Dacca (Bangladesh), was held in November 1970.

Work on the project is guided by the Asian Highway Co-ordinating Committee, composed of representatives at ministerial level from member countries, which held its first meeting in April 1965. An Asian Highway Transport Technical Bureau, based with ECAFE and aided by the UNDP and member countries, seeks to carry out recommendations of the Co-ordinating Committee.

ASIAN INSTITUTE FOR ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT AND PLANNING

The Asian Institute for Economic Development and Planning, established in 1964, provides training, on a regional basis, for government officials engaged in economic and social development programmes in Asia.

The Institute has trained some 2,000 participants from 25 countries in the ECAFE region, either in Bangkok or in "country courses" elsewhere. Besides undertaking research in support of its training programmes, the Institute provides the secretariat for the Association of Research and Training Institutes in Asia.

The Institute works as an autonomous institution under the aegis of ECAFE with support from the UNDP and participating governments, and with the co-operation of several United Nations specialized agencies, other international organizations and foundations. The management is vested in a Governing Council of which the Executive Secretary of ECAFE is Chairman ex-officio.

ORGANIZATION

The Commission normally meets every two years in one of the Latin American capitals. The Commission has established two permanent bodies with various sub-committees:

Central American Economic Co-operation Committee:

Central American Trade Sub-Committee.

Central American Sub-Committee on Statistical Co-ordination.

Central American Sub-Committee on Transport.

Central American Sub-Committee on Housing, Building and Planning.

Central American Sub-Committee on Electric Power.

Central American Commission for Industrial Initiatives.

Central American Sub-Committee on Agricultural Development.

Trade Committee.

Executive Secretary: ENRIQUE V. IGLESIAS (Uruguay).

Secretariat: Santiago de Chile; branch offices at Mexico City, Rio de Janeiro, Montevideo, Washington, D.C., Port-of-Spain and Bogotá. The Secretariat is organized into divisions of economic development and research, trade policy, industrial development, social development, agriculture (jointly with FAO), statistics, natural resources and environment, transport and economic projections.

LATIN AMERICAN INSTITUTE FOR ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL PLANNING

Santiago, Chile

The Institute was founded by ECLA in June 1962, with financial assistance from the United Nations Special Fund, the Inter-American Development Bank and sixteen Latin American governments, and with the co-operation of OAS, ILO, UNICEF, Resources for the Future, and other international bodies. It operates as an autonomous body under the aegis of ECLA to provide training and advisory services on request to member countries and to undertake research in planning techniques.

Acting Director-General: ENRIQUE V. IGLESIAS (Uruguay).

ACTIVITIES

ECLA's present role is set within the framework of the programme for the Second United Nations Development Decade and its activities are directed to providing support to the regional and sub-regional integration movement which is an established feature of Latin American economic development. ECLA's programme, set by the member governments at the 15th session of the Commission (Quito, Ecuador, March 1973), focuses on: development policy with the Secretariat undertaking a theoretical analysis of economic problems and formulating policy proposals for economic development; foreign trade and external financing, particularly in view of the region's inadequate share in the growth of world trade and the low level and unfavourable terms of capital inflows; integration, including continental and sub-regional groupings; employment; population in relation to economic and social factors; the export of manufactures, particularly in relation to regional development policies; policies for reducing regional imbalances within ECLA countries in order to achieve integrated and speedier development; and science and technology, mainly with regard to the transfer of expertise, the assimilation of techniques and the development of Latin America. Finally, there is the Economic Survey of Latin America, an annual stocktaking of the progress and problems in all sectors of the Latin American economy and of the economic evolution of selected countries.

BUDGET

ECLA's budget for the biennium 1974-75 is U.S. $12,677,000.

THE UNITED NATIONS—(REGIONAL ECONOMIC COMMISSIONS)

ECONOMIC COMMISSION FOR AFRICA—ECA

Africa Hall, P.O. Box 3001, Addis Ababa, Ethiopia

Telephone: 447200,

Initiates and takes part in measures for facilitating Africa's economic development. Member countries must be independent, be members of the UN and within the geographical scope of the African continent and the islands bordering it. ECA was founded in 1958 by a resolution of ECOSOC as the fourth UN regional economic commission.

ASSOCIATE MEMBERS

(a) Non-Self-Governing Territories situated within the geographical scope of the Commission.

(b) Powers other than Portugal responsible for the international relations of those territories (France, Spain and the United Kingdom).

Associate Members may take part in the Commission's activities but may not vote.

ORGANIZATION

COMMISSION

Executive Secretary: ROBERT K. A. GARDINER (Ghana).

The Commission has held eleven sessions since its inception:

1958	December	Addis Ababa
1960	January	Addis Ababa
1961	February	Tangier
1962	February	Addis Ababa

1963	February	Léopoldville
1964	February	Addis Ababa
1965	February	Nairobi
1967	February	Lagos
1969	February	Addis Ababa
1971	February	Tunis
1973	February	Accra

Sub-Regional Offices: Lusaka, Niamey, Tangier, Kinshasa.

ACTIVITIES

Objectives. The work of the Commission is determined by decisions of its plenary sessions. The Commission is charged with the responsibility for promoting and facilitating concerted action for the economic and social development of Africa; for maintaining and strengthening the economic relations of African countries, both among themselves and with other countries of the world; for undertaking or sponsoring investigations, research and studies of economic and technological problems and developments; for collecting, evaluating and disseminating economic, technological and statistical information; and for assisting in the formulation and development of co-ordinated policies promoting economic and technological development in the region.

Areas of Activity. The ECA carries out its activities under the divisions of:

Trade, Fiscal and Monetary Affairs
Natural Resources

Transport and Communications
Industry and Housing
Statistics
Human Resources Development
ECA/FAO Joint Agriculture
Economic Research and Planning

There is also a Technical Assistance and Programme Co-ordination Section, a Population Programme Centre, dealing with population programmes and policies, together with general demography, a Centre for Economic Co-operation, and the African Trade Centre.

At the request of member states in the region the Commission also performs advisory services in various economic and social fields. Some of the main features of activities in these areas in 1972-73 are outlined below. Only a few of the many conferences, seminars and courses in all fields in which ECA participated with other organizations are mentioned.

Operations in 1972-73.

Trade, Fiscal and Monetary Affairs: During 1972-73, projects undertaken included: 28 trade promotion advisory missions; a symposium on intra-African trade; the First All-Africa Trade Fair, in Nairobi, February and March 1972; market research studies, training courses in export marketing and promotion; the establishment of an Association of African Trade Promotion Organizations (operational in 1974); a pilot project for an export credit scheme in Nigeria and Kenya; the establishment of a trade information and documentation unit; and bilateral trade consultations between 32 African countries, in Accra in February 1973.

In the fiscal field, advisory missions were undertaken in Lesotho, Liberia, Sudan and Egypt. A three-week training course on taxation was held in Addis Ababa, October 1973.

Continuing its responsibility for the secretariat of the Association of African Central Banks the ECA also organized the Association's meetings, at which the reform of the international monetary system provided a large part of the subject matter.

Natural Resources: Advisory services were provided by the Commission on the development of mineral resources in Africa. An inventory of mineral resources was begun and preparations made to establish mineral resources development centres in East Africa, as well as plans for a mineral resources institute in West Africa.

A conference on manpower for the petroleum industry was held in Tripoli on January 2nd-12th, 1974.

The ECA has been made the executing agency for the Liptako-Gourma Authority, an integrated development project in Mali, Niger and Upper Volta.

A master plan was started for development of hydrological resources; and plans were recommended for a water resources institute in Tanzania.

Studies have been made on all types of environmental problems.

New courses have been started at the Regional Centre for Training in Aerial Surveys at Ile-Ife, Nigeria; and an African Association of Cartographers is planned.

ECA performs a central function in co-ordinating progress towards setting up institutions for technological planning, including national committees for implementation of the World Plan of Action for the application of science and technology to development.

Transport: Institutions recently established: West/Central African Ports Management Committee; East African Ports Management Committee; Union of African Railways. The Trans-African Highway from Mombasa to Lagos has now moved into the feasibility study stage and the routing of the Highway has been agreed.

Industry: In co-operation with UNIDO and other bodies, the programme for industrial training included a Regional Workshop for Industrial Administrators in Addis Ababa, and various Seminars on information, industrial development and project evaluation.

New publication: Investment Promotion Newsletter; first appeared June 1973.

Statistics: Statistical advisory work, done chiefly in connection with the African Census Programme, is financed by the UN Fund for Population Activities; since 1973 this has been organized by a separate unit in the ECA secretariat.

The training programme in statistics continued in Morocco, Uganda and Cameroon, and a new one is being established in the University of Botswana, Lesotho and Swaziland. One of the main continuing tasks was assistance to African countries in developing comprehensive and balanced statistical programmes by applying the revised UN system of National Accounts.

Social Development: The Voluntary Agencies Bureau (VAB) of ECA continued to give assistance to international voluntary agencies in pre-investment studies, development field management and evaluation of selected projects. A series of sub-regional workshops, on the organization of development in the rural sector, began with the Workshop for English-Speaking Member States at Khartoum in November and December 1973.

New publication: Directory of Activities of the International Voluntary Agencies in Rural Development in Africa.

Under its Development Education Programme the VAB continued to promote awareness among rural populations of new projects. The last programme was on Fish Farming, broadcast in June 1973.

Other activities include pre-vocational and vocational training, a training programme for trainers in home economics, the appraisal for Gabon of a rural development project in the N'Gounie region, and a Training Seminar for Senior African Rural Development Personnel at Holte, Denmark, in June 1973.

ECA/FAO Joint Agriculture: Increased attention was given to: agricultural and livestock production; improved technology; specialization and co-operation; expansion of intra-African agricultural trade; rehabilitation of the Sudano-Sahelian area.

Phase II of the sub-project "Intra-Regional Co-operation and Trade in the Field of Agriculture" is now in the pilot study stage.

A mission made a livestock study of seven African countries, and it is hoped that a similar study can be made in West African Countries.

Economic Research and Planning: The chief activity in this sphere was the monitoring of progress in implementing the International Development Strategy and Africa's Strategy for Development in the 1970s. The fourth session of the Conference of African Planners took place in Addis Ababa in October 1972, and these strategies were a primary consideration. The first biennial regional report on the implementation of the strategies was made, and submitted to the Second Conference of Ministers of ECA in Accra, Ghana in February 1973.

Recent publications: Survey of Economic Conditions in Africa, 1970, Part II, and 1971, Part I.

Technical Assistance Programme: As in the past, advisory services were provided: a total of 51 posts for Regional Advisers were financed by the UN, UNIDO and UNFPA, with contributions totalling U.S. $1,839,400. Under the Regional Technical Assistance Programmes of UNDP, UNFPA, UNIDO and UNCTAD, U.S. $706,291 was provided for other projects, including seminars and training courses.

THE UNITED NATIONS—(REGIONAL ECONOMIC COMMISSIONS)

Population Programme Centre: Studies were completed or continued on numerous matters of population and social development.

Recent publications: African Population Newsletter; African Population Studies, Series I.

Advisory services were provided for African countries in demographic analysis, projections and training, as well as in other activities connected with the African Census Programme.

The Population Programme Centre also participated in the ILO-sponsored Workers' and Employers' Seminars on Population, and contributed to the arrangements for the Third World Conference and the World Population Year.

Economic Co-operation: Policies of economic co-operation form an essential part of development strategy, and have been particularly important in the case of the special needs of the least developed countries. ECA has collaborated with OAU and the ADB in considering methods for arranging economic co-operation throughout Africa.

To the UN Multinational Inter-disciplinary Development Advisory Team (UNDAT) in Yaoundé, Cameroon, two more UNDATs have been added which operate in west, eastern and southern Africa. These have reinforced technical assistance, particularly to countries affected by the Sudano-Sahelian drought.

Institutional Machinery. As a result of recommendations made at ECA's ninth session the following institutional machinery was set up:

(a) Conference of Ministers which is vested with full powers to consider matters of general policy and the priorities to be assigned to the programme and other activities of the Commission. It reviews programme implementation and examines and approves the proposed programme of work, and considers reports submitted to it by the Executive Committee and the Technical Committee of Experts. The Conference of Ministers holds its meetings every two years. The first meeting was held in Tunis in February 1971; the second was held in Accra early in 1973 and the third will be held in Nairobi in 1975.

(b) Technical Committee of Experts which meets once a year. It is composed of senior officials of member states concerned with economic affairs, and it examines studies prepared by the ECA Secretariat and assists in the formulation of the work programme aimed at ensuring co-operation between the Secretariat and member governments. It held its fifth meeting in Addis Ababa in September 1973.

(c) Executive Committee which is composed of representatives of 16 member states and which assists the Executive Secretary in the implementation of the resolutions and the work programme of the Commission, and provides links between the Secretariat, member states and the sub-regions. The Executive Committee meets at least twice a year. Its tenth meeting was held in November 1973.

Subsidiary Bodies. The Commission is empowered, under its terms of reference, to establish subsidiary bodies. Those now in existence and actively functioning are the Conference of African Statisticians, the Conference of African Planners and the Conference of African Demographers, each of which meets once every two years.

Relations with Other Organizations: WHO maintains a liaison office at ECA. In co-operation with ITU work has begun on a pan-African telecommunications system. ECA also runs a Joint Agricultural Division in conjunction with FAO.

Co-operation between ECA and the Organization of African Unity started with the signing of a UN/OAU agreement by the then Secretary-General of the United Nations, U Thant, and the then Secretary-General of the OAU, Diallo Telli, on November 15th, 1965. An ECA/OAU/UNESCO Inter-Secretariat Meeting was held in September 1972, and the eighth ECA/OAU Joint Meeting on Trade and Development was held in Geneva during August 1973.

In 1973 ECA and UNIDO reached agreement in principle on the establishment of a Joint Industry Division. ECA, OAU and UNIDO co-sponsored the conference of Ministers of Industry held in October 1973.

INTERNATIONAL BANK FOR RECONSTRUCTION AND DEVELOPMENT—IBRD (WORLD BANK)

1818 H Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20433, U.S.A.

Telephone: EXecutive 3-6360.

The World Bank was established on December 27th, 1945. It aims to assist the economic development of member nations by making loans, in cases where private capital is not available on reasonable terms, to finance productive investments. Loans are made either direct to governments, or to private enterprise with the guarantee of their governments.

MEMBERSHIP

(see Table on pages 28-30)

ORGANIZATION

The World Bank has five Regional Offices at its Headquarters in Washington, each headed by a Vice-President reporting to a Senior Vice-President, Operations. In addition to the five Regional Offices, a reorganization in 1972 established the position of Vice-President, Projects Staff, who also reports to the Senior Vice-President, Operations. The Vice-President, Projects Staff is responsible for providing functional guidance and assistance to the Regional Offices. His staff consists of: selected experts to provide the support necessary to assure uniform sectoral policies throughout the Regional Offices; certain specialists who cannot be practically allocated to single region and project units like Population, Tourism, Urbanization and Industry.

President and Chairman of Executive Directors: ROBERT S. McNAMARA.

BOARD OF GOVERNORS

All powers of the Bank are vested in a Board of Governors, consisting of one Governor appointed by each member nation. This Board normally meets once a year.

EXECUTIVE DIRECTORS

The Board of Governors has delegated most of its powers to twenty Executive Directors, who meet as often as required and approve all loans. The Executive Directors are responsible for matters of policy.

AID CO-ORDINATING GROUPS

The World Bank supports consortia, consultative groups and other aid co-ordination bodies for the co-ordination of development assistance to a number of countries. During fiscal 1973 there were formal meetings of ten of the co-ordinating groups over which the Bank presides. These were the groups for Colombia, East Africa (Tanzania), India, Republic of Korea, Pakistan, Peru, Philippines, Sri Lanka, Thailand and Tunisia. In addition, the Bank provided staff support for the two meetings of the Inter-Governmental Group for Indonesia (Chairman: Netherlands), and for the OECD-sponsored Consortium for Turkey. The Bank was represented at a meeting of governments interested in providing development assistance to Bangladesh, convened by the Government of Bangladesh.

Attention was directed during fiscal 1973, particularly by the Development Assistance Committee (DAC) of the OECD, to the co-ordination of aid for the 25 countries designated as "least developed" by the United Nations General Assembly.

FINANCIAL STRUCTURE

The Bank's capital is derived from members' subscriptions to capital shares, and the amount of each subscription is based on relative economic resources. On June 30th, 1973, the total subscribed capital of the Bank was $30,397 million. Of this amount, however, only the sum of about $3,040 million had been paid in, partly in gold or dollars and partly in local currencies. The remainder is subject to call if required to meet the Bank's obligations. Most of the Bank's lendable funds come from its borrowing in world capital markets. As of June 30th, 1973, the Bank's outstanding debt was $8,868 million. The Bank also replenishes its funds through the sale of portions of its loans. These sales, the most part without the Bank guarantee, totalled $2,500 million by June 30th, 1973.

ACTIVITIES

The World Bank approved development loans totalling $2,051 million during the year ended June 30th, 1973. The figure was higher than any previous year. Together with its affiliates, the International Development Association (IDA) and the International Finance Corporation (IFC), the Bank gave greater attention in this year to the need to improve the quality of life by spreading the benefits of development more widely, with particular emphasis on the poorest among countries and peoples.

World Bank group operations play a marginal though vital role in the global development effort. During the year, the World Bank made 73 loans to 42 countries.

The Bank's operations were supported by a near record level of gross borrowings, which totalled $1,723 million during the year. The single largest source of funds was Japan, which provided 35 per cent of the total. The next largest was Germany, with 22 per cent. The Bank continued its search for new sources of capital for development, and made its first bond issue of $L 75 million in Lebanon. The Bank's net income in fiscal 1973 was $186 million, or $3 million more than in the previous year.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT ASSOCIATION—IDA

1818 H Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20433, U.S.A.

Telephone: EXecutive 3-6360.

The International Development Association began operations in November 1960. Affiliated to the World Bank, IDA advances capital on more flexible terms to underdeveloped countries.

ORGANIZATION

President and Chairman of Executive Directors: Chairman of the World Bank (ex-officio).

Officers and staff of the World Bank serve concurrently as officers and staff of IDA.

FINANCE

IDA'S initial resources were derived from members' subscriptions: the richer nations pay in gold or freely convertible currencies; the less-developed nations pay 10 per cent in the above form and 90 per cent in their own currencies. By June 30th, 1973, IDA's initial subscriptions totalled $1,061.4 million. (All references to subscriptions and contributions are expressed in the U.S. dollar of 1960, unless otherwise indicated.)

The World Bank's ability to assist the poorest of its members depends heavily on the funds made available to IDA which gives credits to member countries on highly concessionary terms. The resources of IDA are replenished periodically by contributions from the more affluent countries.

IDA is authorized to accept supplementary contributions and is required to maintain a regular review of the adequacy of its resources. In 1964, formalities were completed for the first general replenishment of IDA's funds. The eighteen Part I countries—Australia, Austria, Belgium, Canada, Denmark, Finland, France, Germany, Italy, Japan, Kuwait, Luxembourg, the Netherlands, Norway, South Africa, Sweden, the United Kingdom and the United States—agreed to provide supplementary resources of almost $750 million.

On July 23rd, 1969, the second general replenishment of IDA's resources came into force. Contributions amounted to $1,200 million equivalent, payable in three annual instalments of $400 million each. This included a loan from Switzerland, a non-member.

The third general replenishment, of September 22nd, 1973, provided for expansion by $2,442 million equivalent, payable in three annual instalments. The 19 part I countries (now including Iceland) and three part II countries contributed, and the Swiss Confederation made a second loan. As at June 30th, 1973, all of the above had ratified the agreement except one part I country, whose proposed participation is $96.72 million equivalent.

It is expected that all these resources will be fully committed by June 30th, 1974. In September 1973, twenty-four members of IDA and Switzerland recommended a fourth replenishment amounting to the equivalent of U.S. $4,500 million (current), and the arrangements on which they agreed have been submitted to the Association. It is generally understood that no commitment to contribute by any member will be made until approval, where necessary, has been obtained from its legislature.

ACTIVITIES

Principles similar to those of the Bank are followed by IDA in appraising projects, in negotiating its credits and in requirements for procurement, disbursement of funds and reports on the progress of constructions. However, the favourable terms upon which IDA lends make it possible to extend credits to countries which, for balance of payments reasons, could not prudently assume the burden of repayment required for Bank loans.

By June 30th, 1973, IDA had extended 439 credits totalling $5,719.2 million to 66 member countries.

FUNCTIONS

1. In association with private investors, invests without government guarantee in productive private enterprises of economic priority in member countries where sufficient private capital is not available on reasonable terms.
2. Stimulates the international flow of private capital to developing countries.
3. Encourages the development of local capital markets.
4. Invests in and gives technical help to development finance companies, and assists other institutions which also support economic development and follow policies generally consistent with those of IFC.

5. Commits limited amounts of funds for promotional purposes, to help bring development enterprises into being.

6. Revolves its portfolio by sales of its investments to other investors.

FISCAL 1973 OPERATIONS

Twenty-eight investments in 18 countries were made by IFC during fiscal 1973 for a total of $146.7 million. Concurrently with IFC others invested $274.6 million in the same enterprises. Taking into account $59.4 million to be financed by cash generation, the total cost of these projects was $480.7 million.

During the year IFC for the first time made investments in Afghanistan, Bolivia and Cyprus. In Africa the Corporation invested in projects in Ethiopia, Kenya, Nigeria, Tunisia and Zambia. In Latin America investments were made in Brazil, Colombia, Ecuador, Mexico and Venezuela. Other commitments were made in Indonesia and the Philippines, in Asia, and in Iran in the Middle East. In Europe projects were supported in Yugoslavia, Spain, Greece and Turkey.

Of the total of IFC's commitments during the year, $30.4 million was invested in mining, $25.4 million in development financing institutions, $19.5 million in cement and other construction materials, $16.5 million in tourism, $13.6 million in pulp and paper products, $11.0 million in motor vehicles and accessories, $9.0 million in iron and steel, $5.7 million in chemical and petrochemical products, $5.3 million in money and capital markets projects, $4.4 million in general manufacturing, $4.2 million in food and food processing, and $1.7 million in textiles and fibres.

Of these investments $80.2 million was for the expansion of production in 13 existing concerns and $64.1 million for the establishment of 13 new enterprises.

IFC's operations in fiscal 1973 brought the cumulative total of the Corporation's investments to $848.1 million in 203 enterprises in 51 developing countries, in which others had concurrently invested approximately $3,372 million.

Of these total IFC investments, $334 million (39 per cent) had been made in Latin America and the Caribbean, $232.2 million (29 per cent) in Asia, $145 million (17 per cent) in Africa and the Middle East, and $135.9 million (14 per cent) in Europe.

INTERNATIONAL MONETARY FUND—IMF

19th and H Streets, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20431, U.S.A.

Telephone: EXecutive 3-6362.

The IMF was established at the same time as the World Bank in December 1945, to facilitate the expansion and growth of international trade, to promote exchange stability, to maintain orderly exchange arrangements among members, to avoid competitive exchange depreciation and to give confidence to members by making its resources available to them under adequate safeguards, which helps members to meet temporary payments difficulties. The Fund supplements, as and when needed, the existing reserve assets of members participating in the Special Drawing Account, which was established to handle all operations and transactions pertaining to special drawing rights (SDRs), a new reserve instrument created by the Fund (see below). The institution also furnishes, on request, expert technicians to advise and assist members in their financial and monetary problems, and affords continuous and full consultation on monetary and exchange matters.

BOARD OF GOVERNORS

The highest authority of the Fund is exercised by the Board of Governors, on which each member country is represented by a Governor and an Alternate Governor. Normally the Board of Governors meets once a year, but the Governors may take votes by mail or other means between annual meetings. The Board of Governors has delegated many of its powers to the Executive Directors. However, the conditions governing the admission of new members, adjustment of quotas, election of Executive Directors, as well as certain other important powers remain the sole responsibility of the Board of Governors. The voting power of each member in the Board of Governors is related to its quota in the Fund (see below).

BOARD OF EXECUTIVE DIRECTORS

The twenty-member Board of Executive Directors, responsible for the day-to-day operations of the Fund, is in continuous session in Washington, under the chairmanship of the Fund's Managing Director. At present, five members (U.S., U.K., Germany, France and Japan) each appoint one Executive Director, and the fifteen remaining Executive Directors are elected by groups of member countries with similar interests. As in the Board of Governors, the voting power of each member is related to its quota in the Fund, but in practice the Executive Directors operate by consensus.

The Managing Director of the Fund serves as head of its staff, which is organized into functional and area departments. As at October 31st, 1973, the Fund staff numbered 1,346 persons of 86 nationalities.

FINANCIAL STRUCTURE AND DRAWING ARRANGEMENTS

Quotas. Each member is assigned a quota related to its national income, monetary reserves, trade balance and other economic indicators. A member's subscription is equal to its quota and is payable partly in gold (as a rule 25 per cent) and partly in its own currency. The quota approximately determines a member's voting power, the amount of foreign exchange it may purchase from the Fund, and its allocation of special drawing rights (SDRs) if the member is a participant in the Fund's Special Drawing Account.

The original quotas totalled some $9 thousand million, but general reviews of the adequacy of members' quotas conducted in 1958, 1965 and 1970 resulted in substantial increases, and on October 31st, 1973, total quotas stood at SDR29.2 thousand million.

Drawing Arrangements. Exchange transactions within the Fund take the form of members' purchases (i.e. drawings) from the Fund of the currencies of other members for the equivalent amounts of their own currencies. Fund resources are available to eligible members on an essentially short-term and revolving basis to provide members with temporary assistance to contribute to the solution of their payments problems. A member's entitlement to draw is determined after consideration of its circumstances and its likely ability, with the help of Fund resources, to overcome its problems within a short time.

Drawings are limited by provisions governing both the rate of increase and the total amount of the Fund's holdings of a member's currency expressed as a percentage of its quota. Gold-tranche purchases (i.e. purchases that do not bring the Fund's holdings of the member's currency to a level above its quota) can be made essentially automatically.

A member's purchases of currency from the Fund must be repaid by repurchases or by the purchase of that member's currency by another member. As a general rule members undertake to repay within a period not exceeding 3 to 5 years. Repurchases are made in gold, in SDRs or in the currencies of those members whose currencies are convertible and held by the Fund in amounts below 75 per cent of the members' quotas.

Drawings on the Fund are subject to certain charges that rise with the amount of foreign exchange involved and the length of time it remains outstanding.

By October 31st, 1973, 91 countries had drawn from the Fund's resources the equivalent of SDR 25,294.1 million in 24 currencies since transactions commenced in March 1947. Total repurchases from the beginning of Fund operations stood at SDR 15,936.6 million and net or outstanding drawings at SDR 3,525.2 million.

The main devices for assisting members in temporary difficulties are examined below.

General Arrangements to Borrow. An agreement was approved by the Fund in 1962, extended in 1965 until 1970, and again extended until 1975, whereby ten industrial members, the Group of Ten, undertook to lend the Fund up to $6 thousand million in their own currencies, should this be necessary to forestall or cope with an impairment of the international monetary situation. These General Arrangements to Borrow (GAB) may be used by any member, subject to the approval of the Group of Ten, and were used to help finance large drawings made in 1964, 1965, 1968, 1969 and 1970. By August 1971 all such borrowings had been repaid in full to the Fund.

Stand-by Arrangements. Members may enter into Stand-by Arrangements (introduced in 1954) with the Fund to ensure that drawings up to specified limits may be made within an agreed period provided the conditions of the arrangement are observed. By enabling members to negotiate credit in advance of actual needs, stand-by arrangements have become a valuable instrument in forestalling speculative attacks which would exacerbate or increase impending difficulties.

Special Drawing Rights. Facilities for the expansion of international reserves were created in January 1970 with the introduction of SDRs which have become established as usable and acceptable reserve assets and as a substitute for gold in international payments. The value of SDRs to a participant in the Special Drawing Account rests basically on the obligation of other participants to accept them from him up to a prescribed ceiling in exchange for convertible currency. Participants are allocated SDRs in proportion to their IMF quotas and may use them bilaterally, in agreement with other participants, to buy back from them equivalent amounts of their own currencies; or to obtain convertible currency from participants designated by the Fund. A participant may use SDRs in these ways when it has a balance of payments need or in the light of adverse developments in its total reserves; but it may make repurchases of its currency from, or pay charges to, the Fund without being subject to the requirement of need.

Reconstitution provisions—a participant's average holdings of SDRs must not fall below a given proportion of the average of its net cumulative allocation in a given period—are designed to preclude the possibility of excessive reliance on SDRs to finance large or persistent balance of payments deficits.

Compensatory Financing of Export Fluctuations. Under this scheme, a primary-producing member which experiences a fall in export revenue—generally as a result of adverse movements in the world price of a commodity upon which it is heavily dependent—may make drawings which are excluded from the calculation of its gold-tranche position.

Buffer Stock Financing Facility. Established in 1969, this facility permits members to make drawings in connection with the financing of international buffer stocks of primary products.

At the end of October 1973, the Fund's assets included SDR 5,366.4 million in gold, SDR 505.4 million in SDRs, SDR 179.0 million in subscriptions receivable and SDR 23,878.3 million in various national currencies, and SDR 14.7 million in other assets.

ACTIVITIES DURING 1973

Reform of the International Monetary System

The important work on the reform of the international monetary system continued to be a major emphasis for Fund activities during 1973. A new time-table setting a deadline of July 31st, 1974, for developing recommendations for a reform of the international monetary system was announced at the Fund's annual meeting, held in Nairobi, Kenya, from September 24th to 28th.

The new date for the reform was set by the Committee of 20 (formally the Committee on Reform of the International System and Related Issues) at its session the day before the annual meeting opened. The First Draft Outline of the Reform, which was drafted by the Deputies of the Committee of 20 and presented to the meeting by Dr. Ali Wardhana, the Chairman of the Committee, spelled out the areas of the reform on which agreement had been reached. The time-table also provided for a further Committee of 20 ministerial meeting, to be held in Rome on January 17th and 18th, 1974, preceded by a meeting of the Deputies of the Committee on January 14th and 15th; also, the Draft Outline made provisions for four technical working groups to be set up, which would tackle specific areas of the reform.

In addition to the meeting held in Nairobi before the annual meeting, the Committee of 20 held two other meetings in Washington during March and July. The Deputies of the Committee of 20, under the chairmanship of Mr. Jeremy Morse, met five times during the same period—in Washington in January, in Paris in March, in Washington in May and July, and again in Paris at the beginning of September.

Membership, Initial Par Values, Par Value Changes

The Bahamas became the 126th member of the Fund on August 21st, 1973, with a quota equivalent to SDR 20 million. Total quotas in the Fund are now equivalent to SDR 29,189.4 million.

During the first nine months of the year, changes in par value were carried out with the concurrence of the Fund, for the currencies of Jamaica, Yugoslavia, Uganda, Kenya, Tanzania, Thailand, Saudi Arabia and Australia. In addition initial par values for the Bahrain and Algerian dinars were established with the Fund. In October, following the decision of the President of the United States in February to ask Congress to authorize a reduction in the par value of the dollar, the Fund concurred in changes in par value for the currencies of the United States, El Salvador, Guatemala, Mexico, Liberia, Nicaragua, Honduras, Haiti and the Dominican Republic. In November the Fund concurred in a change in par value for the currency of Panama. An initial par value for the Bahamian dollar was established in December.

Bahrain and South Africa notified the Fund that they accepted the obligations of Article VIII of the Fund's Articles of Agreement, under which they agreed to avoid imposing restrictions on payments for current international transactions, or engaging in multiple exchange practices or discriminatory currency arrangements.

General Account

Drawings on the Fund's General Account during the first nine months of 1973 totalled SDR 348.2 million, while repurchases totalled SDR 358.8 million. Total drawings since the beginning of Fund operations reached SDR 25,904.1 million. Stand-by arrangements were in effect for 15 countries totalling SDR 350 million.

Special Drawing Account

In transactions between participants during the first nine months of 1973, Egypt, Germany, and the Netherlands used a total of SDR 136.4 million to obtain currency. During the same period, the Fund's General Account received SDR 21.0 million from 31 participants in payment of charges relating to their use of the Fund's resources. In addition, the General Account received SDR 10.2 million as interest on its SDR Holdings for the year ended April 30th, 1973 and SDR 0.7 million as reimbursement for the expenses of conducting the business of the Special Drawing Account.

The General Account transferred SDR 184.1 million to participants during the first three quarters of 1973. A total of SDR 163.2 million was acquired by 20 participants in order to promote reconstitution of their SDR Holdings and SDR 20.4 million was transferred to 26 participants which elected to receive SDRs in payment of remuneration on their net creditor positions in the General Account for the fiscal year ended April 30th, 1973.

The General Account's holdings of SDRs at September 30th, 1973 were SDR 513.1 million.

Major currency developments

On February 13th the Fund announced that it had been informed by the United States that the President was asking Congress to authorize a proposal for a 10 per cent reduction in the par value of the dollar from SDR 0.921053 to SDR 0.82848 (equivalent to $42.22 per fine ounce of gold). The Fund concurred in the change in the par value of the dollar on October 18th after Congressional action was completed.

Following the United States proposal to devalue the dollar, by March 1st the Fund received communications from 100 member countries advising it of changes in exchange rates, contemplated changes, or notifications that existing exchange practices would continue. On March 19th the Governments of six EEC members and Sweden and Norway announced that they had agreed to allow their currencies to float jointly against the dollar.

On November 13th the United States and six European countries announced that they had terminated the 1968 agreement which barred them from selling gold on the open market. They said that the termination of the agreement gave the international community a certain flexibility which was of importance at a time of floating exchange rates.

Editorial Note: With effect from January 21st, 1974, the French Government decided to leave the European common margins agreement—the "snake" established in March 1973—for six months. On the following day the Spanish Government decided that the peseta would also be allowed to "float".

FOOD AND AGRICULTURE ORGANIZATION—FAO

Viale delle Terme di Caracalla, Rome, Italy
Telephone: 5797.

FAO, the first specialized agency of the UN to be founded, was established in Quebec in October 1945. The Organization fights malnutrition and hunger and serves as an organizing and co-ordinating agency which brings together representatives of national governments, scientific bodies, non-governmental organizations, industry and banking to plan and carry out development programmes in the whole range of food and agriculture, including forestry and fisheries. It helps developing countries to promote educational and training facilities and institution-building.

CONFERENCE

The governing body is the FAO Conference of member nations. It meets every two years, formulates policy, determines the Organization's programme and budget on a biennial basis, and elects new members. Every four years it elects the Director-General.

COUNCIL

The FAO Council is composed of representatives of 42 member nations, elected by the Conference for staggered three-year terms. It is the interim governing body of FAO between sessions of the Conference. The most important standing Committees of the Council are: the Finance and Programme Committees, the Committee on Commodity Problems, the Committee on Fisheries, the Committee on Agriculture and the Committee on Forestry.

SECRETARIAT

Director-General (1968-75): A. H. BOERMA (Netherlands).

Deputy Director-General: ROY I. JACKSON (U.S.A.).

The Director-General appoints and directs a staff which at the end of October 1973 numbered 2,100 professional officers assigned to field projects in some 110 countries, 1,200 professional category officials at headquarters and 120 regional officers.

REGIONAL REPRESENTATIVES OF THE DIRECTOR-GENERAL

Regional Representative for Africa: M. C. MENSAH.

Regional Representative for the Far East: DIOSCORO L. UMALI.

Regional Representative for the Near East: M. A. NOUR.

Regional Representative for Europe: G. E. BILDESHEIM.

Regional Representative for Latin America: A. SAMPER.

ACTIVITIES

The 17th session of the FAO Conference, held in November 1973, approved three measures designed to promote the regularity, balance and security of world agricultural production and trade. The first was a proposal, later endorsed by the United Nations, to hold a World Food Conference under UN auspices in 1974 in Rome. The second was approval of the principles and objectives of a world food security policy encouraging nations to build up grain stocks as a "cushion" against food shortages. Thirdly, the FAO Conference agreed that a strategy be planned for International Agriculture Adjustment which, among other targets, would offer developing countries the opportunity to increase their share in world agricultural trade.

These measures were a response to world concern over the problems of adequate food supplies for a growing population. The world food situation in 1973 was the most difficult since the years immediately following the Second World War. Widespread unfavourable weather in 1972 had brought agricultural production down below even the indifferent performance of 1971; it was the first year since the war in which agricultural production dropped below the previous year's level. In late 1972, the effect of purchases by the U.S.S.R. and other countries making up deficiencies in their production reduced world wheat stocks to the lowest level in 20 years. Within a year, the price of wheat trebled. In addition, meat supplies were scarce and prices climbed steeply. Efforts to increase agricultural production by greater use of fertilizers were thwarted by scarce supplies. Fertilizer prices at the end of 1973 were double the levels of the 1960s.

World production of food and other agricultural products in 1972 was estimated to have fallen by 1 per cent below the 1971 level, according to FAO's annual review The State of Food and Agriculture 1973. The world population increased by about 75 million between 1971 and 1972. Per capita food production in the developing countries as a whole had fallen back to the 1961-65 level.

FAO's specialized committees enable governments to work out agreements on matters of common concern. The Committee on Commodity Problems, with its network of intergovernmental study groups and its widely accepted principles of surplus disposal, is helping to co-ordinate commodity policy. The Committee on Fisheries, the only global forum concerned with the development of fisheries, devises measures for more rational management of the world's fishery resources.

Field Programmes. During 1973, some $80 million allocated by the UN Development Programme (UNDP) were disbursed by FAO for about 500 large-scale and 650 small-scale projects in 110 countries and territories. The number of projects executed by the Organization and financed by donor countries under the FAO/Government Co-operative Programme rose to 149 for a total value of

THE UNITED NATIONS—(SPECIALIZED AGENCIES)

$36 million. The Associate Expert Scheme, financed by grants from donor countries totalling $6.4 million, enabled FAO to assign some 350 young experts to technical assistance activities.

FAO services to agricultural engineering, farm management and agro-industrial development ranged from participation in a $120 million project for control of river blindness in the Volta river basin to bulletins on the use of aircraft in agriculture and on the costing of farm mechanization systems. The number of large-scale FAO forestry projects financed by UNDP climbed from 11 in 1966 to 80 in 1973 with a budget of about $59 million spread over two to five years. FAO provided operational assistance to fishery development through 117 projects manned by some 200 international experts specializing in stock assessment, exploratory and experimental fishing, co-operatives, fishing harbour engineering, technology and marketing. Waterborne research was aided by FAO's fleet of 97 vessels.

Assistance in plant production and protection was directed towards improvement of grazing resources in arid areas, practical measures to secure seed improvement, expansion of food and industrial crops, and the war on plant diseases and pests.

Development of livestock industries and expansion of meat and dairy production were the object of applied research, training programmes, surveys, 204 field projects and more than 250 fellowships.

Better management of water resources was the aim of 139 field projects in 58 developing countries, seminars in Africa and Asia, and the preparation of soil maps.

Freedom from Hunger/Action for Development Campaign. This is an educational programme aimed at stimulating a wider and deeper understanding of the fundamental causes of under-development. The programme focuses upon participation of people in the development process.

The number of FFHC/AD field projects in 1973 totalled 157, of which more than 30 were new projects adopted by voluntary agencies in the course of the year. The new projects were assisted by donors' pledges amounting to $859,000 and local counterpart contributions of $709,000. Contributions for the whole year were expected to reach $2.8 million.

World Food Programme. Launched in 1963 under United Nations and FAO sponsorship the World Food Programme uses food supplies contributed by more than 100 countries as an investment in social and economic development and for emergency relief. During 1973 the Programme committed $101 million for 42 new development projects and the expansion of existing projects in 33 countries. Relief operations in 1973 included help to Ethiopia and Nicaragua and—on an unprecedented scale—to the drought-stricken Sudano-Sahelian zone of West Africa (Chad, Mali, Mauritania, Niger, Senegal, Upper Volta).

By the beginning of 1973, more than 12 million were benefiting from WFP aid. Almost one third of the programme's resources have gone to health and educational projects affecting nearly five million mothers, infants, school children and students.

Investment Centre. The FAO Investment Centre stimulates investment in the agriculture of developing countries through co-operative programmes with the World Bank, regional banks and other public and private financing agencies. By late 1973, the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development and its affiliate, the International Development Association, had approved loans and credits amounting to $217 million in 17 countries, for projects identified and prepared with FAO assistance. Emphasis was placed on the social aspects of development, such as integrated rural development, institutional reforms and agricultural education and training.

The recently established FAO/Bankers Programme, which facilitates contacts between international commercial banks from developed countries and national banks from developing countries, had a membership of 19 by the end of 1973.

Industry Cooperative Programme. This programme is financed by private industry and helps countries to develop projects which are likely to attract support from sectors of industry related to agriculture. A mission sent out by the Programme at the request of the Brazilian Government discussed the harmonization of potential resources with national plans for agricultural development of the Amazon region and for improvements in forestry and fisheries management. The protein food development group set up by the Programme to explore methods of overcoming malnutrition visited Nigeria and Sri Lanka. The Programme's Pesticide Working Group sponsored a seminar in Thailand on the safe and effective use of pesticides in agriculture.

New Commissions. Two new intergovernmental bodies were set up in 1973 under the FAO Constitution. The Commission on Fertilizers is responsible for monitoring the world situation with a view to ensuring adequate supplies of fertilizer, at reasonable prices, to developing countries. The Western Central Atlantic Fishery Commission serves the 21 member nations geographically concerned with the rational use of marine resources in the area.

GENERAL AGREEMENT ON TARIFFS AND TRADE—GATT

Villa le Bocage, Palais des Nations, Geneva, Switzerland

Telephone: 34 60 II, 31 02 II.

During the Second World War important trading countries discussed the establishment of international organizations to tackle the post-war problems of currency, investment and trade. Although the Charter for an International Trade Organization (ITO) was not completed until March 1948, a first tariff negotiating conference was held at Geneva in 1947, and the resulting concessions were safeguarded under the terms of a multilateral agreement called the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, which was signed on October 30th, 1947, at Geneva and came into force on January 1st, 1948. Originally the GATT was accepted by twenty-three countries.

The GATT was intended as a stop-gap arrangement pending the creation of the International Trade Organization. But, because the ITO (Havana) Charter was never brought into force, GATT has remained since 1948 as the generally accepted international instrument which lays down rules of conduct for trade on a world-wide basis, and as the principal forum for discussions on questions of international trade policy.

AIMS

GATT is a multilateral treaty which lays down agreed rules for the conduct and furtherance of world trade and is accepted by countries responsible for over four-fifths of that trade. GATT provides a forum in which governments can negotiate for the further liberalization of world trade and in which differences on trade matters among the members can be settled. It is designed to achieve the objectives set out in the preamble to the Agreement where the Contracting Parties recognize that "their relations in the field of trade and economic endeavour should be conducted with a view to raising standards of living, ensuring full employment and a large and steadily growing volume of real income and effective demand, developing the full use of the resources of the world and expanding the production and exchange of goods, and promoting the progressive development of the economies of all the Contracting Parties."

THE AGREEMENT

The detailed undertakings set out in GATT, together with a body of case law built up by the Contracting Parties, constitute a general code of conduct covering virtually the whole field of the commercial relations of member states.

GATT is based on a comparatively few fundamental principles. First, as directed in the famous "most-favoured-nation" clause, trade must be conducted on the basis of non-discrimination: all Contracting Parties are bound to grant to each other treatment as favourable as they give to any country in the application and administration of import and export duties and charges. Exceptions—principally for customs unions and free trade areas and for measures in favour of developing countries—are granted only subject to strict rules.

Second, protection should only be given to domestic industry through the customs tariff. The aim of this rule is to make the extent of protection clear and to make competition possible.

Third, a stable and predictable basis for trade is provided by the binding of the tariff levels negotiated among the Contracting Parties. These bound items are listed for each country in tariff schedules which form an integral part of the General Agreement. A return to higher tariffs is discouraged by the requirement that any increases are accounted for; consequently this provision is invoked rarely.

Consultation, to avoid damage to the trading interests of Contracting Parties, is another fundamental principle of GATT. Members are able to call on GATT for a fair settlement of cases in which they think their rights under the General Agreement are being withheld or compromised by other members.

There are "waiver" procedures whereby a country may, when its economic or trade circumstances so warrant, seek a derogation from a particular GATT obligation or obligations. There are also escape provisions for emergency action in certain defined circumstances.

Finally, GATT offers a framework within which negotiations are held for the reduction of tariffs and other barriers to trade and a structure for putting the results of such negotiations into a legal instrument.

THE UNITED NATIONS—(SPECIALIZED AGENCIES)

CONTRACTING PARTIES TO THE GATT

(see Table on pages 28-30)

SESSIONS

Chairman (1973-74): H. KITAHARA (Japan).

The sessions of Contracting Parties are usually held annually, in Geneva.

The Session is the highest body of GATT. Decisions are generally arrived at by consensus, not by vote. On the rare occasions that voting takes place, each contracting party (member country) has one vote. Most decisions by vote are taken by simple majority; but a two-thirds majority, with the majority comprising more than half the member countries, is needed for "waivers", authorizations, in particular cases, to depart from specific obligations under the General Agreement. (When the members thus act collectively, they are referred to in GATT documents as CONTRACTING PARTIES). Outside the Sessions, votes may be taken by postal ballot.

COUNCIL OF REPRESENTATIVES

Chairman (1973-74): P. LAY (Malaysia).

Meets as necessary (generally about eight times a year) to deal with urgent and routine matters arising between sessions and to supervise the work of committees and working groups.

SECRETARIAT

Director-General: OLIVIER LONG.

The secretariat, numbering about 200 persons, consists of experts in trade policy and intelligence and an administrative staff. It prepares and runs the Sessions and services the work of the Council and the committees and working groups. It is also responsible for organizing the trade negotiations.

COMMITTEES AND WORKING PARTIES

A Trade Negotiations Committee was set up in September 1973 to direct the current "Tokyo Round" trade negotiations: it is expected to establish subsidiary bodies as necessary.

Standing committees exist to direct GATT work on industrial products; on agriculture; on trade and development issues; to carry on trade negotiations among developing countries; to examine the situation of countries using trade restrictions to protect their balance of payments; and to study import restrictions. There are further standing committees on cotton textiles and on anti-dumping practices as well as a committee to deal with budget, financial and administrative questions.

Working parties (ad hoc committees) are set up to deal with current questions, such as requests for accession to GATT; verification that agreements concluded by member countries are in conformity with GATT; or studies of issues on which the member countries will later wish to take a joint decision. Panels of Conciliation are sometimes set up to investigate disputes.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE CENTRE UNCTAD/GATT

Villa le Bocage, Palais des Nations, Geneva

Director (Promotions): H. L. JACOBSON.

Director (Programmes): V. E. SANTIAPILLAI.

Established by GATT in May 1964 to assist the developing countries in their export trade by providing information on export markets and marketing, and helping them both to develop their export promotion services and to train the personnel required for these services.

The Centre has been jointly operated since January 1968 by GATT and UNCTAD.

The centre's services at present comprise four main sectors: Market Information Service; Publications Programme; Trade Promotion Advisory Service; Training Programme.

ACTIVITIES

"The substantial reduction of tariffs and other barriers to trade" is laid down as a principal aim of the General Agreement.

During GATT's first 25 years, six major trade negotiations took place under its auspices: in 1947 (in Geneva), in 1949 (Annecy, France), 1951 (Torquay, England), 1956 (Geneva), 1960-61 (Geneva, the "Dillon Round"), and 1964-67 (Geneva, the "Kennedy Round"). In addition, smaller-scale negotiations preceded the accession to GATT of certain countries. As a result, the tariff rates for thousands of items entering into world commerce were reduced, or bound against increase. The Kennedy Round negotiations alone reduced the average level of world industrial tariffs by about one-third. The concessions agreed upon in these negotiations have affected a high proportion of the total trade of GATT countries, and, indirectly, the trade of many non-members as well.

In September 1973, representatives of 102 nations, meeting at Ministerial level in Tokyo, launched new multilateral trade negotiations in GATT, with the intention of completing them in 1975. The Ministers decided that the negotiations, which will be largely based on technical preparations undertaken in GATT since 1967, should cover tariffs, non-tariff barriers and other measures which impede or distort international trade in both industrial and agricultural products, including tropical products and raw materials, whether in primary form or at any stage of processing, and that they will include, in particular, product of export interest to developing countries and measures affecting their exports.

The negotiations are to be based, like those held in earlier years, on the principles of mutual advantage, mutual commitment and overall reciprocity (i.e. the totality of concessions made by each developed country should balance those received), and the joint aim of the participants will be to achieve an overall balance of advantage at the highest possible level.

In addition it was agreed that developing countries would participate on special terms, and that the negotiations should "aim to secure additional benefits for the international trade of developing countries so as to achieve a substantial increase in their foreign exchange earnings, the diversification of their exports, the acceleration of the rate of growth of their trade, taking into account their development needs, an improvement in the possibilities for these countries to participate in the expansion of world trade and a better balance as between developed and developing countries in the sharing of the advantages resulting from this expansion".

Eighty-three countries, including 19 developing countries not members of GATT, had by November 1973 announced their intention to negotiate.

The trade problems of developing countries have received increasing attention in GATT in recent years. In 1965 a new chapter on Trade and Development was added to the General Agreement; a key provision is that developing countries should not be expected to offer reciprocity in negotiations with developed countries. GATT members have also relaxed the "most-favoured-nation" rule to accommodate the Generalized Scheme of Preferences by developed for developing countries and to allow an exchange of preferential tariff reductions among developing countries.

Since 1962 an Arrangement Regarding International Trade in Cotton Textiles, concluded under GATT auspices, has regulated trade among some 30 major exporting and importing countries. At the end of 1973, negotiations were in progress to replace the Arrangement with a new agreement covering textiles not only of cotton but also of other fibres.

BUDGET

Payments are based on each member's share of the total trade between members. Contributions for 1973 totalled Swiss Francs 21,261,000.

INTER-GOVERNMENTAL MARITIME CONSULTATIVE ORGANIZATION—IMCO

101-104 Piccadilly, London, W.1, England

Telephone: 01-499-9040

IMCO was set up in 1959 as a specialized agency of the UN to facilitate co-operation among governments on technical matters affecting international shipping. Its main functions are the achievement of safe and efficient navigation, and the control of pollution caused by ships and craft operating in the marine environment.

MEMBERSHIP

(see Table on pages 28-30)

THE UNITED NATIONS—(SPECIALIZED AGENCIES)

ORGANIZATION

THE ASSEMBLY

President (1973) A. YANKOV (Bulgaria).

The Assembly consists of delegates from all member countries, who each have one vote. Associate members and observers from other governments, the United Nations and UN agencies are also present. Regular sessions are held every two years, the first being in London in January 1959. The Assembly is responsible for the election of members to the Council and to the Maritime Safety Committee. It considers reports from all subsidiary bodies and decides the action to be taken on them. The Assembly votes the agency's budget and determines the work programme and financial policy. An important part of its work is to recommend to members measures designed to promote maritime safety.

THE COUNCIL

Chairman: R. Y. EDWARDS (U.S.A.).

MEMBERS

Algeria	Greece	Poland
Australia	India	Spain
Belgium	Indonesia	U.S.S.R.
Brazil	Japan	United Kingdom
Canada	Nigeria	U.S.A.
France	Norway
Germany, Federal Republic

The Council is the governing body of the Organization between the biennial sessions of the Assembly. The Council appoints the Secretary-General; transmits reports by the Maritime Safety Committee to the Assembly and reports on the work of the Organization generally; submits budget estimates and financial statements with comments and recommendations to the Assembly. The Council normally meets twice a year.

LEGAL COMMITTEE

Established by the Council in June 1967 to deal initially with problems connected with the loss of the tanker Torrey Canyon, and subsequently with any legal problems laid before IMCO. Membership open to all IMCO Member States.

FACILITATION COMMITTEE

Constituted by the Council in May 1972 as a subsidiary body, this Committee was formerly an ad hoc Working Group. It deals with measures to facilitate maritime travel and transport and matters arising from the 1965 Facilitation Convention. Membership open to all IMCO member states.

COMMITTEE ON TECHNICAL CO-OPERATION

Constituted by the Council in May 1972 as a subsidiary body, this Committee was formerly a Working Group. It evaluates the implementation of UN Development Programme projects for which IMCO is executing agency and generally reviews IMCO's technical assistance programmes. Its membership is open to all IMCO member states.

Chairman: L. SPINELLI (Italy).

MEMBERS

Argentina	Greece	Spain
Canada	Italy	U.S.S.R.
Egypt	Japan	United Kingdom
France	Liberia	U.S.A.
Germany, Federal Republic	Norway	Yugoslavia
	Pakistan

The Maritime Safety Committee consists of sixteen members elected by the Assembly for a term of four years. The Committee meets at least once a year and submits proposals to the Assembly on technical matters affecting shipping, including prevention of marine pollution.

SUB-COMMITTEES

Cargoes and Containers.	Safety of Navigation.
Carriage of Dangerous Goods.	Ship Design and Equipment.
Fire Protection.	Subdivision and Stability.
Life-Saving Appliances.	Standards of Training and Watchkeeping
Radiocommunications.
Safety of Fishing Vessels.

MARINE ENVIRONMENT PROTECTION COMMITTEE

Established by the eighth Assembly (1973) to co-ordinate IMCO's work on the prevention and control of marine pollution from ships, and to assist IMCO in its consultations with other UN bodies, and with international organizations and expert bodies in the field of marine pollution.

SECRETARIAT

Secretary-General: C. P. SRIVASTAVA (India).

The Secretariat consists of the Secretary-General, the Deputy Secretary-General, the Secretary of the Maritime Safety Committee, and a staff appointed by the Secretary-General and recruited on as wide a geographical basis as possible. It comprises a Technical Division, an Administrative Division, a Technical Co-operation Division and a Legal Division.

ACTIVITIES

International Convention for Safety of Life at Sea, 1948, and Collision Regulations, 1948. IMCO has taken over administration from the United Kingdom.

International Convention for Safety of Life at Sea, 1960, and Collision Regulations, 1960. A Conference held in 1960 revised the 1948 Safety Convention and prepared a new one. The 1960 Safety Convention, administered by IMCO, came into force on May 26th, 1965 and the 1960 Collision Regulations became effective on September 1st, 1965.

International Convention for the Prevention of Pollution of the Sea by Oil, 1954. IMCO has taken over administration from the United Kingdom and an international conference in 1962 adopted certain amendments to the 1954 Convention. The amendments came into force in May 1967.

Convention on Facilitation of International Maritime Traffic, 1965. Drawn up at a conference called by IMCO in 1965. The object of the convention is to reduce and simplify governmental procedures and documentation for ships. Came into force in March 1967.

International Convention on Load Lines, 1966. Drawn up at a conference called by IMCO in 1966. It will eventually replace the current Load Line Convention of 1930. The Convention came into force on July 21st, 1968.

International Convention on Tonnage Measurement of Ships, 1969. Drawn up at a Conference called by IMCO in 1969, the Convention embodies a universal system for measuring ships' tonnage. Will come into force two years after acceptance or accession by twenty-five governments of states, the combined fleets of which constitute not less than 65 per cent of gross tonnage of world merchant shipping.

International Convention relating to Intervention on the High Seas in Cases of Oil Pollution Casualties, 1969. Will enter into force on the ninetieth day after the date on which fifteen countries have approved it. Drawn up at a conference called by IMCO in Brussels in 1969.

International Convention on Civil Liability for Oil Pollution Damage, 1969. Will come into force on the ninetieth day after the date on which eight countries, including five with not less than 1 million gross tons of tanker tonnage, have approved it. Drawn up at a conference called by IMCO at Brussels in 1969.

International Convention on the Establishment of an International Fund for Compensation for Oil Pollution Damage, 1971. Will come into force 90 days after date on which 8 countries have approved, provided IMCO Secretary-General has received information that the persons in each country liable to contribute to the Fund (according to the Convention) have received a total of 750 million tons of "contributing" oil during preceding year.

Convention on the International Regulations for Preventing Collisions at Sea, 1972. Will come into force one year after its approval by 15 countries whose fleets constitute not less than 65 per cent by number or tonnage of the world's fleet of vessels of 100 gross tons and over, but in any case not before January 1st, 1976.

International Convention on the Prevention of Pollution from Ships, 1973. Will come into force twelve months after ratification by 15 countries whose combined merchant fleets constitute 50 per cent of the gross tonnage of world merchant shipping.

Sub-Committee on Cargoes and Containers. Has drawn up the Code of Safe Practice for Bulk Cargoes, which will be kept up to date. Has drawn up new Grain Regulations, adopted by 1969 Assembly as equivalent to Chapter VI of International Convention for the Safety of Life at Sea, 1960.

Sub-Committee on the Carriage of Dangerous Goods. Has drawn up International Maritime Dangerous Goods Code, which will be kept up to date.

Sub-Committee on Fire Protection. Deals with fire protection measures for ships, including tankers.

Sub-Committee on Life-Saving Appliances. Deals with questions pertaining to life-saving equipment.

Sub-Committee on Radiocommunications. Deals with questions pertaining to radiocommunications from the viewpoint of safety at sea. Responsible for periodic revision of the International Code of Signals.

Sub-Committee on Safety of Navigation. Deals with questions pertaining to safety of navigation, including those relevant to new types of craft, and with traffic separation schemes.

Sub-Committee on Ship Design and Equipment. Considers primarily the construction and equipment of ships carrying bulk cargoes of dangerous chemical substances other than petroleum and similar inflammable products normally carried in tankers; aims to recommend suitable design criteria, constructional standards and other safety measures.

Sub-Committee on Safety of Fishing Vessels. Considers and makes recommendations on safety aspects of these vessels.

Sub-Committee on Subdivision and Stability. Examines watertight subdivision of passenger ships, intact stability of passenger and cargo ships, subdivision and damage stability of cargo ships.

Sub-Committee on Standards of Training and Watchkeeping. Lays down basic principles to be observed in keeping safe watch, including minimum qualifications of personnel involved; draws up proposals for minimum international standards of training and certification and their mandatory applications.

BUDGET

The establishment of IMCO was financed by a loan from the United Nations. Arrangements were made by the first Assembly to place the Organization on a sound financial basis with contributions assessed from member states. The budget for operations during 1974 was established at $2,923,800 and during 1975 at $3,031,500.

CONVENTION

PART I—PURPOSES

ARTICLE 1. (a) to provide machinery for co-operation among governments in the field of governmental regulation and practices relating to technical matters of all kinds affecting shipping engaged in international trade, and to encourage the general adoption of the highest practicable standards in matters concerning maritime safety and efficiency of navigation;

(b) to encourage the removal of discriminatory action and unnecessary restrictions by governments affecting shipping engaged in international trade so as to promote the availability of shipping services to the commerce of the world without discrimination; assistance and encouragement given by a government for the development of its national shipping and for purposes of security does not in itself constitute discrimination, provided that such assistance and encouragement is not based on measures designed to restrict the freedom of shipping of all flags to take part in international trade;

(c) to provide for the consideration by the Organization of matters concerning unfair restrictive practices by shipping concerns in accordance with Part II;

(d) to provide for the consideration by the Organization of any matters concerning shipping that may be referred to it by any organ or Specialized Agency of the United Nations;

(e) to provide for the exchange of information among governments on matters under consideration by the Organization.

PART II—FUNCTIONS

ARTICLE 2. The functions of the Organization shall be consultative and advisory.

ARTICLES 3 and 4. Description of functions.

PART III—MEMBERSHIP

ARTICLE 5. Membership in the Organization shall be open to all states.

ARTICLES 6–11. Conditions of membership.

PART IV—ORGANS

ARTICLE 12. The Organization shall consist of an Assembly, a Council, a Maritime Safety Committee, and such subsidiary organs as the Organization may at any time consider necessary; and a Secretariat.

PART V—ASSEMBLY

ARTICLE 13. The Assembly shall consist of all the members.

ARTICLES 14–16. Powers and duties of the Assembly.

PART VI—COUNCIL

ARTICLE 17. The Council shall be composed of eighteen members elected by the Assembly.

ARTICLE 18. In electing the members of the Council, the Assembly shall observe the following principles:

- (a) six shall be governments of States with the largest interest in providing international shipping services;
- (b) six shall be governments of other States with the largest interest in international seaborne trade;
- (c) six shall be governments of States not elected under (a) or (b) above, which have special interests in maritime transport or navigation and whose election to the Council will ensure the representation of all major geographic areas of the world.

ARTICLES 19–27. Powers and duties of the Council.

PART VII—MARITIME SAFETY COMMITTEE

ARTICLE 28. The Maritime Safety Committee shall consist of sixteen members elected by the Assembly from members, governments of those States having an important interest in maritime safety of which:

- (a) eight members shall be elected from among the ten largest shipowning States;
- (b) four members shall be elected in such manner as to ensure that, under this sub-paragraph, a State in each of the following areas is represented: I. Africa; II. The Americas; III. Asia and Oceania; IV. Europe;
- (c) the remaining four members shall be elected from among States not otherwise represented on the Committee. For the purpose of this Article, States having an important interest in maritime safety shall include, for example, States interested in the supply of large numbers of crews or in the carriage of berthed or unberthed passengers. Members of the Maritime Safety Committee shall be elected for a term of four years and shall be eligible for re-election.

ARTICLE 29. (a) The Maritime Safety Committee shall have the duty of considering any matter within the scope of the Organization and concerned with aids to navigation, construction and equipment of vessels, manning from a safety standpoint, rules for the prevention of collisions, handling of dangerous cargoes, maritime safety procedures and requirements, hydrographic information, log-books and navigational records, marine casualty investigation, salvage and rescue, and any other matters directly affecting maritime safety.

(b) The Maritime Safety Committee shall provide machinery for performing any duties assigned to it by the Convention, or by the Assembly, or any duty within the scope of this Article which may be assigned to it by any other intergovernmental instrument.

(c) Having regard to the provisions of Part XII, the Maritime Safety Committee shall have the duty of maintaining such close relationship with other intergovernmental bodies concerned with transport and communications as may further the object of the Organization in promoting maritime safety and facilitate the co-ordination of activities in the fields of shipping, aviation, telecommunications and meteorology with respect to safety and rescue.

ARTICLES 30–32. Powers and duties of the Maritime Safety Committee.

PART VIII—SECRETARIAT

ARTICLE 33. The Secretariat shall comprise the Secretary-General, a Secretary of the Maritime Safety Committee and such staff as the Organization may require.

ARTICLES 34–38. Powers and duties of the Secretariat.

INTERNATIONAL CIVIL AVIATION ORGANIZATION—ICAO

International Aviation Building, Montreal, Canada

Founded in 1947, the aims and objectives of ICAO are to develop the principles and techniques of international air navigation and to foster the planning and development of international air transport, so as to: (a) Insure safe and orderly growth of international civil aviation throughout the world; (b) Encourage the arts of aircraft design and operation for peaceful purposes; (c) Encourage the development of airways, airports, and air navigation facilities for international civil aviation; (d) Meet the needs of the peoples of the world for safe, regular, efficient and economical air transport; (e) Prevent economic waste caused by unreasonable competition; (f) Insure that the rights of contracting States are fully respected and that every contracting State has a fair opportunity to operate international airlines; (g) Avoid discrimination between contracting States; (h) Promote safety of flight in international air navigation; (i) Promote generally the development of all aspects of international civil aeronautics.

(see Table on pages 28–30)

ORGANIZATION

ASSEMBLY

Composed of representatives of the member states, and is the organization's legislative body; meets every three years.

COUNCIL

Comprises representatives of thirty states elected by the Assembly. It is the executive body, and establishes and supervises subsidiary technical committees and makes recommendations to member governments; meets in virtually continuous session; elects the President, appoints the Secretary-General, and administers the finances of the organization.

President of the Council: WALTER BINAGHI (Argentina).

Secretary-General: Dr. ASSAD KOTAITE (Lebanon).

FUNCTIONS OF THE COUNCIL

1. Adopts international standards and recommended practices and incorporates them as annexes to the Convention on International Civil Aviation.
2. Acts as arbiter between member states on matters concerning aviation and implementation of the Convention.
3. Investigates any situation which prevents avoidable obstacles to development of international air navigation.
4. Takes whatever steps are necessary to maintain safety and regularity of operation of international air transport.
5. Provides technical assistance to the developing countries under the UN Development Programme and other assistance programmes.

AIR NAVIGATION COMMISSION

Comprises 11 members and one observer.

President: J. E. COLE.

STANDING COMMITTEES

These include the Air Transport Committee, the Committee on Joint Support of Air Navigation Services, the Finance Committee, the Committee on Unlawful Interference, and the Edward Warner Award Committee.

REGIONAL OFFICES

Europe: 3 bis, Villa Emile Bergerat, Neuilly-sur-Seine, France.

Far East and Pacific: P.O. Box 614, Bangkok, Thailand.

Middle East and Eastern African: 16 Hassan Sabri, Zamalek, Cairo, Egypt.

North American and Caribbean: Apartado Postal 5-377, Mexico 5, D.F.

South America: Apartado 4127, Lima, Peru.

Africa: P.O. Box 2356, Dakar, Senegal.

ACTIVITIES DURING 1973

The main efforts of ICAO in the air navigation field continued to be directed to the implementation of ICAO Specifications and ICAO Regional Plans. To promote the uniform application of the ICAO Specifications, guidance material in the form of new Technical Manuals and Circulars, and amendments to the existing Technical Manuals were published. The Regional Offices in Bangkok, Cairo, Dakar, Lima, Mexico and Paris were the principal means of assisting States in their problems associated with the implementation of projects. These consisted of experts employed for a temporary period to provide "on-the-job" advice to States in the installation of new facilities and services and the operation of existing ones.

The growth and complexity of air traffic and air route patterns necessitated amendments to documents containing ICAO Specifications and Procedures for Air Navigation Services as well as the ICAO Regional Plans. During the year regional meetings were held in the African and Asia/Pacific areas and as a result major amendments will be made to Regional Plans covering those areas. In some Regions a need has arisen for more detailed planning than has been possible through the existing methods and this has led to the creation of regional planning groups. For example, in Europe, the European Air Navigation

Planning Group (EANPG) was established to maintain a close watch on new operating requirements and review, on a continuing basis, the need for changes in the air navigation infrastructure.

To keep pace with the rapid rate of developments in aviation technology and demands for application of new systems and techniques, the Organization pursued vigorously many important projects on such subjects as all weather operations, supersonic operations, application of space techniques to aviation, and automated data interchange systems.

In conformity with ICAO's position stated at the United Nations Conference on the Human Environment, Stockholm, June 1972, work towards achieving maximum consistency between the safe and orderly development of civil aviation and the quality of the human environment has been given high priority. Studies are in progress on the extension of current noise certification requirements to cover new jet aeroplanes in the lower weight ranges and on the adoption of a separate noise certification scheme for light propeller-driven aircraft. Studies on the effects of sonic boom, during Concorde and TU-144 supersonic overflight, on humans, animals, structures and terrain, justify an optimistic attitude towards the operation of supersonic transport aeroplanes as far as sonic boom is concerned. Action has been initiated to study the problems associated with aircraft engine exhaust emissions.

A project on aircraft/infrastructure compatibility was pursued. This involves a step-by-step study to establish the feasibility of applying systems planning to the introduction of new aircraft types.

Focusing on the technical aspects of aviation security, the Organization prepared a set of draft security specifications to be included into existing documents.

In the field of economics of air transport a major Conference on the Economics of Route Facilities and Airports was held in Montreal in February. This Conference reviewed the general economic situation of international airports and international route air navigation facilities in relation to that of international air carriers, and was particularly concerned with the principles relating to systems of charges imposed by States for use by aircraft of airports and of en route air navigation facilities.

A meeting of ICAO's Facilitation Division in March 1973 in Dubrovnik reviewed ICAO's Standards and Recommended Practices on Facilitation. The Facilitation programme seeks to simplify and accelerate the entry and departure of aircraft, passengers and cargo at international airports and requires co-ordination between civil aviation, customs, immigration, health and security authorities.

A study of the development of international air passenger travel for Europe was published in 1973 as part of a continuing series of regional studies of air passenger and air freight development.

The statistical programme of ICAO has recently been expanded to include collection of statistics of non-scheduled commercial air transport. For many years ICAO has published Digests of Statistics in series covering Traffic, Traffic Flow, Financial Data, Fleet and Personnel, Civil Aircraft on Register and Airport Traffic. A manual describing the ICAO statistical programme will be published in 1974.

Work in the legal field concentrated on a number of subjects, such as the question of the liability of the aircraft operator for damage caused to third parties on the surface, the liability for damage caused by noise and sonic boom, and matters related to the problem of unlawful interference with civil aviation.

The Legal Committee, on January 27th, adopted a Resolution recommending that certain proposals presented to the Committee and relating to the suppression of acts directed against the safety of civil aviation be referred to an Extraordinary Session of the Assembly and a Diplomatic Conference. The two ICAO meetings were held in Rome, from August 28th to September 21st. Measures considered were the amendment of the Chicago Convention and the adoption of a new convention and protocols supplementing already existing conventions. The meeting failed to reach agreement on either approach; the Assembly adopted a Resolution on aviation security.

Following the shooting down of a Libyan airliner by Israeli forces over Sinai, the Council of ICAO, as directed by an Extraordinary Session of the Assembly, appointed a team of experts to conduct a fact-finding technical investigation. After receiving the report covering the inquiry, the Council adopted a Resolution condemning the Israeli action and urging Israel to comply with the aims and objectives of the Chicago Convention.

At the request of the Government of Lebanon, the Council met in August to consider the case of interception by Israeli military aircraft of a Lebanese civil aircraft over Lebanese airspace. The Council Resolution condemned the Israeli action; a similar Resolution was adopted on this matter by the Extraordinary Session of the Assembly at Rome, in August 1973.

In an effort to prevent acts of unlawful interference directed against the safety of civil aviation, the Committee on Unlawful Interference, established in 1969, continued to be active in developing measures and procedures to safeguard aviation security and ensured the co-ordination of all ICAO activities in this field.

ICAO, through regional and inter-regional projects, continued to supply technical assistance to developing countries. As many of them today have their own initial aviation training schemes but now need more advanced training, postgraduate training centres are being developed with ICAO help. Basic components of Technical Assistance projects will continue to be experts, fellowships and equipment.

In administrative matters, the ICAO Council has re-appointed Dr. Assad Kotaite as Secretary-General for an additional three-year term.

With effect from January 16th, the membership of the ICAO Council has been increased from 27 to 30 States. The three new Members are: Kingdom of the Netherlands, Pakistan, Trinidad and Tobago.

The Edward Warner gold medal award for 1973 was bestowed posthumously on the late Mr. Shizuma Matsuo of Japan who, based on his considerable research in civil aviation development, played a prominent role in the planning of airports, consolidating teams of aviation experts and organizing excellent safety services both in Japan and elsewhere. Dedicating himself to the building of one of the most safe and efficient air transport systems in the world, Mr. Matsuo's constant striving for operational safety was outstanding even in an activity as safety-conscious as civil aviation.

During 1973, the membership of ICAO rose to 128, with the adherence of Bangladesh, Oman, Swaziland and Fiji to the Convention on International Civil Aviation.

INTERNATIONAL LABOUR ORGANISATION—ILO

154 Rue de Lausanne, CH-1211 Geneva 22, Switzerland

The ILO was founded in 1919 to work for social justice as a basis for lasting peace. It carries out this mandate by promoting decent living standards, satisfactory conditions of work and pay and adequate employment opportunities. Methods of action include the creation of international labour standards; the provision of technical co-operation services; and research and publications on social and labour matters. In 1946, the Organisation became a specialized agency associated with the UN. The ILO was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize in 1969.

INTERNATIONAL LABOUR CONFERENCE

President (June 1973); BINTU'A TSHIABOLA (Zaire).

Vice-Presidents (June 1973):

Governmental: MARIAN NASZKOWSKI (Poland);

Employer: ERNST G. ERDMANN (Federal Republic of Germany);

Worker: ALFONSO SÁNCHEZ MADARIAGA (Mexico).

The supreme deliberative body of ILO. Normally meets annually in Geneva, with a session devoted to maritime questions when necessary. Attended by more than 1,200 delegates, advisers and observers. National delegations are composed of two government delegates, one employers' delegate and one workers' delegate. Non-governmental delegates can speak and vote independently of the views of their government. Conference elects the Governing Body and adopts the Budget and International Labour Conventions and Recommendations.

The President and Vice-Presidents hold office for the term of the Conference only.

GOVERNING BODY

Chairman (1973–74): ARTHUR MUÑOZ LEDO (Mexico).

Employers' Vice-Chairman (1973–74): GULLMAR BERGENSTRÖM (Sweden).

Workers' Vice-Chairman (1973–74): JOSEPH MORRIS (Canada).

ILO's executive council. Normally meets three or four times a year in Geneva to decide policy and programmes. Composed of 24 Government members, 12 employers' members and 12 workers' members. 10 of the government members represent "states of chief industrial importance"—Canada, China, France, German Federal Republic, India, Italy, Japan, U.S.S.R., United Kingdom, United States. The remaining 14 are elected from other countries every three years. Employers' and workers' members are elected as individuals, not as national candidates.

INTERNATIONAL LABOUR OFFICE

Director-General: FRANCIS BLANCHARD (France).

Deputy Directors-General: A. M. AMMAR (Egypt), (other Deputy Director-General to be appointed).

Assistant Directors-General: BERTIL BOLIN (Sweden), ALBERT TÉVOÉDJRÉ (Dahomey), XAVIER CABALLERO TAMAYO (Bolivia), YUJIRO OHNO (Japan), PAVEL ASTAPENKO (U.S.S.R.).

The International Labour Office is the Organisation's secretariat, operational headquarters and publishing house. It is staffed in Geneva and in the field by more than 3,000 people of some 100 nationalities. Operations are decentralized to regional, area and branch offices in nearly 40 countries.

INTERNATIONAL INSTITUTE FOR LABOUR STUDIES

Established by ILO in March 1960. The Institute is an advanced educational and research institution dealing with social and labour policy, and brings together international experts representing employers, management, workers and government interests. Activities include international and regional study courses, and are financed by grants and an Endowment Fund to which governments and other bodies contribute.

Director: KENNETH F. WALKER (Australia).

INTERNATIONAL CENTRE FOR ADVANCED TECHNICAL AND VOCATIONAL TRAINING

Established by ILO in Turin, Italy, the Centre became operational in October 1965. It marshals the latest techniques in management, technology and teaching methodology and makes them available to key personnel from all over the world. It does this by giving advanced training courses to experienced managers, instructors, technicians and directors of training services. Programmes are geared primarily to the needs of developing countries. The ILO Director-General is Chairman of the Board of the Centre.

Director: PHILIPPE BLAMONT (France).

ACTIVITIES

INTERNATIONAL LABOUR STANDARDS

One of the ILO's primary functions is the adoption by the International Labour Conference of Conventions and Recommendations setting minimum labour standards. Through ratification by member states, Conventions create binding obligations to put their provisions into effect. Recommendations provide guidance as to policy and practice. A total of 138 Conventions and 146 Recommendations have been adopted, ranging over a wide field of social and labour matters, including basic human rights such as freedom of association, abolition of forced labour and elimination of discrimination in employment. Together they form the International Labour Code. By November 1973 almost 5,000 commitments to observe the Conventions had been made by member states.

TECHNICAL CO-OPERATION

Technical co-operation continued to be a major ILO activity. More than $35.8 million from all sources, including the United Nations Development Programme, was spent on projects in aid of economic and social development in 1972. Nearly 1,200 experts were at work in some 100 countries. Regional distribution of expenditure in 1972 was as follows: Africa, $15.9 million; Latin America and the Caribbean, $5.3 million; Asia, $9.2 million; Europe, $1.7 million; Middle East, $2.7 million; inter-regional projects, $1 million.

WORLD EMPLOYMENT PROGRAMME

The ILO, under the World Employment Programme, gives practical assistance to governments in the development of their employment strategies, helping them to select policies which lead to more work in industry, rural development, public works and other schemes, and to choose technologies and training programmes which use human resources to the full in achieving economic and social progress. Four major missions by international teams of specialists have diagnosed employment problems and proposed solutions for them in Colombia (1970), Sri Lanka and Iran (1971), Kenya (1972), Philippines and the Dominican Republic (1973). Through the work of regional employment teams, various forms of expert advisory service, participation in employment seminars, etc., the governments of many other countries have been assisted in preparing employment promotion programmes and in putting them into effect.

MEETINGS

Among meetings scheduled for 1974, besides those of the International Labour Conference and the Governing Body, are the following: European Regional Conference; Advisory Committee on Salaried Employees and Professional Workers; Tripartite Technical Meeting for Hotels, Restaurants and Similar Establishments; Conference of American States Members of the ILO.

INTERNATIONAL LABOUR CONFERENCE

The 58th session of the International Labour Conference (June 1973) adopted a Convention and a Recommendation on the minimum age for admission to employment and a Convention and Recommendation on the social repercussions of new methods of cargo handling in docks. It held a first discussion on the control and prevention of occupational cancer and on the right to paid educational leave. Presidents Kekkonen of Finland and Bourguiba of Tunisia addressed the Conference, which was attended by about 1,400 delegates, advisers and observers from 116 nations.

The 59th session of the International Labour Conference will take place in Geneva in June 1974 and will consider the final adoption of international labour standards on the control and prevention of occupational cancer and on paid educational leave; it will also discuss such matters as organizations of rural workers, vocational guidance and training, and migrant workers.

INTERNATIONAL TELECOMMUNICATION UNION—ITU

Place des Nations, Geneva, Switzerland

ITU succeeded, in 1934, the International Telegraph Union (founded 1865). It has three main purposes: to encourage world co-operation in the use of tele-communication, to promote the development of technical facilities and their efficient operation, and to harmonize the actions of nations in the attainment of these common ends.

ORGANIZATION

PLENIPOTENTIARY CONFERENCE

The supreme organ of ITU; meets about every five years. Each member has one vote at the Conference, whose main tasks are to approve budget policy and accounts, to negotiate with other international organizations, and generally direct policy. Recent Conferences: Montreux, September 1965, Torremolinos 1973.

WORLD ADMINISTRATIVE CONFERENCES

The Administrative Telegraph and Telephone Conference: revises telegraph and telephone regulations.

World Administrative Radio Conference: revises radio regulations, elects the members of the International Frequency Registration Board, and reviews its activities.

World Administrative Conferences meet at irregular intervals according to technical needs, and there may also be regional Administrative Conferences held ad hoc.

A World Administrative Telegraph Conference was held in Geneva from April 2nd-11th, 1973.

A World Administrative Radio Conference for Maritime Mobile Telecommunications will be held in Geneva from April 22nd to June 7th 1974.

ADMINISTRATIVE COUNCIL

The Administrative Council meets annually in Geneva; the 28th session was held in April and May 1973. The Council is composed of 36 members elected by the Plenipotentiary Conference.

The Council helps the implementation of the Convention's provisions, and executes the decisions of the Plenipotentiary Conference and, where appropriate, the decisions of the conferences and meetings of the Union. It conducts relations with other international organizations, and approves the annual budget.

GENERAL SECRETARIAT

Secretary-General: MOHAMED MILI (Tunisia).

Deputy Secretary-General: RICHARD E. BUTLER (Australia).

Chief, Department of External Relations: CLIFFORD STEAD (United Kingdom).

Chief, Department of Common Services: RUSSELL COOK (U.S.A.).

The Secretary-General is elected by the Plenipotentiary Conference, and is responsible to it for the General Secretariat's work, and for the Union's administrative and financial services. The General Secretariat's staff totals 357; the working languages are English, French and Spanish.

THE UNITED NATIONS—(SPECIALIZED AGENCIES)

INTERNATIONAL FREQUENCY REGISTRATION BOARD (IFRB)

Chairman: ALEXANDER GROMOV (U.S.S.R.); 5 mems.; number of staff 100.

IFRB records assignments of radio frequencies and provides technical advice to enable members of the Union to operate as many radio channels as possible in overcrowded parts of the radio spectrum. It also investigates cases of harmful interference and makes recommendations for their solution.

INTERNATIONAL TELEGRAPH AND TELEPHONE CONSULTATIVE COMMITTEE (CCITT)

Director: RAYMOND CROZE (France); number of staff 34.

CCITT is currently organizing sixteen study groups and two special study groups covering transmission problems, operation and tariffs, maintenance, electromagnetic dangers, protection of equipment, definitions, vocabulary and symbols, apparatus, local connecting lines, facsimile and photo-telegraphy, quality of transmission, specifications, telegraph and telex switching, telephone signalling and switching and planning the development of an international network. It has its own telephony laboratory.

INTERNATIONAL RADIO CONSULTATIVE COMMITTEE (CCIR)

Director: JACK W. HERBSTREIT (U.S.A.); number of staff 28.

CCIR is currently organizing twelve study groups covering spectrum utilization and monitoring; space research and radioastronomy services; fixed services below about 30 MHz; fixed services using satellites; propagation in non-ionized media; ionospheric propagation; standard frequency and time-signal services; mobile services; fixed services using radio-relay systems; sound broadcasting service; television broadcasting service; Interim Study Group on Vocabulary. The television study group is working on the following matters: television recording, television standards for both black and white and colour transmission, ratio of the wanted to unwanted signal in television, reduction of band width, conversion of a television signal from one standard to another, estimates of the quality of television pictures, etc.

PLAN COMMITTEES

The Plan Committees are joint CCIR/CCITT committees responsible for preparing plans setting out circuit and routing requirements for international telecommunications and for giving estimates of the growth of international traffic. They comprise a World Plan Committee and four regional committees, for Africa, for Latin America, for Asia and Oceania and for Europe and the Mediterranean Basin.

A meeting of the World Plan Committee was held in Venice in October 1971, and the Regional Plan Committee for Africa met in Lagos, Nigeria, in January 1971.

HISTORY OF ITU

The General Assembly of the United Nations acknowledged ITU as the specialized agency in the field of telecommunication on November 15th, 1947. ITU is the oldest of the specialized agencies. Its origin dates back to May 1865, when the International Telegraph Union was founded in Paris by the signing of the International Telegraph Convention. The Paris Convention was revised in Vienna in 1868, in Rome in 1872 and in St. Petersburg in 1875. At Vienna it was decided to create a permanent international bureau, which became the forerunner of the present General Secretariat of ITU. From 1869 to 1948 its headquarters were in Berne.

In 1932 two plenipotentiary conferences were held in Madrid: a Telegraph and Telephone Conference and a Radio-telegraph Conference. The two existing Conventions were amalgamated in a single International Telecommunication Convention, and the countries which signed or acceded to it formed the International Telecommunication Union, replacing the Telegraph Union. Four sets of regulations were annexed to the Convention: Telegraph, Telephone, Radio and the Additional Radio Regulations.

A Plenipotentiary Conference met in Atlantic City in 1947 to revise the Madrid Convention. It introduced radical changes in the organization of the Union: new organs were created; it became a UN specialized agency; and in 1948 its headquarters were transferred from Berne to Geneva.

The Radio Conference, which met in 1947 at the same time as the Plenipotentiary Conference, prepared a new frequency allocation table for the various radio services. The new procedure provided for an engineering study to be made of each frequency notified to the International Frequency Registration Board. At the Radio Conference held in Geneva in 1959, the radio frequency spectrum was re-apportioned. (Within this, various bands are allocated to the Fixed, Broadcasting, Aeronautical Mobile, Land Mobile, Maritime Mobile, Radionavigation, Radiolocation, Space, Earth-Space, Radio Astronomy, Meteorological Aids, Amateur, Standard Frequency and Time Signal Services). Advances in knowledge, techniques and usage required allocations to be made beyond the previous limit of 10,500 MHz; allocations were therefore made up to 40,000 MHz. Although the future radio requirements for the new services of space and earth-space and for radio astronomy could not be foreseen, care was taken to ensure that the research in this field would not be hampered by lack of frequency allocation.

A Plenipotentiary Conference was held in Buenos Aires in 1952, in Geneva during 1959 and in Montreux in 1965. Telegraph and Telephone Conferences and Radio Conferences are normally held every five years. The last Telegraph and Telephone Conferences were held in Cairo in 1938, in Paris in 1949 and in Geneva in 1958; Radio Conferences were held in Cairo in 1938, in Atlantic City in 1947, and in Geneva in 1959. In 1963, at a world Space Radiocommunications Conference in Geneva over 6,000 megahertz (about 15 per cent of the entire radio frequency spectrum) were allocated for outer space purposes. A second Space Conference was held in 1972.

Other recent ITU conferences were an Aeronautical Radiocommunications Conference held in Geneva in March-April 1966, an African Broadcasting Conference held in Geneva during January-February 1964 and September-October 1966, and a World Maritime Radiocommunications Conference which took place in September 1967.

THE UNITED NATIONS—(SPECIALIZED AGENCIES)

TECHNICAL CO-OPERATION

ITU's programme of technical co-operation in developing countries is carried out within the framework of UNDP.

In 1971, 255 experts were on mission, 460 fellows were undergoing training abroad and $1,630,367 of equipment was delivered. The total cost of this assistance amounted to $7,714,261.

The three main objectives of ITU's activity in the field of technical co-operation continued to be: (a) promoting the development of regional telecommunication networks in Africa, Asia and Latin America; (b) strengthening telecommunications technical and administrative services in developing countries; and (c) developing the human resources required for telecommunications.

Fifty-five per cent of the Union's field experts were directly engaged in the training of telecommunication personnel in developing countries as organizers, advisers, lecturers or instructors.

The expenses incurred in connection with the training of telecommunication staff in 1971 represented approximately two-thirds of the total cost of the ITU field programme.

Considerable assistance was also provided by ITU in the specialized fields of telephony, telegraphy, radio-communications, frequency management, satellite communications, planning, organization, administration and management.

CONVENTION AND REGULATIONS

MONTREUX CONVENTION

The International Telecommunications Convention (Montreux, 1965), which lays down the organization and structure of ITU, came into force on January 1st, 1967. It contains the fundamental provisions which bind the Member and Associate Member Governments of the Union with the object of facilitating relations and co-operation between the peoples by means of efficient telecommunication services. These provisions deal with the composition, functions and structure of the Union, the application of the Convention and Regulations, relations with the United Nations and with International Organizations, and with special rules for radio.

TORREMOLINOS CONVENTION

A revised Convention was drawn up by the Plenipotentiary Conference at Torremolinos in 1973. The new Convention comes into force on January 1st, 1975.

The International Telecommunications Convention is completed by the Telegraph Regulations, the Telephone Regulations and the Radio Regulations, which bind all members and associate members.

TELEGRAPH AND TELEPHONE REGULATIONS

The Telegraph and Telephone Regulations were adopted during the 1973 Geneva Telegraph and Telephone Conference. They deal with problems of telegraph and telephone rates and tariffs among ITU Member countries. These two Regulations lay down the rules to be observed in the international telephone service. Their provisions are applied to both wire and wireless telegraph and telephone communications so far as the Radio Regulations and the Additional Radio Regulations do not provide otherwise.

RADIO REGULATIONS

The Radio Regulations include general rules for the assignment and use of frequencies and—the most important part of the Regulations—a Table of Frequency Allocations between 10 kHz and 275 GHz to the various radio services; broadcasting, television, radio astronomy, navigation aid, point-to-point service, maritime mobile, amateur, etc. Chapter III deals with the duties of the International Frequency Registration Board. The Regulations governing measures against interference follow. Subsequently, there are the administrative provisions for stations (secrecy, licences, identification, service documents, inspection of mobile stations).

Chapters VI and VII are concerned with personnel and working conditions in the mobile services, and Chapter VIII with radio assistance in life saving. The last two chapters deal with radiotelegrams and radiotelephone calls and miscellaneous stations and services. Partial revisions of the Radio Regulations are in force for Space Services (1965, 1973), the Aeronautical Mobile Services (1967), and the Maritime Mobile Service (1969).

UNITED NATIONS EDUCATIONAL, SCIENTIFIC AND CULTURAL ORGANIZATION—UNESCO

7 & 9 place de Fontenoy, 75700, Paris France

Telephone: 566 57-57.

UNESCO was established in 1945 "for the purpose of advancing, through the educational, scientific and cultural relations of the peoples of the world, the objectives of international peace and the common welfare of mankind".

FUNCTIONS

In practice, UNESCO's activities take three main forms: encouraging international intellectual co-operation; operational assistance to its 131 member states; and the promotion of peace, human rights and mutual understanding among peoples. These activities are funded through a regular budget provided by member states and also through other sources, particularly the UNDP.

International Intellectual Co-operation

International intellectual co-operation is the basis of all UNESCO's work and involves the communication of knowledge, the comparison of experience and the exchange of ideas through a wide network of specialists. Apart from its professional staff, UNESCO can call upon educators, scientists, artists, writers and sociologists in national associations and international federations which regularly work with it and some of which it helped to establish. Typical activities include the convening of some hundred conferences and meetings a year; the co-ordination of international scientific efforts through mechanisms such as the Intergovernmental Oceanographic Commission; standardization of documentation procedures; providing clearing house services; provision of fellowships; and the publication of a wide range of specialized works including source books and works of reference. They also include the promotion of international agreements, for example the Universal Copyright Convention, which member states are invited to accept.

Operational Assistance

A major part of UNESCO's efforts have been devoted to operational assistance since the 1960s, when large numbers of newly independent nations joined the Organization and sought its help on development projects. Such help takes the form of expertise provided by missions which advise governments when projects are being planned and day-to-day technical assistance given by international experts posted to the projects when they become operational. Operational assistance ranges over projects such as functional literacy of workers involved in development undertakings; teacher training; the establishment of libraries and documentation centres; provision of training for journalists, radio, television and film workers, and improvement of scientific and technical education through to studies on problems of salinity in irrigation.

Promotion of Peace

Recognizing that "Since wars begin in the minds of men, it is in the minds of men that the defences of peace must be constructed", all UNESCO's activities are aimed at contributing to the promotion of peace, human rights and mutual understanding but a number are specifically directed to these objectives. Scientific research on problems of race is promoted by the Organization, which has also waged a continuous struggle against discrimination in education and undertaken programmes to improve the access of women to education. It has commissioned studies on various aspects of human rights and, through the associated schools which take part in its youth programme, has promoted activities to increase knowledge of international problems and improve mutual understanding.

ORGANIZATION

GENERAL CONFERENCE

Is the supreme governing body of the Organization. Meets in ordinary session once in two years and is composed of representatives of the member states. Seventeenth Session: Oct.–Nov. 1972, Paris.

President: TORU HAGUIWARA (Japan).

EXECUTIVE BOARD

Consists of 40 members. Prepares the programme to be submitted to the Conference and supervises its execution. Meets twice or sometimes three times a year.

Chairman: FAUD SARRÔF (Lebanon).

SECRETARIAT

Director-General: RENÉ MAHEU (France).

Deputy Director-General: JOHN E. FOBES (U.S.A.).

Assistant Directors-General: MAHDI ELMANDJRA (Morocco), VLADIMIR EROFEEV (U.S.S.R.), JAMES M. HARRISON (Canada), RICHARD HOGGART (U.K.), AMADOU MAHTAR M'BOU (Senegal), ALBERTO OGLIGADO (Argentina).

The Director-General has an international staff of 3,500 civil servants. UNESCO's projects are entrusted to four programme sectors, for education, science, culture and communication, each headed by an Assistant Director General.

CO-OPERATING BODIES

National Commissions and Co-operating Bodies have been set up in most member states. These help to integrate work within the member states and the work of UNESCO.

ACTIVITIES

UNESCO's programme of activities is wide, embracing continuing action, such as the provision of fellowships and the publication of around 200 issues of periodicals and more than 100 new publications yearly, as well as fixed-term projects. Around 130 conferences, ministerial meetings and specialized seminars are held every year and UNESCO maintains close relations with 188 non-governmental organizations, some of which carry out projects for specific parts of the Organization's programme. A selection of activities under the programme for 1973, which was approved by the 17th General Conference, is given below.

Education. The aim of combining continuity with the flexibility to meet new needs can be seen in the education programme: continuity is shown by the maintained priorities and flexibility by a number of new measures designed to tackle the problems made clear by experience.

The priority which education still receives is shown by the budget figures: of $73,069,404 voted by the seventeenth General Conference for programme operations and services, Education was allotted $27,232,745—more than any other sector and bringing total sums administered by the Education Sector to not far short of the total regular budget for the whole Organization only two years earlier.

As its increasing involvement with pre-primary training shows, UNESCO regards education as a lifelong process; this "master concept", accepted after investigations around the world by the International Commission on the Development of Education, increasingly shaped UNESCO's projects and the planning of its Member States.

The need for rethinking and planning in education is reflected in the activities undertaken. For example, in November 1973, UNESCO convened a Conference of European ministers of education in Bucharest to consider changes in structures, curricula and methods in higher education.

THE UNITED NATIONS—(SPECIALIZED AGENCIES)

UNESCO continued to help member states in the development of national education policies and programmes for training abroad, through sending expert missions and granting study fellowships.

The 1973-74 biennium was to see the conclusion of the pilot projects undertaken by UNESCO in 12 countries to test methods of functional literacy instruction and the evaluation of the results with a view to introducing literacy components into economic development projects.

Work continued in assisting member states to develop education in their rural regions and studies were launched on the access of women to education and employment in Africa, Asia, Latin America and the Arab States while, in a new programme, a series of expert meetings was held to investigate the principles of drug education.

Science. The worldwide shift in concern away from the growth of science and towards the array of problems generated by such growth is reflected in UNESCO's programme for 1973-74 in the natural sciences and their application to development.

But since the majority of UNESCO member states are developing nations whose first priority is to get more of the benefits of science and technology, roughly $35,000,000 was apportioned to them from the United Nations Development Programme, and an estimated $14,800,000 for the regular programme carried out mainly at headquarters in Paris, a two-year total of $49,800,000.

Developing nations will be the first to benefit from a World Science Information System (UNISIST) launched in 1973 to try to keep up with the flood of two million books and articles turned out by the world's scientists and engineers every year. UNISIST will aim to improve links between existing information systems rather than set up yet another one.

Underlying the entire science programme is a new effort of introspection that has been termed "Science in the 1970s: the human implications of scientific advance".

To face up to charges that science and the technologies have caused the population explosion, an environmental crisis, a wasteful attitude towards world resources, social alienation and an increasingly problematic future for man, studies were launched as "Science in the 70s", a volume to review recent scientific advances and the problems they pose.

In its relatively new programme on "Man and the Biosphere", UNESCO continued 13 projects fostering international scientific co-operation. These run from the "ecological effects of increasing human activities on tropical and subtropical forest ecosystems" to "the effects on man and his environment of major engineering works".

In these and other activities, UNESCO called on outside expertise, working for example through member associations of the International Council of Scientific Unions, which was due to receive $530,000 for 1971-74 from UNESCO.

The Intergovernmental Oceanographic Commission based in UNESCO initiated a global investigation of pollution in the marine environment, and mounted an Integrated Global Ocean Station System intended to provide the kind of information about the sea that weather bureaux now supply about the atmosphere.

Also in the environmental sciences an International Geological Correlation Programme was launched in co-operation with the International Union of Geological Sciences.

UNESCO continued its assistance to member states in the realm of planning, offering post-graduate training programmes in the basic sciences, along with aid in research of particular relevance to the developing world, such as in the use of solar energy as a pollution-free source of power.

Culture. Having been regarded for generations as a luxury activity reserved for an élite, culture is now looked on as a necessity for everybody: this new concept lies behind the programme started in 1973, when the first Asian intergovernmental conference on cultural policies was held in Yogyakarta.

UNESCO's Secretariat aimed to encourage the training of specialists of a new kind: planners in the field of cultural development, arts administrators and organizers of cultural events took steps to promote the establishment of two pilot centres, one in a developing country, the other in an industrialized state.

Studies were initiated on the situation of the artist in the modern world and of the problems of artistic creation and the nature and the forms this can take thanks to the means made available by modern technology. UNESCO continued its work of diffusing cultural works by publishing catalogues of colour reproductions, sending out travelling exhibitions of reproductions of great works of art, bringing out the Index Translationum (an international list of translations) and by supporting a programme of translation of important works of world literature.

The study of current trends forms part of a programme of studies on Asian, Arab, Latin-American, European and African cultures which UNESCO has been carrying out since 1966. Work continued on the first two volumes of the eight-volume General History of Africa, on which a number of eminent experts and institutions are co-operating, which should appear in 1974. In 1973 a ten-year programme was started to promote African languages and oral traditions with two inter-connected aims: collecting and studying oral traditions to increase knowledge of African thought, institutions and values; promotion of African languages as instruments of cultural development and of lifelong education.

Preliminary studies were begun on the problems of exchanges of works of art between different countries and the preservation of historic quarters or cities in a modern environment. Two expert committees examined measures to protect works of art against theft and to improve insurance arrangements.

Preserving the cultural heritage continued as a priority aim; the project to transfer the threatened temples of Philae, Egypt, and the international campaign to save Borobudur, Indonesia, are both in progress.

Communication. In this field, 1973 saw the continuation of a programme to stimulate the production and reading of books which followed up the impetus given by International Book Year 1972. Among activities undertaken were the creation of an inter-professional committee of publishers, authors, librarians and booksellers at the international level to promote co-operation in this programme. During the year, UNESCO published The Book Hunger, a study which exposed the inequitable distribution of book production, and examined techniques of production and the extent of the reading habit.

The Organization continued to advise member states on the development of national library, documentation and archives services, expert missions paying particular attention to mechanization. It also expanded its own computerized documentation service and held its first seminar on the use of this service. The year also saw the beginning of ISORID, the international information system on research in documentation, member states being encouraged to set up national information transfer centres to co-operate with the system.

Assistance to member states in the field of communication research, policies and planning continued, an expert mission going, for example, to Indonesia during the year. Two in-depth studies on international communication structures (on international television and external radio broadcasting) were completed and an international programme of communication research went forward under the advice of an international advisory panel. Encouragement of the exchange of information and documentation on communication was continued through information centres, seven of which have now been set up. Five national studies of communication policies in European countries were completed and a seminar on the management and planning of communication systems was held in Paris in September.

During 1973 a draft report was prepared on a feasibility study of the regional use of television in education in nine

Latin-American countries, and a technical seminar resulted in recommendations for a regional system to serve sub-Saharan African countries. A regional television and tele-education system is being considered by Arab state members.

INTERNATIONAL INSTITUTE FOR EDUCATIONAL PLANNING—IIEP

7-9 rue Eugène Delacroix, 75016 Paris, France

Established by UNESCO in 1963 to serve as a world centre for advanced training and research in educational planning. Its purpose is to help all member states of UNESCO in their social and economic development efforts, by enlarging the fund of knowledge about educational planning and the supply of competent experts in this field.

Legally and administratively a part of UNESCO, the Institute enjoys intellectual autonomy, and its policies and programme are controlled by its own Governing Board, under special statutes voted by the General Conference of UNESCO. Budget for 1973-74: $1,308,200.

Chairman of Governing Board: Prof. TORSTEN HUSEN.

Director: RAYMOND POIGNANT.

Publications include Progress Report and over 50 titles in English, French and Spanish.

THE UNITED NATIONS—(SPECIALIZED AGENCIES)

INTERNATIONAL BUREAU OF EDUCATION—IBE

Palais Wilson, 1211 Geneva 14, Switzerland

Founded in 1925 by a group of Genevese educationists, the IBE became an intergovernmental organization in July 1929 and was incorporated into UNESCO in January 1969.

COUNCIL

The Council of the IBE is composed of representatives of 21 member states designated by the General Conference of UNESCO. These are: Argentina, Brazil, Central African Republic, Cuba, Ethiopia, Finland, France, Federal Republic of Germany, India, Iraq, Malaysia, Netherlands, Romania, Spain, Switzerland, Togo, U.S.S.R., United Kingdom, U.S.A., Uruguay, Yugoslavia.

Director: LEO FERNIG.

FUNCTIONS

International Conference on Education. The 35th session, to take place in 1975, will, subject to the approval of the General Conference of UNESCO in 1974, deal with the changing role of the teacher and its influence on preparation for the profession and on in-service training.

International Education Library: 45,000 volumes; some 750 journals received regularly.

Permanent International Exhibition on Education: 38 exhibiting countries.

BUDGET

Financed from the budget of UNESCO, the IBE has a budget for 1973–74 of $1,165,650.

PUBLICATIONS

Studies and Surveys in Comparative Education, series.

Experiments and Innovations in Education, series.

Educational Documentation and Information, quarterly bulletin.

International Yearbook of Education, Volume XXXIV, 1973.

Co-operative Educational Abstracting Service, periodical issues of abstracts of educational policy documents and Country Education Profiles.

PERIODICALS

UNESCO Courier: monthly illustrated journal devoted to the general interests of UNESCO; English, French, German, Spanish, Russian, Italian, Arabic, Japanese, Hindi, Tamil, Hebrew, Portuguese, Dutch, Turkish and Persian.

UNESCO Chronicle: monthly, giving official information, records of meetings, reports, and articles on UNESCO's programme, etc.; English, French, Arabic and Spanish.

Bulletin for Libraries: bi-monthly, containing information of use to libraries, scientific research institutes, etc.; chapters offering publications on exchange and for free distribution as well as lists of publications wanted by libraries; English, French, Spanish and Russian.

Copyright Bulletin: quarterly review of special studies and documentation on the legislation in different countries, and on UNESCO's work on behalf of the harmonization of the various copyright laws; trilingual (English-French-Spanish).

Museum: quarterly international review of museographical techniques intended for museum specialists; bilingual (English-French).

Impact of Science on Society: quarterly reports on science as a major force for social change. Describes and predicts the consequences of scientific development for the individual, for nations and for mankind as a whole; English, French and Spanish.

International Social Science Journal: quarterly journal providing a forum for professional debate on important topics of timely significance by international panels of scholars. Other features provide regular documentation and professional services for social scientists; English and French.

Prospects: quarterly review aimed at giving decision-makers, administrators and planners in education in UNESCO member states an opportunity to exchange experiences; and at encouraging a spirit of creativity and concrete co-operative efforts. Also intended to serve specialists in curricula and teaching methods, directors of innovative institutions, and young people preparing for careers in education; French and English.

Cultures: quarterly, exploring the concept and definition of the word culture, its development and the influence of cross-cultural contacts. Also examines varieties of cultural creativity, the emergence and role of cultural institutions and the problems involved in studying culture; English and French.

UNIVERSAL POSTAL UNION—UPU

3000 Berne 15, Switzerland

Telephone: (031) 43 22 11.

By the Treaty of Berne, 1874, the General Postal Union was founded, beginning operations in July 1875. Three years later its name was changed to the Universal Postal Union. In 1948 UPU became a Specialized Agency of UN.

PRINCIPLES GOVERNING THE ACTIVITIES OF THE UNION

The essential principles of the Union are the following:

1. Formation of one single postal territory.
2. Unification of postal charges and weight steps.
3. Non-sharing of postage paid for ordinary letters between the sender country and the country of destination.
4. Guarantee of freedom of transit.

5. Settlement of disputes by arbitration.
6. Establishment of a central office under the name of the International Bureau paid for by all members.
7. Periodical meeting of Congresses.
8. Promotion of the development of international postal services and postal technical assistance to Union members.

MEMBERSHIP

(see Table on pages 28-30)

CONGRESS

The Supreme body of the Union is Congress which meets every five years. Its duties are legislative and consist mainly of revision of the Acts. Sixteen Congresses have been held:

Berne . . . 1874	London . . . 1929
Paris . . . 1878	Cairo . . . 1934
Lisbon . . . 1885	Buenos Aires . . 1939
Vienna . . . 1891	Paris . . . 1947
Washington . . 1897	Brussels . . . 1952
Rome . . . 1906	Ottawa . . . 1957
Madrid . . . 1920	Vienna . . . 1964
Stockholm . . . 1924	Tokyo . . . 1969

The next Congress will be held at Lausanne, Switzerland, in 1974.

EXECUTIVE COUNCIL

Between Congresses, an Executive Council, created by the Paris Congress 1947, meets annually at Berne. It is composed of 31 member countries of the Union elected by Congress on the basis of an equitable geographical distribution. It ensures continuity of the Union's work in the interval between Congresses, supervises the activities of the International Bureau, undertakes studies, draws up proposals, and makes recommendations to the Congress. It is responsible for encouraging, supervising and co-ordinating international co-operation in the form of postal technical assistance and vocational training.

CONSULTATIVE COUNCIL FOR POSTAL STUDIES

At the Ottawa Congress 1957 a Consultative Committee for Postal Studies was established, which, at the Tokyo Congress 1969, became the Consultative Council for Postal Studies (CCPS), whose 30 member countries meet annually, in principle at Berne. It is responsible for organizing studies of major problems affecting postal administrations in all UPU member countries, in the technical operations and economic fields and in the sphere of technical co-operation. The CCPS also provides information and opinions on these matters, and examines teaching and training problems arising in the new and developing countries.

INTERNATIONAL BUREAU

The day-to-day administrative work of UPU is executed through a permanent organ called the International Bureau stationed at Berne. It serves as an instrument of liaison, information and consultation for the postal administration of the member countries, provides secretarial services for UPU bodies and promotes technical assistance.

Director-General of the International Bureau: ANTHONY H. RIDGE (U.K.).

BUDGET

The Executive Council fixed 12,403,000 Swiss francs (U.S. $4,093,500 at November 1st, 1973) as the maximum figure for annual gross expenditure in the year 1974. This sum, and any extraordinary expenses, are borne by members. Members are listed in seven classes setting out the proportion they should pay.

PUBLICATIONS

UPU publications are listed in Liste des publications du Bureau international; all are in French, some also in English, Arabic and Spanish.

Union Postale (monthly review): published simultaneously in French, German, English, Arabic, Chinese, Spanish and Russian.

THE UNITED NATIONS—(SPECIALIZED AGENCIES)

CONSTITUTION, GENERAL REGULATIONS AND CONVENTIONS

The Constitution, which came into being as a result of the division of the Universal Postal Convention by the Vienna Congress in 1964, contains the basic organic provisions of the UPU. It took effect on January 1st, 1966, and was thenceforth the permanent Act of the Union. The Constitution was amended by the Tokyo Congress in 1969.

The provisions providing for the application of the Constitution and the operation of the Union are contained in the General Regulations, which, like the other UPU Acts and unlike the Constitution, are renewable at each Congress.

The common rules applicable to the international postal service and to the letter-post provisions are contained in the Universal Postal Convention and its Detailed Regulations. Owing to their importance in the postal field and their historical value, these two Acts, together with the Constitution and the General Regulations, constitute the compulsory Acts of the Union. It is therefore not possible to be a member country of the Union without being a party to these Acts and applying their provisions.

SPECIAL AGREEMENTS

The activities of the international postal service, other than letter mail, are governed by Special Agreements. These are binding only for the countries which have acceded to them. There are eight such Agreements:

1. Agreement concerning Insured Letters and Boxes.
2. Agreement concerning Postal Parcels.
3. Agreement concerning Postal Money Orders and postal Travellers' Cheques.

4. Agreement concerning Giro Transfers.
5. Agreement concerning Cash on Delivery items.
6. Agreement concerning the Collection of Bills.
7. Agreement concerning the International Savings Bank Service.
8. Agreement concerning Subscriptions to Newspapers and Periodicals.

WORLD HEALTH ORGANIZATION—WHO

Avenue Appia, 1211 Geneva, Switzerland

Telephone: 34 60 61.

Established in 1948 to promote and protect the health of all peoples. WHO tries to give each country on request the aid it needs to improve national health services. WHO also provides a number of world-wide technical services and encourages and co-ordinates international research on health problems. In individual cases the Organization works with health departments to improve services, mainly in the developing countries. Aid chiefly takes the following forms, in decreasing order of importance: technical assistance; opportunities for professional training; operational research; the provision of health teams in campaigns against widely prevalent diseases; and related activities.

WORLD HEALTH ASSEMBLY

President: Dr. JULIE SULIANTI SOROSO (Indonesia).

Vice-Presidents (1973-74): Dr. J. ANOUTI (Lebanon), Prof. J. PROKOPEC (Czechoslovakia), Dr. K. CAMARA (Guinea), Dr. J. SUMPACO (Philippines), Dr. M. MACHADO DE LEMOS (Brazil).

The World Health Assembly meets once a year, usually in Geneva, but occasionally away from headquarters, at the invitation of a member state. The Assembly determines policy, adopts a programme and budget for the following year, appoints the Director-General, admits new members and decides the scale of assessments for members' contributions to the budget. The 26th session was held in Geneva, May 7th-23rd, 1973.

EXECUTIVE BOARD

Chairman: Dr. N. RAMZI (Syria).

Vice-Chairmen: Dr. C. N. D. TAYLOR (New Zealand), Dr. T. BANA (Niger).

Rapporteurs: Dr. M. U. HENRY (Trinidad and Tobago), Prof. A. M. KOSHBEEN (Afghanistan).

The Board is composed of twenty-four health experts designated by, but not representing, their governments. It meets at least twice a year to review the Director-General's programme, which it forwards to the Assembly with any recommendations that seem necessary. It also advises the Assembly on questions referred to it by that body.

SECRETARIAT

Director-General: Dr. HALFDAN MAHLER (Denmark).
Deputy Director-General: Dr. THOMAS A. LAMBO (Nigeria).
Assistant Directors-General: Dr. LUCIEN BERNARD (France), WARREN W. FURTH (U.S.A.), Dr. ALEXANDER S. PAVLOV (U.S.S.R.), Dr. CHANG WEI-HSUN (China).

REGIONS

Africa: Dr. A. QUENUM, P.O.B. 6, Brazzaville, Congo.
Americas: Dr. ABRAHAM HORWITZ, Pan-American Sanitary Bureau, 525 23rd St., N.W., Washington, D.C. 20037, U.S.A.

Eastern Mediterranean: Dr. A. H. TABA, P.O.B. 1517, Alexandria, Egypt.

Europe: Dr. LEO KAPRIO, 8 Scherfigsvej, Copenhagen Ø, Denmark.

South-East Asia: Dr. V. T. HERAT GUNARATNE, Indraprastha Estate, Ring Rd., New Delhi 1, India.

Western Pacific: Dr. FRANCISCO J. DY, P.O.B. 2932, Manila, Philippines.

Each of WHO's six geographical regions has its own organization consisting of a regional committee composed of the member states and associate members in the region concerned, and a regional office staffed by experts in various fields of health that work under a regional director.

ACTIVITIES IN 1973

In 1973, the Democratic People's Republic of Korea, the German Democratic Republic and Swaziland were admitted to WHO, bringing the membership total to 138 (plus two associate members).

The World Health Assembly, meeting in May in Geneva, adopted a programme of WHO activities for 1974 and an effective working budget of $106,328,800 to finance them. The figure represents an increase of 9.97 per cent over the revised budget for 1973. After reviewing WHO activities during the past year, the Assembly made a number of recommendations on future policy.

Cholera and International Travel. The Assembly amended the International Health Regulations, so that vaccination against cholera will no longer be required from any international traveller as a condition of admission to a country. It has been established that cholera vaccine while offering partial protection against the disease, does not prevent people from becoming carriers with practically no symptoms and is therefore not effective as a defence against international spread of cholera.

After a relatively quiet year, cholera again came into prominence in 1973 when it invaded southern Italy (25 notified deaths) and 25 imported cases occurred in four other European countries—France, Federal Republic of Germany, Sweden and the United Kingdom. A case of cholera was detected in Texas, U.S.A. The last case occurring in U.S.A. dates back to 1911. In Asia, Sri Lanka reported cholera for the first time since 1953. Thailand and the Khmer Republic again reported cases after remaining free from the disease since 1969 and 1968 respectively. In Africa, accurate information on the problem was difficult to obtain but it was known that acute dehydrating diarrhoeas along with cholera had taken a heavy toll of human life.

Environmental Health. The Assembly requested WHO to strengthen its research on the health effects of environmental pollutants and other environmental factors and to provide assistance for the training of specialists in health, human ecology and environmental sciences and technology. A resolution was adopted deploring all nuclear weapon tests which result in an increase in the level of ionizing radiation in the atmosphere and urging their immediate cessation.

Information System for Drugs. The Assembly emphasized the major role WHO should play in the collection and dissemination of information on drugs. It recommended a two-year feasibility study to precede a new international drug information system.

Smallpox. During the year, smallpox was declared to have been eradicated in the Americas on the basis of conclusions reached by a special commission for the assessment of the smallpox eradication programme in South America. The last case of the disease reported in the hemisphere occurred in April 1971 in Brazil. Since 1967, the number of countries reporting smallpox has dropped from 42 to 11 and the number where it is considered endemic from 30 to 4. By the end of the year endemic smallpox was believed to persist only in Ethiopia, Bangladesh, India and Pakistan. However, partly because of better reporting and partly because of major epidemics in the three countries named last, the world total of reported smallpox cases rose even more sharply in 1973 than in 1972. Towards the end of the year 101,823 cases had been reported as compared to 65,000 in 1972.

Malaria. The world malaria situation was reviewed by the WHO Expert Committee on Malaria with particular attention to areas which are not protected by any organized anti-malaria measures. The population of such areas is 346 million, of which 232 million is in Africa. Since the malaria eradication programme was launched in 1955, the disease has been eliminated in 35 countries covering 193 million people. In 46 other countries with a population of 1,193 million, transmission of the disease has been interrupted to a large extent.

Onchocerciasis. A two-year study was concluded on onchocerciasis (river-blindness) in the Volta River Basin. The disease is caused by a worm transmitted by a fly. The insecticide to be used against the fly will no longer be DDT but some biodegradable compounds that have been shown not to harm the environment. Control of onchocerciasis is a pre-condition for economic development of the area inhabited by 10 million people, of whom one million have the disease and at least 70,000 are blind or nearly blind.

Rabies. An Expert Committee on Rabies reported progress on the development of a new anti-rabies vaccine that can be given in one to three injections as against the traditional types requiring large daily injections up to 21 days.

THE UNITED NATIONS—(SPECIALIZED AGENCIES)

Human Reproduction. An amount of $4 million was earmarked for research aimed at developing safe, acceptable and effective methods for regulating human fertility.

New Director-General. On July 21st, 1973, Dr. Halfdan Mahler (Denmark), appointed Director-General of WHO by the World Health Assembly, took up his duties. He succeeded Dr. M. G. Candau (Brazil) who retired after serving the Organization in that capacity for 20 years.

Publications. The first international Dictionary of Epilepsy was published in English, French and Spanish. Also published during the year: Drug Therapy of Cancer and a World Directory of Schools of Public Health.

World Health Day

World Health Day, April 7th, 1973, was devoted to the theme "Health Begins at Home". The Day marked the twenty-fifth anniversary of the coming into force of WHO's constitution. "Better Food for a Healthier World" is the theme selected for World Health Day, 1974.

INTERNATIONAL AGENCY FOR RESEARCH ON CANCER

Lyons, France

Members: Australia, Belgium, France, Federal Republic of Germany, Italy, Japan, Netherlands, U.S.S.R., United Kingdom, U.S.A.

Director: Prof. J. HIGGINSON.

Established in 1965, the Agency is an autonomous body within the framework of WHO, which seeks to promote international co-operation in cancer research. It has its own laboratories and an epidemiological programme aimed at elucidating the role of environmental factors in the causation of cancer.

The IARC continued its research into the etiology of cancer in man and the factors in the environment that may be involved. During the year, 69 research arrangements were concluded between the Agency and national organizations.

FEDERATION OF WORLD HEALTH FOUNDATIONS

The Federation of World Health Foundations is the central agency of world health foundations that have been established in a number of countries to encourage voluntary support for programmes to meet urgent health needs. Leadership is provided by business, industry, medicine, education and the arts. World health foundations, which now exist in Canada, Sri Lanka, Hong Kong, Indonesia, Iran, Ireland, the Philippines, Switzerland, the United Kingdom and the United States, are independent and autonomous organizations under the laws of their countries. A formal agreement has been drawn up between WHO and each of them under which they have access to WHO technical expertise in health matters concerning programmes being supported. Contributions to foundations are channelled to health projects through the WHO Voluntary Fund for Health Promotion. The Federation of World Health Foundations, which represents these national bodies, is privately sponsored but has a de facto relationship with the World Health Organization.

CONSTITUTION

CHAPTER I

The objective of the World Health Organization shall be the attainment by all peoples of the highest possible level of health.

CHAPTER II

In order to achieve its objective, the functions of the Organization shall be:

- (a) to act as the directing and co-ordinating authority on international health work;
- (b) to establish and maintain effective collaboration with the United Nations, specialized agencies, governmental health administrations, professional groups and such other organizations as may be deemed appropriate;
- (c) to assist governments, upon request, in strengthening health services;

- (d) to furnish appropriate technical assistance and, in emergencies, necessary aid upon the request or acceptance of governments;
- (e) to provide or assist in providing, upon the request of the United Nations, health services and facilities to special groups, such as the peoples of trust territories;
- (f) to establish and maintain such administrative and technical services as may be required, including epidemiological and statistical services;
- (g) to stimulate and advance work to eradicate epidemic, endemic and other diseases;
- (h) to promote, in co-operation with other specialized agencies where necessary, the prevention of accidental injuries;
- (i) to promote, in co-operation with other specialized agencies where necessary, the improvement of nutrition, housing, sanitation, recreation, economic or working conditions and other aspects of environmental hygiene;

THE UNITED NATIONS—(SPECIALIZED AGENCIES)

- (j) to promote co-operation among scientific and professional groups which contribute to the advancement of health;
- (k) to propose conventions, agreements and regulations, and make recommendations with respect to international health matters and to perform such duties as may be assigned thereby to the Organization and are consistent with its objective;
- (l) to promote maternal and child health and welfare and to foster the ability to live harmoniously in a changing total environment;
- (m) to foster activities in the field of mental health, especially those affecting the harmony of human relations;
- (n) to promote and conduct research in the field of health;
- (o) to promote improved standards of teaching and training in the health, medical and related professions;
- (p) to study and report on, in co-operation with other specialized agencies where necessary, administrative and social techniques affecting public health and medical care from preventive and curative points of view, including hospital services and social security;
- (q) to provide information, counsel and assistance in the field of health;
- (r) to assist in developing an informed public opinion among all peoples on matters of health;
- (s) to establish and revise as necessary international nomenclatures of diseases, of causes of death and of public health practices;
- (t) to standardize diagnostic procedures as necessary;
- (u) to develop, establish and promote international standards with respect to food, biological, pharmaceutical and similar products;
- (v) generally to take all necessary action to attain the objective of the Organization.

CHAPTER III

Membership in the Organization shall be open to all states.

CHAPTER IV

The work of the Organization shall be carried out by:
The World Health Assembly
The Executive Board
The Secretariat

CHAPTER V

THE WORLD HEALTH ASSEMBLY

The functions of the Health Assembly shall be:

- (a) to determine the policies of the Organization;
- (b) to name the Members entitled to designate a person to serve on the Board;
- (c) to appoint the Director-General;
- (d) to review and approve reports and activities of the Board and of the Director-General and to instruct the Board in regard to matters upon which action, study, investigation or report may be considered desirable;

- (e) to establish such committees as may be considered necessary for the work of the Organization;
- (f) to supervise the financial policies of the Organization and to review and approve the budget;
- (g) to instruct the Board and the Director-General to bring to the attention of Members and of international organizations, governmental or non-governmental, any matter with regard to health which the Health Assembly may consider appropriate;
- (h) to invite any organization, international or national, governmental or non-governmental, which has responsibilities related to those of the Organization, to appoint representatives to participate, without right of vote, in its meetings or in those of the committees and conferences convened under its authority, on conditions prescribed by the Health Assembly; but in the case of national organizations, invitations shall be issued only with the consent of the government concerned;
- (i) to consider recommendations bearing on health made by the General Assembly, the Economic and Social Council, the Security Council or Trusteeship Council of the United Nations, and to report to them on the steps taken by the Organization to give effect to such recommendations;
- (j) to report to the Economic and Social Council in accordance with any agreement between the Organization and the United Nations;
- (k) to promote and conduct research in the field of health by the personnel of the Organization, by the establishment of its own institutions or by co-operation with official or non-official institutions of any Member with the consent of its government;
- (l) to establish such other institutions as it may consider desirable;
- (m) to take any other appropriate action to further the objective of the Organization.

The World Health Assembly shall have authority to adopt regulations concerning:

- (a) sanitary and quarantine requirements and other procedures designed to prevent the international spread of disease;
- (b) nomenclatures with respect to diseases, causes of death and public health practices;
- (c) standards with respect to diagnostic procedures for international use;
- (d) standards with respect to the safety, purity, and potency of biological, pharmaceutical and similar products moving in international commerce;
- (e) advertising and labelling of biological, pharmaceutical and similar products moving in international commerce.

CHAPTER VI

THE EXECUTIVE BOARD

The Board shall consist of twenty-four persons designated by as many Members.

THE UNITED NATIONS—(SPECIALIZED AGENCIES)

The Board shall meet at least twice a year and shall determine the place of each meeting.

The Board shall elect its chairman from among its members and shall adopt its own rules of procedure.

The functions of the Board shall be:

- (a) to give effect to the decisions and policies of the Health Assembly;
- (b) to act as the executive organ of the Health Assembly;
- (c) to perform any other functions entrusted to it by the Health Assembly;
- (d) to advise the Health Assembly on questions referred to it by that body and on matters assigned to the Organization by conventions, agreements and regulations;
- (e) to submit advice or proposals to the Health Assembly on its own initiative;
- (f) to prepare the agenda of meetings of the Health Assembly;
- (g) to submit to the Health Assembly for consideration and approval a general programme of work covering a specific period;

- (h) to study all questions within its competence;
- (i) to take emergency measures within the functions and financial resources of the Organization to deal with events requiring immediate action. In particular it may authorize the Director-General to take the necessary steps to combat epidemics, to participate in the organization of health relief to victims of a calamity and to undertake studies and research the urgency of which has been drawn to the attention of the Board by any Member or by the Director-General.

CHAPTERS XII-XIX

Budget, Expenses, Voting, Reports, Legal Capacity, Privileges and Immunities, Relations with other Organizations, Amendments, Interpretation and Entry into Force.

PUBLICATIONS

World Health (monthly): illustrated magazine for the general public.

WHO Chronicle (monthly): gives accounts of conferences, meetings of committees and field activities.

Technical Report Series: reports of committees, study groups.

Public Health Papers: contributions to the study of branches of public health.

Monograph Series: technical guides on specific subjects serving as textbooks for the postgraduate worker.

Bulletin of WHO: the scientific periodical of the Organization, published in two volumes annually, each consisting usually of 6 numbers.

Official Records: give full accounts of the World Health

Assembly, meetings of the Executive Board, Annual Report of the Director-General, programme and budget.

Weekly Epidemiological Record: contains notifications and information on the application of the International Health Regulations and notes on current incidence of certain diseases.

World Health Statistics Report (monthly).

World Health Statistics Annual.

International Digest of Health Legislation (quarterly).

Reports on the World Health Situation: issued every 4 years.

The Fourth Report (1965-68) consists of contributions from 131 states preceded by a global health survey.

WORLD METEOROLOGICAL ORGANIZATION—WMO

41 ave. Giuseppe Motta, Geneva, Switzerland

Telephone: 34 64 00.

ORIGIN AND AIMS

HISTORY

International co-operation in meteorology was established on a regular basis at the first Congress of meteorological directors held in Vienna in 1873. In 1947, at Washington, it was decided to establish a new organization founded on an agreement between governments. The Convention of the new World Meteorological Organization was ratified by a large number of countries, and activities began in 1951. It was recognized as a Specialized Agency when the General Assembly, in December 1951, approved an agreement between WMO and the United Nations. Membership is open to any country with a meteorological service which ratifies the Convention, or to whom the Convention is applied.

AIMS

1. To facilitate international co-operation in the establishment of networks of stations and centres to provide meteorological services and observations.
2. To promote the establishment and maintenance of systems for the rapid exchange of weather information.
3. To promote standardization of meteorological observations and ensure the uniform publication of observations and statistics.
4. To further the application of meteorology to aviation, shipping, water problems, agriculture and other human activities.
5. To encourage research and training in meteorology.

THE UNITED NATIONS—(SPECIALIZED AGENCIES)

MEMBERSHIP

(see Table on pages 28-30)

ORGANIZATION

WORLD METEOROLOGICAL CONGRESS

Supreme organ of WMO; convened every four years; all members are entitled to be represented; adopts regulations, approves policy, programme and budget. Next meeting: 1975.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE

Composed of twenty-four members, including the President, three Vice-Presidents and the Presidents of the six Regional Associations; meets at least yearly to prepare studies and recommendations for the Congress; supervises the implementation of Congress resolutions and regulations; informs members on technical matters and offers advice.

REGIONAL ASSOCIATIONS

Members are grouped in six Regional Associations, whose task is to co-ordinate meteorological activity within their regions and to examine, from a regional point of view, questions referred to them by the Executive Committee. Sessions are held at least once every four years.

Africa . . . President: C. A. ABAYOMI (Nigeria).

Asia . . . President: A. H. NAVA'I (Iran).

President: M. F. TAHA (Egypt).

Vice-Presidents: Dr. W. J. GIBBS (Australia), J. BESSEMOULIN (France), Dr. P. KOTESWARAM (India).

SECRETARIAT

Secretary-General: Dr. D. A. DAVIES (United Kingdom).

Deputy Secretary-General: Dr. K. LANGLO (Norway).

The Secretariat serves as the administrative, documentary and information centre of the Organization; undertakes special technical studies; prepares and distributes the approved publications; organizes meetings of WMO constituent bodies; generally acts as a link between the meteorological services of the world, and provides information for the general public.

South America President: O. PICCONE OCAMPO (Peru).

North and Central America President: C. URRUTIA EVANS (Guatemala).

South-West Pacific . . . President: K. RAJENDRAM (Singapore).

Europe . . . President: R. J. SCHNEIDER (Switzerland).

TECHNICAL COMMISSIONS

Eight Technical Commissions composed of experts nominated by members study the applications of meteorology and problems and developments in specialized fields. Sessions are held at least once every four years. The Commissions are:

Commission for Basic Systems (CBS) President (ad interim): O. LÖNNQVIST (Sweden).

Commission for Special Applications of Meteorology and Climatology (CoSAMC) President: H. E. LANDSBERG (U.S.A.).

Instruments and Methods of Observation (CIMO) President: H. TREUSSART (France).

Atmospheric Sciences (CAS) President: W. L. GODSON (Canada).

Aeronautical Meteorology (CAeM) President: P. DUVERGÉ (France).

Agricultural Meteorology (CAGM) President: W. BAIER (Canada).

Hydrology (CHy) President: E. G. POPOV (U.S.S.R.).

Marine Meteorology (CMM) President: J. M. DURY (Belgium).

WMO ACTIVITIES

The activities of WMO are grouped into four main programmes as follows: World Weather Watch, WMO Programme for Education, Training and Research, WMO Programme on the Interaction of Man and his Environment, and the WMO Technical Co-operation Programme.

World Weather Watch. The World Weather Watch (WWW), a world-wide meteorological system composed of the national facilities and services provided by individual members, co-ordinated and in some cases supported by WMO and other international organizations, was first approved for implementation by the Fifth World Meteorological Congress (Geneva, April 1967). A revised and updated plan for the further development of the World Weather Watch during the four-year period 1972-75 was subsequently approved by the Sixth World Meteorological Congress (Geneva, April 1971).

The WWW was originally conceived as the best way to take advantage, for the benefit of all members, of the developments in meteorological satellites and in computer technology, using scientific progress in physical-mathematical procedures of numerical weather prediction. The WWW is a dynamic system, flexible enough to be adapted to changing conditions, and is organized on three levels: the global, the regional and the national.

THE UNITED NATIONS—(SPECIALIZED AGENCIES)

One of the primary responsibilities of WMO is to co-ordinate the acquisition, processing and exchange of meteorological data to permit members to fulfil their responsibilities in the application of meteorology. The WWW therefore contains as essential operational elements the Global Observing System, the Global Data-Processing System and the Global Telecommunication System.

The purpose of the Global Observing System is to produce the basic meteorological and related environmental observational data from all parts of the globe as required by members for operational and research aims. It consists of the regional basic networks and other networks of stations on land and at sea, aircraft meteorological observations, meteorological satellites and other observational devices. The Global Observing System is divided into two sub-systems, the surface-based sub-system and the satellite sub-system. In the WWW plan it is recognized that the surface-based sub-system and the satellite sub-system of the Global Observing System should be regarded as being complementary to each other. The first includes the world-wide network of observing stations where observations are made at exactly the same agreed times, which constitutes the basic conventional source of data. The methods and practices followed are based on internationally agreed decisions and are practically uniform everywhere. In addition to reports from about 8,600 land stations in the regional basic networks some 3,000 aircraft and 6,000 ships contribute to the daily total of 120,000 observations for the surface of the earth and 12,000 observations for the upper-air. These figures are increasing from year to year as more stations are brought into service. Lists of weather stations on land and on ships, code manuals and transmission schedules are issued by WMO and kept up to date by a regular and frequent service of supplements. They are used by meteorological services, airlines, coastal vessels, ships on the high seas and others interested in meteorology.

The successful performance of meteorological satellites has opened up new possibilities of obtaining information on the structure and processes of the atmosphere. The most rapidly developing aspect of the Global Observing System has been in relation to the operational meteorological satellites. Since February 1966, when the first operational satellite was launched, a series of meteorological satellites have been maintained in continuous operation. About 100 members have already installed Automatic Picture Transmission (APT) read-out stations in their countries for the reception of cloud images from the satellites and many others plan to do so in the future.

Meteorological satellites can be divided into two groups: those in polar or near-polar orbits and those in geostationary orbit. The satellite sub-system for the WWW Global Observing System will contain both types in order to provide reasonably complete coverage of the globe and to be able to provide data on (1) clouds both in daylight and at night; (2) snow and ice cover (in cloudless skies); (3) radiation temperature of clouds and of the land and ocean surface (in cloudless regions); (4) distribution of total outgoing short-wave radiation; (5) distribution of total outgoing long-wave radiation; and (6) vertical profiles of temperature and water vapour.

Under the WWW plan a Data-Processing System with World Meteorological Centres (WMC's) at Melbourne,

Moscow and Washington and 23 Regional Meteorological Centres (RMCs) in addition to National Meteorological Centres (NMCs) has been developed and is continuously being improved. The purpose of the system is to make available to all members the basic processed data they require in the form of various analyses, prognoses and meteorological warnings. By making use of the processed data available from the WMCs and RMCs, many members find it possible to concentrate a greater part of their efforts on special-purpose forecasts as well as on small-scale analyses and forecasts, the requirements for which continue to grow rapidly in many fields of application.

To support these centres and the national meteorological services, a Global Telecommunication System has been organized under the WWW with specific regulations concerning the contents as well as the forms and mode of the transmissions. The WWW Global Telecommunication System has been organized on a three-level basis, i.e. the Main Trunk Circuit, linking the WMCs as well as certain Regional Telecommunication Hubs (RTHs), the regional telecommunication networks and the national telecommunication networks.

The WWW plan is being implemented through the application of the basic principle that each country will provide the facilities and services within its territory. However, those developing countries which are unable to do this have been and will be assisted, as far as possible, through the UNDP and through bilateral agreements. A third means of assistance has been and will be the WMO Voluntary Assistance Programme (VAP) which is made up of contributions in the form of equipment or services and in financial form offered by members of WMO. In the case of regions outside the territories of individual countries (i.e. outer space, ocean areas and Antarctica) implementation is based on the principle of voluntary participation of countries by providing facilities and services from their national resources.

The detailed planning and implementation of the WWW is supported by the work of a number of the WMO Technical Commissions in particular by the Commission for Basic Systems. The implementation of the plan is also supported by the activities of the Regional Associations.

WMO Programme for Education, Training and Research.
Education and Training. The success of the WMO World Weather Watch, Global Atmospheric Research Programme and indeed all other aspects of meteorological activity both national or international depend on the availability of well-trained meteorological personnel of all categories in all countries of the world. Substantial progress was achieved in training meteorological personnel during 1973, particularly in the developing countries. More than 400 fellowships were awarded from sources available to WMO. Activities of a general nature such as preparation of training syllabi, publication of lecture notes and other training materials were pursued and intensified throughout the year. Considerable assistance has also been provided to the developing countries through the organization of training seminars and the establishment of Regional Meteorological Training Centres. The Executive Committee Panel of Experts on Meteorological Education and Training acts as the focal and co-ordinating body for all the activities of WMO in the field of meteorological education and training.

Research. The WMO Commission for Atmospheric Sciences (CAS) is the focal point for encouraging and co-ordinating meteorological research activities among member states. The Commission co-ordinates the work and keeps abreast of scientific developments in practically all fields of atmospheric research. The sixth session of the Commission was held in Versailles in November 1973. Questions such as weather modification, numerical weather prediction, atmospheric chemistry, atmospheric pollution, tropical meteorology, the physics of the high atmosphere and Global Atmospheric Research Programme (GARP) projects were given considerable attention.

GARP is one of the major projects within the WMO Research Programme. It is a joint undertaking by WMO and the International Council of Scientific Unions (ICSU). Its main objectives are the study of those physical processes in the troposphere and stratosphere which control changes of the weather, and the determination of the patterns of the atmospheric general circulation which in turn are responsible for the present and future climates. The planning of GARP has advanced considerably during 1973 and it is hoped that theoretical research as well as complex field experiments will further develop in order to test and verify the physical and mathematical basis of long-range weather prediction. National and international GARP sub-programmes are planned and will be carried out in such a way that they can complement the overall GARP objectives. The first international experiment called the GARP Atlantic Tropical Experiment (GATE) will commence in the summer of 1974 and last for 100 days. It will cover the tropical parts of the Atlantic and the African continent. A large number of research vessels, aircraft, geostationary and polar-orbiting satellites will be collecting meteorological data. The purpose of this experiment is to study the inter-actions of physical processes on various meteorological scales and to determine the role of the tropics in the general circulation over middle and high latitudes. The second large international experiment—the First GARP Global Experiment (FGGE)—is at present scheduled to commence in 1977. The purpose of this experiment will be, inter alia, to extend the range of numerical forecasting and to assess the limits of predictability of weather systems.

Other research activities of WMO included the organization of symposia and the publication of a bibliography on tropical research. The Organization also participates actively in the work of other international organizations such as IUGG, COSPAR and IAMAP which have a direct bearing on meteorological research.

WMO Programme on the Interaction of Man and his Environment. This programme includes all the activities aimed at applying meteorological knowledge to human activities. They include such questions as agricultural meteorology, aeronautical meteorology, marine meteorology and other oceanographic matters, human biometeorology, hydrology and water resources, atmospheric pollution, meteorological factors involved in industry, recreation, etc.

In the field of agricultural meteorology and in addition to the activities of CAgM, WMO has initiated in co-operation with FAO, UNDP, UNESCO and WHO, an inter-agency co-ordinating group on agricultural biometeorology. The objectives include the development and implementation of an agrometeorological programme in aid of world food production. Agroclimatological surveys in the Near East, in Africa south of the Sahara, and in the highlands of eastern Africa have been completed. Similar surveys are planned in other areas and related projects, including technical conferences, are being developed.

The Commission for Special Applications of Meteorology and Climatology is particularly concerned with promoting applications to industries, energy consumption, regional land use planning and other such activities having an impact on economic development and environmental protection.

Through CAeM acting in co-operation with expert bodies of the International Civil Aviation Organization, universal regulations have been drawn up and are under continual revision for the supply of weather information for aircraft operations and for planning purposes. Aeronautical climatology, supplying the requirements for specialized meteorological instrumentation at aerodromes and the identification of problems in aeronautical meteorology requiring research are other tasks falling to CAeM.

In view of the intimate relation between oceanography and meteorology, WMO takes an active part in a number of international ocean research projects, in the establishment of ocean stations on the high seas for combined meteorological and oceanographic purposes and in the collection and exchange of the resulting data. WMO is responsible for co-ordinating the international aspects of the global ocean forecast service for meteorological and some of the physical oceanographic parameters. It also has responsibilities in the archiving of ocean-atmosphere environmental data.

Fields of interest common to the Intergovernmental Oceanographic Commission and WMO such as the Integrated Global Ocean Station System, air-sea interaction studies, data management problems and monitoring of marine pollution, are handled through joint Working Groups and joint meetings. The Commission for Marine Meteorology is concerned with the technical marine applications of meteorology. The Executive Committee Panel on meteorological aspects of ocean affairs is responsible for the overall planning of WMO's involvement in ocean affairs.

WMO has an Operational Hydrology Programme (OHP) to promote international co-operation in the field of operational hydrology and water resources. These activities include: promoting development in hydrology related to meteorology and the application of meteorology to water resources; developing, improving and promoting the international standardization of methods, procedures, techniques and terminology in hydrology; promoting international co-operation in the operational aspects of the collection, transmission, processing, storage, retrieval and publication of basic hydrological data and in the development and improvement of methods, procedures and techniques in the design of networks for operational hydrological forecasting, and in the supply of hydrological and related meteorological data for the design of water resources projects; providing for international exchange of experience and promotion of actions meeting the needs of national hydrological services or equivalent bodies concerned mainly with operational hydrology. Arrangements have been made for the representation of hydrological services (or equivalent bodies) of members on the appropriate policy-making bodies of WMO, and WMO Technical Regulations for Operational Hydrology are being implemented by the relevant national services.

The meteorological and hydrological aspects of environmental pollution have been under consideration by several of the Technical Commissions for some time. At its twenty-fifth session in 1973, the Executive Committee decided to co-ordinate the work by establishing an expert panel on atmospheric aspects of environmental pollution and to invite representatives of UN, UNESCO and WHO to participate in the work.

The Technical Commissions whose work is most closely linked with this programme are CAgM, CAS, CHy, CoSAMC and CIMO.

WMO Technical Co-operation Programme. Recognizing that meteorological services contribute significantly to economic development (in the fields of water resources, agriculture, aviation, construction, shipping, fishing, etc.) many countries request the Organization to assist them in the establishment or development of national meteorological and hydrological services and in the training of personnel to operate them. In response to such requests WMO provides technical assistance through its participation in the UNDP and under its own special programmes.

Under the UNDP, WMO assists the countries by providing international experts for advisory, training and operational missions; fellowships; equipment for the installation of observing networks; and support for training seminars and technical conferences. Advice is given on subjects ranging from the establishment, organization and operation of national meteorological services, and the application of meteorological information in the development of various sectors of the national economy, to highly specialized fields, such as the utilization of data from meteorological satellites and the use of electronic computing equipment in meteorological research. Training is provided by WMO experts serving as meteorological instructors in training centres, universities and institutes, and through fellowships for specialized training in foreign training facilities and universities. WMO also participates in large-scale economic development projects which are undertaken to establish observing station networks, that will enable countries to provide information needed for the development of water resource potential (e.g. hydro-electric power, irrigation and flood control projects) and agriculture and coastal zone development, and to develop institutions for the training of personnel and the carrying out of research. In 1973, technical assistance in meteorology was provided to 84 countries at a cost of approximately U.S. $5.5 million.

In addition to the assistance provided under the UNDP mentioned above, WMO also awards fellowships for advanced academic training under its Regular Budget and assists its member countries in implementing the WWW by providing fellowships, equipment and services under the Voluntary Assistance Programme (VAP). Requests have been received for 494 projects under the VAP from 96 members. A total of 308 projects have been approved for implementation, through offers received from various governments, of which 119 have been completed and 189 were in various stages of implementation during 1973.

UNITED NATIONS CHILDREN'S FUND—UNICEF

6th Floor, 866 United Nations Plaza, New York, N.Y. 10017, U.S.A.

Established in 1946, UNICEF was created by the UN General Assembly to continue the relief work carried out by the UN Relief and Rehabilitation Administration in assisting mothers and children in war-devastated countries. During its existence UNICEF has broadened and reoriented its work. Instead of concentrating its activities in the war-devastated countries (mainly in Europe) its assistance is now provided mainly for developing countries. Although still supplying relief in emergency situations arising out of natural and man-made disasters its objective is now to make a major contribution to the economic and social development of the countries assisted, notably in connection with the first and second Development Decades. In its initial activities UNICEF concentrated on helping mothers and young children; its scope now also includes adolescents up to approximately 15 years of age. In its early years UNICEF's assistance was almost exclusively in the fields of health and nutrition; now it encompasses all the needs of children and young people—education, welfare services, training for later employment and community service, as well as health and nutrition.

ORGANIZATION

EXECUTIVE BOARD

The governing body of UNICEF meets once a year to determine policy and consider applications for aid. Countries receiving aid match UNICEF expenditure on all projects and are responsible for their implementation.

Members: Representatives of 30 Countries.

SECRETARIAT

UNICEF is an integral part of the United Nations and personnel are members of the UN Secretariat.

Executive Director: HENRY R. LABOUISSSE (U.S.A.).

REGIONAL OFFICES

Europe and North Africa: Palais des Nations, Geneva, Switzerland.

Africa South of the Sahara: 26–28 Marina, 2nd Floor, Lagos, Nigeria; Electricity House, Harambee Ave., Nairobi, Kenya; Shell Bldg., Ave. Lamblin, Abidjan, Ivory Coast.

South Central Asia: 11 Jorbagh, New Delhi, India.

Eastern Mediterranean: Mimosa Bldg., rue Porthuis, Graham Station, Beirut, Lebanon.

The Americas: Avenida Providencia 329, Santiago, Chile.

East Asia: 19 Phra Atit Rd., Bangkok, Thailand.

ACTIVITIES

In 1973 UNICEF approved new activities, in co-operation with the appropriate Specialized Agencies, bringing the total number of countries and territories receiving UNICEF aid to 111. In the field of health, which still represents the major share of UNICEF's activities, assistance is provided in the creation and development of maternal and child health services, including assistance in the carrying out of family planning programmes and the prevention and treatment of specific diseases (e.g. tuberculosis, malaria, leprosy, yaws and trachoma). In endeavouring to ensure that mothers, children and young people consume adequate supplies of foods essential to healthy growth UNICEF has assisted in the development, production and distribution of milk supplies and of other protein foods. In the field of education aid has been concentrated on teacher-training by special courses and seminars, in the extension of primary and secondary education, and in the provision of books and equipment. Vocational training is provided in association with other agencies, special emphasis being placed upon training suited to both the rural and urban needs and to opportunities. In social welfare activities training is provided for workers engaged in the care of children living in slum and shanty-town conditions, particularly where parents are absent from home during the day, and in providing facilities whereby children can receive attention, care and recreation away from such homes.

In all these and related activities UNICEF devotes well over one-third of its resources to the training of national personnel required for the implementation of assisted projects. In 1973 national staff training for services benefiting children was 242,000. Otherwise its main contribution consists in the provision of supplies, equipment, transport, etc.

Whilst UNICEF's programme concentrates upon long-term programmes for the achievement of its wide range of objectives it continues to provide emergency help in the relief of the suffering of children resulting from war, earthquakes, cyclones, floods and other disasters and in the rehabilitation of emergency situations: Bangladesh, Nigeria, Viet-Nam, Middle East countries, central African countries afflicted seriously by drought causing widespread famine, and Yugoslavia are among countries where such help has recently been provided. Help has also been provided in association with the UNHCR for the children of refugees in west Bengal, Africa, Asia and the Middle East.

FINANCE

UNICEF is financed by voluntary contributions from governments, non-governmental organizations and individuals. For 1972 UNICEF's income was $70,700,000 from the following sources:

Government contributions	49,200,000
Non-governmental contributions	11,700,000
Greeting card operations	6,000,000
Other income	3,800,000

Other funds in trust utilized by UNICEF in financing its activities amounted to $20,800,000, making a grand total of $91,500,000.

The amounts allocated at the Executive Board meeting in April-May 1973 for supplies, equipment, etc., required for projects in the various regions (omitting the cost of staff engaged in operating such projects, the cost of freight, etc.) were:

Africa	15,925,000
Asia	31,001,000
Eastern Mediterranean	723,000
The Americas	6,617,000
Inter-regional	2,812,000

The sums allocated for specific types of programmes were:

ACTIVITIES

Since 1950, UNRWA has fed and provided medical services for the needy among a registered refugee population which now numbers around 1,540,000, including 592,669 in refugee camps. It has served 300,000,000 meals to young children and distributed about 31,000 tons of clothing. A simple but effective community health service has been built up with technical guidance from WHO and there has never been a major epidemic among the refugees in UNRWA's care. An education system has been developed with technical advice and guidance from UNESCO and there are 255,984 children in 546 elementary and preparatory schools operated by UNRWA. UNRWA also operates eight vocational centres (capacity: 4,370 trainees) for training young refugee men and women as teachers or in a variety of industrial and semi-professional skills, with the result that UNRWA has become one of the most important channels for this type of technical assistance in the Middle East.

THE REFUGEES

For UNRWA's purposes, a bona fide Palestine refugee is one whose normal residence was in Palestine for a minimum of two years before the 1948 conflict and who, as a result of the hostilities, lost his home and means of livelihood. To be eligible for assistance, a refugee must reside in one of the "host" countries in which UNRWA operates, and be in need. Children and grandchildren who fulfil certain criteria are also eligible for UNRWA assistance. By June 30th, 1973, there were 1,540,694 persons registered with UNRWA, not all of whom were eligible for assistance.

THE EFFECTS OF THE 1967 HOSTILITIES

After the renewal of Arab-Israeli hostilities in the Middle East in June 1967, hundreds of thousands of people fled from the fighting and Israeli-occupied areas. UNRWA was additionally empowered by a UN General Assembly resolution to provide "humanitarian assistance, as far as practicable, on an emergency basis and as a temporary measure" for those persons other than Palestine refugees who were newly displaced and in urgent need. In practice, UNRWA has lacked the funds to aid the other displaced persons and the main burden of supporting them has fallen on the Arab governments concerned. In agreement with the Israeli government, UNRWA has continued to provide assistance for registered refugees living in the Israeli-occupied territories of the West Bank and the Gaza Strip.

Additionally in the 1972-73 school year an estimated number of 59,484 refugee children received education in government schools and an estimated 9,600 in private schools in the host countries, partly with grants paid by UNRWA.

FINANCE

BUDGET

UNRWA's budget for 1974 is $70,291,009.

In recent years about 95½ per cent of the total income has been contributed by governments, the remainder being provided by voluntary agencies, business corporations and private sources.

UNRWA's average expenditure per refugee per year is about $46, or 13 cents per day.

FINANCIAL DIFFICULTIES

The devaluation of the U.S. $, continued inflation, and a school population increasing at the rate of 12,000 pupils annually have resulted in estimated budget deficits of over $3 million in 1973 and over $10 million in 1974. UNRWA's estimated expenditure in 1974 has risen to $70,291,000 while estimated income is only $59,543,000. If additional income is not forthcoming, the Commissioner-General will have no alternative but to make reductions in the Agency's programmes early in 1974. Refugee education costs now represent 48 per cent of the Agency's budget and are almost entirely cash expenditure. For this reason, any substantial reduction would have to be in the education programme, a move which could not fail to have serious consequences for the refugees.

UNITED NATIONS MILITARY OBSERVER GROUP IN INDIA AND PAKISTAN—UNMOGIP

Kashmir

Established 1949 under the terms of the Karachi Agreement between India and Pakistan to supervise the ceasefire in Kashmir by investigating ceasefire and border violations and incidents. Following the 1971 hostilities, which resulted in the delineation of a Line of Control between the India and Pakistan armies in Kashmir, UNMOGIP's main task has been to observe and report to the UN Secretary-General on developments pertaining to the observance of the ceasefire of December 17th, 1971.

THE UNITED NATIONS—(OTHER BODIES)

ORGANIZATION

As of September 1973, the Group consisted of the Chief Military Observer and Head of Mission, Chief Operations Officer, Chief Administrative Officer, and of 45 military observers and 8 air-crew from the following countries: Australia, Belgium, Canada, Chile, Denmark, Finland, Italy, New Zealand, Norway, Sweden and Uruguay. The observers are stationed on both sides of the Line of Control. Also attached to the Group are international civilian staff members and local personnel, including administrative and finance assistants, travel, movement control, registry and supply officers, secretaries and stenographers, radio operators/technicians, transport officers, vehicle mechanics, etc.

Chief Military Observer: Lieut.-Gen. LUIS TASSARA (Chile).

1974 Estimates: U.S. $1,264,000.

UNITED NATIONS TRUCE SUPERVISION ORGANIZATION—UNTSO

Government House, Jerusalem

Set up to observe and maintain the ceasefire ordered by the Security Council in July 1948 and to assist the parties to the 1949 Armistice Agreements between Egypt, Jordan, Lebanon and Syria on the one hand and Israel on the other in the supervision of the application of those Agreements.

Following the June 1967 war and pursuant to Security Council resolutions of June 1967, United Nations military observers were deployed along the Israeli and Syrian Forward Defended Localities (FDLs) in the Golan Heights and on each side of the Suez Canal. In April 1972, under a Security Council consensus, UNTSO observation operations were extended to southern Lebanon.

As of October 1973, the staff of UNTSO, headed by a Chief of Staff, consists of United Nations advisory and administrative staff (about 200 international civilian staff and 140 local personnel) and 221 military observers provided by the following 16 member states: Argentina, Australia, Austria, Belgium, Canada, Chile, Denmark, Finland, France, Ireland, Italy, the Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Sweden and the United States. Since 1968 two aircraft with aircrew have been provided by the Swiss Government.

Chief of Staff: Maj.-Gen. BENGT LILJESTRAND (Sweden).

UNITED NATIONS HIGH COMMISSIONER FOR REFUGEES— UNHCR

Palais des Nations, 1211 Geneva 10, Switzerland

Telephone: 34 60 11, 33 10 00, 33 20 00, 33 40 00.

The main functions of the Office of the High Commissioner, which was set up in 1950, are to provide international protection for refugees, to seek permanent solutions to their problems by assisting governments and, subject to the former's approval, private organizations to facilitate voluntary repatriation, resettlement in other countries or integration into the country of present residence, as well as to provide supplementary aid and emergency relief to refugees as may be necessary. All activities are carried out under the policy directives of the UN General Assembly or of ECOSOC on a humanitarian and non-political basis. Among legal problems, the Office is called upon to devote special attention to the question of asylum, which is of crucial importance to refugees.

The Office of the High Commissioner concerns itself, as a rule, with groups and categories of refugees which have been determined on an individual basis to come within its mandate under the Statute, and with those refugees whom it is called upon to assist under the terms of the good offices resolutions adopted by the General Assembly of the UN.

The competence of the High Commissioner extends to any person who, owing to well-founded fear of being persecuted for reasons of race, religion, nationality or political opinion, is outside the country of his nationality and is unable or, owing to such fear or for reasons other than personal convenience, remains unwilling to avail himself of the protection of that country; or who, not having a nationality and being outside the country of his former habitual residence, is unable or, owing to such fear or for reasons other than personal convenience, is unwilling to return to it. Refugees meeting these conditions are entitled to the protection of the Office of the High Commissioner irrespective of their geographical location. Refugees who are assisted by other United Nations agencies, or who have the same rights or obligations as nationals of their country of residence, are outside the mandate of UNHCR. The High Commissioner may also undertake special tasks in the wider framework of United Nations activities.

The mandate of the High Commissioner's office was renewed in November 1972 for five years (1974-78).

ORGANIZATION

HIGH COMMISSIONER

High Commissioner (1966-78): Prince SADRUDDIN AGA KHAN.

Deputy High Commissioner: CHARLES H. MACE.

The High Commissioner is elected by the United Nations General Assembly on the nomination of the Secretary-General, and is responsible to the General Assembly and to ECOSOC. On December 3rd, 1973, the High Commissioner was re-elected for a further five years from January 1st, 1974, to December 31st, 1978.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE

The Executive Committee of the High Commissioner's Programme, established by ECOSOC, gives the High Commissioner policy directives in respect of material assistance programmes, and advice at his request in the field of international protection. It meets once a year at Geneva. Special sessions may be called to consider urgent problems. Members: representatives of thirty-one states.

ADMINISTRATION

Following a reorganization in 1972 Headquarters consists of: External Affairs (including Fund Raising, Public Information and Secretariat), Protection, Assistance (with five regional sections), Administration and Management. In addition there are 28 representatives and 9 correspondents, honorary representatives or consultants in various countries.

ACTIVITIES

INTERNATIONAL PROTECTION

The main objective of international protection, which is the primary function of UNHCR, is to help refugees to cease being refugees through the acquisition of the nationality of the country of residence when voluntary repatriation is not applicable, and in the meantime to safeguard their rights and interests and improve their status. UNHCR pursues these objectives through seeking to facilitate naturalization of refugees, promoting the conclusion of inter-governmental legal instruments in favour of refugees and encouraging governments to adopt legal provisions for their benefit.

The main legal instruments concerning refugees are the 1951 Convention relating to the Status of Refugees, and the 1967 Protocol which extends provisions of the Convention to new groups of refugees. The application of these two instruments is supervised by UNHCR.

Other legal instruments directly or indirectly affecting the refugees include the 1954 Convention on the Status of Stateless Persons, the United Nations Convention on the Reduction of Statelessness of 1961, the 1957 Agreement relating to Refugee Seamen and the European Agreement of 1959 on the Suppression of Visas for Refugees.

Other important instruments are: the UN Declaration on Territorial Asylum, a resolution by the Committee of Ministers of the Council of Europe also concerning asylum, and the 1969 Convention adopted by the Organization of African Unity concerning the Specific Aspects of the

Problems of Refugees in Africa, which came into force on November 26th, 1973.

MATERIAL ASSISTANCE TO REFUGEES EMERGENCY RELIEF AND SUPPLEMENTARY AID

Emergency relief is provided in the case of new refugee situations when food supplies and medical aid are required on a large scale at short notice. In recent years this has been the case many times in Africa where the World Food Program has provided considerable food supplies for the refugees' subsistence pending their first harvest.

Supplementary aid is provided for the neediest refugees and may take the form of supplementary feeding, medical aid, or clothing.

VOLUNTARY REPATRIATION

The Office assists refugees wherever possible to overcome difficulties in the way of their repatriation. In cases where no funds are available for their transportation to their homeland, arrangements for payment of the cost involved may be made by UNHCR under its material assistance programmes.

RESETTLEMENT

From its inception UNHCR has been actively engaged in the promotion of resettlement through emigration, in close co-operation with interested governments, the Inter-governmental Committee for European Migration (ICEM), the United States Refugee Program and voluntary agencies concerned with the resettlement of refugees. The task of UNHCR in this field is to negotiate with governments in an endeavour to obtain suitable resettlement opportunities for those refugees both able-bodied and handicapped who opt for this solution, to encourage governments to liberalize their criteria for the admission of refugees and to draw up special immigration schemes for them wherever possible.

INTEGRATION OF REFUGEES IN THEIR COUNTRY OF RESIDENCE

The object of local integration is to assist refugees to become self-supporting in their country of residence. In Europe, this is done either by granting refugees loans for establishment in agriculture, or by assisting them through vocational training or in other ways to learn a skill, or to establish themselves in gainful occupations. One major form of assistance to help refugees leave camps is to provide them with housing.

In addition there are projects for the settlement in institutions of the aged and the sick, rehabilitation projects for handicapped refugees, and counselling projects which are essential for the guidance of refugees in the choice of a solution to their problems.

In accordance with the policy whereby primary responsibility for aid to refugees falls upon their country of residence, arrangements for the provision of material assistance to refugees in various European countries are being increasingly taken over by governments, local authorities and social welfare agencies. UNHCR intervenes where it is necessary for the international community to provide additional aid.

The new groups of refugees in Africa and some of the refugees in Asia are mainly assisted through local settlement in agriculture. In Africa consolidation of the settlement of refugees is effected through close co-operation between UNHCR and other members of the UN system which provide development assistance to the areas concerned.

Educational assistance continues to be provided from UNHCR programmes as far as primary education is concerned and from the UNHCR Education Account as far as post-primary education is concerned. UNHCR continues to co-operate closely with UNESCO in this field, as also with the UN.

The problem of needy individual refugees seeking employment or educational opportunities in urban areas of Africa, and who are mainly without agricultural background, claims special attention. Efforts to help them are made by the OAU Bureau for the Placement and Education of Refugees, while increased support is being given to special refugee counselling services, operating through voluntary agencies in Dakar, Nairobi and Addis Ababa, assisted by UNHCR and other UN agencies.

FINANCE

The UNHCR material assistance programmes are financed from voluntary contributions made by governments and also from non-governmental sources. The target of the UNHCR programme for 1973 was $7,839,400, and that of 1974 is $8,739,000. The target for the 1974 Programme was approved by the Executive Committee at its Twenty-Fourth Session held in October 1973.

In addition there is a $500,000 Emergency Fund on which UNHCR can draw to meet emergency situations. Furthermore, essential complementary assistance outside the current programme, including the Education Account, is financed from Special Trust Funds donated to or channelled through UNHCR. The special tasks which may be undertaken by the High Commissioner are financed separately.

BUDGET

The UNHCR budget for the biennium 1974-75 is U.S. $10,904,000.

ACTIVITIES, 1972-73

International Protection: The Office has pursued its effort to encourage the adoption and implementation of international agreements affecting refugees. As of December 31st, 1973, 64 states had become parties to the 1951 Convention Relating to the Status of Refugees, and 56 had acceded to the 1967 Protocol. Several governments acceded to the OAU Convention of 1969 governing specific aspects of refugee problems in Africa and bringing to 14 the number of parties to this instrument which consequently came into force in November 1973.

The Office continued to assist in determining the status of refugees in a number of countries and in promoting improvements in respect of their economic and social rights.

With regard to the vital principle of non-refoulement, there have still been cases where refugees were returned

The main objective of international protection, which is the primary function of UNHCR, is to help refugees to cease being refugees through the acquisition of the nationality of the country of residence when voluntary repatriation is not applicable, and in the meantime to safeguard their rights and interests and improve their status. UNHCR pursues these objectives through seeking to facilitate naturalization of refugees, promoting the conclusion of inter-governmental legal instruments in favour of refugees and encouraging governments to adopt legal provisions for their benefit.

The main legal instruments concerning refugees are the 1951 Convention relating to the Status of Refugees, and the 1967 Protocol which extends provisions of the Convention to new groups of refugees. The application of these two instruments is supervised by UNHCR.

Other legal instruments directly or indirectly affecting the refugees include the 1954 Convention on the Status of Stateless Persons, the United Nations Convention on the Reduction of Statelessness of 1961, the 1957 Agreement relating to Refugee Seamen and the European Agreement of 1959 on the Suppression of Visas for Refugees.

Other important instruments are: the UN Declaration on Territorial Asylum, a resolution by the Committee of Ministers of the Council of Europe also concerning asylum, and the 1969 Convention adopted by the Organization of African Unity concerning the Specific Aspects of the

INTERNATIONAL ATOMIC ENERGY AGENCY—IAEA

Kaerntnerring 11, 1010 Vienna, Austria

Telephone: 52 45 11.

Founded in 1957, an autonomous intergovernmental organization related to the United Nations by the terms of an Agreement which recognizes it as "the agency under the aegis of the United Nations responsible for international activities concerned with the peaceful uses of atomic energy". Its objectives are "to seek to accelerate and enlarge the contributions of atomic energy to peace, health and prosperity throughout the world" and "to ensure that assistance provided by it or at its request or under its supervision or control is not used in such a way as to further any military purpose."

ORGANIZATION

(see also Summary of Statute, p. 86)

GENERAL CONFERENCE

Consists of representatives of all member states. It convenes each year to participate in the general debate on the Agency's policy and programme.

President (1973): R. W. BOSWELL (Australia).

BOARD OF GOVERNORS

Consists of 34 member states, 12 designated by the Board of Governors and 22 elected by the General Conference. It has authority to carry out the functions of the Agency in accordance with the Statute and subject to its responsibilities to the General Conference. It meets four or five times a year to consider matters proposed to it by member states or the Director-General. It approves and submits the draft budget and the Agency's programme to the General Conference. Every fourth year it appoints a Director-General subject to approval by the General Conference.

Board Members (1973-74): Algeria, Argentina, Australia, Brazil, Bulgaria, Canada, Chile, Costa Rica, Czechoslovakia, Denmark, France, Gabon, Federal Republic of Germany, Ghana, Hungary, India, Indonesia, Ireland, Italy, Japan, Republic of Korea, Lebanon, Mexico, Pakistan, Peru, Philippines, Saudi Arabia, South Africa, Sudan, Sweden, Switzerland, U.S.S.R., U.K., U.S.A.

Chairman (1973-74): N. FUJIIYAMA (Japan).

SECRETARIAT

Consists of approximately 346 professional staff and about 780 general service staff. It is headed by the Director-General who is assisted by four Deputy Directors-General and an Inspector-General. The Secretariat is divided into five departments: Technical Assistance and Publications; Technical Operations; Research and Isotopes; Safeguards and Inspection; Administration.

Director-General (reappointed 1973 for a term of four years): Dr. SIGVARD EKLUND (Sweden).

SCIENTIFIC ADVISORY COMMITTEE

The Committee was set up in 1958 to advise the Board of Governors and the Director-General upon scientific and technical matters. In 1973, the following distinguished scientists were appointed for terms of three years.

Dr. M. A. EL-GUEBILY (Egypt), Dr. BERTRAND GOLDSCHMIDT (France), Dr. W. B. LEWIS (Canada), Dr. T. IPPONMATSU (Japan), Prof. H. G. CARVALHO (Brazil), Dr. G. F. TAPE (U.S.A.), Dr. HOMI N. SETHNA (India), Dr. A. LOGUNOV (U.S.S.R.), Prof. I. DOSTROVSKY (Israel), Prof. W. HÄFELE (Federal Republic of Germany), Dr. W. C. MARSHALL (U.K.), Prof. B. F. STRAUB (Hungary).

ACTIVITIES

Technical Assistance and Training. In 1972 the IAEA provided 232 experts, lecturers and visiting professors to 54 developing countries; awarded 739 fellowships for individual study and participation in training projects; and supplied equipment valued at $1,922,100 to 54 countries and 20 regional projects. Six regional and inter-regional training courses, two demonstration projects and three study tour-seminars were conducted for 549 participants from 51 different countries.

Food and Agriculture. In co-operation with FAO, the Agency's programme covers research on the use of radiation and isotopes in six fields: plant improvement by induced mutation; control of destructive insects by the sterile-male technique; improvement of livestock nutrition and preparation of radiation animal vaccines; study of effects of chemical pollution in agriculture and food; preservation of food by irradiation; isotope studies on the efficiency of nitrogen and phosphate fertilizer. Over 200 research contracts and agreements are carried out in over 20 co-ordinated research programmes. In addition, 2 open symposia, 6-8 expert panels and several research co-ordination meetings are held each year; the proceedings are usually published.

THE UNITED NATIONS—(OTHER BODIES)

to their country of origin and of persons who, while fulfilling the criteria of refugee status, were not allowed to remain in the country where they had found asylum. In some cases, remedial action was taken following UNHCR intervention. Consultations with governments were continued in respect of the draft convention on territorial asylum which was submitted to the attention of the General Assembly in 1972.

After the recent change of government in Chile, UNHCR was called on to intervene with a view to safeguarding the rights and interests of refugees from other Latin American countries living in Chile.

Assistance: In carrying out its programme of material assistance, the Office has continued to receive the active co-operation and assistance of governments, other agencies of the UN system and voluntary agencies. In 1972, the number of refugees receiving such assistance amounted to some 250,000, the majority of whom were helped with a view to their local settlement. In 1973, there was a great increase in the number of beneficiaries because of the large-scale repatriation of Sudanese.

Assistance activities were being mainly centred in Africa where efforts have continued towards the settlement of refugees in agriculture, the provision of educational and health facilities, and the counselling of refugees in urban areas whose problems have become increasingly acute through limited employment opportunities.

Events of special concern to UNHCR in 1973 included the emergency caused by the exodus from Burundi of some 48,000 refugees who crossed, in May, into Tanzania, Rwanda and Zaire. In 1973, the number grew to 90,000, half of them in Tanzania. A further movement of refugees from colonial territories in Southern Africa took place. Assistance projects continued to be put into effect for them in Botswana, Senegal, Tanzania, Zaire and Zambia. In countries neighbouring the Sudan, and in particular in the Central Africa Republic and in Ethiopia, UNHCR assistance could be reduced following the return home of Sudanese refugees.

In Asia, UNHCR assistance under the regular programme gradually phased out as the beneficiaries made progress towards their integration.

In Europe, the decrease of refugees through voluntary repatriation, migration or naturalization, was offset in 1972 by the number of newly recognized refugees and new arrivals, mainly from the Caribbean area into Spain. Moreover, there was a decrease in emigration opportunities. In 1973, however, the number of refugees from the Caribbean area to Spain was reduced through their re-settlement overseas. On the other hand, the growing number of other non-European asylum seekers caused new problems.

In Latin America, UNHCR efforts continued in favour of aged and handicapped European refugees. The main development in 1973 was the emergence of the problem of Latin American refugees in Chile who wished to emigrate to other countries. Following an appeal for resettlement opportunities by UNHCR, offers were received from 19 countries for an estimated 1,600 out of the 2,600 refugees registered for emigration. Meanwhile, emergency assistance was arranged for them by the newly set up National Committee for Aid to Refugees and UNHCR. A number of Chileans also sought refuge in neighbouring countries and in embassies in Santiago.

Special Assignments: In the latter part of 1972, the High Commissioner was called on to assist some 4,500 Asians of undetermined nationality who were being expelled from Uganda. In response to the appeal by the High Commissioner, some 3.5 million dollars were contributed for the cost of maintenance and transportation of these refugees and resettlement opportunities were offered by some 20 countries. By the end of 1973, places were still needed for over one hundred, many of them handicapped. There also remained some 1,500 Asians from Uganda scattered throughout many countries who need to be reunited with their families.

Another important task assigned to the High Commissioner in 1972 outside his regular activities was that of co-ordinating the United Nations Emergency Relief Programme in the South Sudan. This programme was put into effect with the co-operation of several other UN agencies following the Addis Ababa Agreement of February 1972, with a view to paving the way for the return of some 180,000 Sudanese refugees and half a million Sudanese displaced inside the country. By the end of 1973, over 150,000 refugees had been repatriated, as well as the majority of the displaced persons. Financial contributions channelled through UNHCR for this operation have totalled some $20 million which were mainly used to bring food and supplies from the north and to repair and rebuild roads, schools and hospitals in the south.

Following the New Delhi Agreement of August 1973, the High Commissioner was asked by the Secretary-General to act as executing agent for the transfer of more than 200,000 persons on the sub-continent: mainly Bengalis from Pakistan to Bangladesh, and non-Bengalis from Bangladesh to Pakistan. In September, the High Commissioner launched an appeal for over $14 million in cash and in kind to finance this operation. By the end of 1973, an amount of $7.3 million had been pledged towards this target (not including air and sea transport made available by some governments), and more than 105,000 persons had been moved, including about 73,500 Bengalis from Pakistan, some 30,700 non-Bengalis from Bangladesh and 6,000 stranded Pakistanis from Nepal.

THE UNITED NATIONS—(OTHER BODIES)

Laboratories. The IAEA operates three laboratories, one in Seibersdorf, Austria, one at the Agency's headquarters in Vienna and one in Monaco devoted to the study of marine radioactivity. The Seibersdorf and Headquarters Laboratories, working jointly, provide services for many of the Agency's programmes in physics, chemistry, hydrology, nuclear medicine, dosimetry and agriculture. This work involves the analysis of hundreds of samples of plant material in fertilizer research, the preparation and inter-comparison of labelled compounds for use in nuclear medicine and the analysis of water samples for isotope content. An agreement between the Agency, the Government of the Principality of Monaco and the Oceanographic Institute at Monaco established the IAEA International Laboratory on the Mediterranean coast. This agreement has been extended until the end of 1974. The laboratory will concentrate on the study of health and safety aspects concerning radioactive pollution of the sea. It is anticipated to extend the programme to include studies on non-radioactive pollution.

Centre for Theoretical Physics. One of IAEA's outstanding contributions in pure science has been the establishment, in 1964, of the International Centre for Theoretical Physics at Trieste, Italy. With the support of the Italian Government and other organizations, the Centre brings together scientists from the developed and the developing countries; one effect of this has been to encourage those of the latter group to remain in their home countries and continue the work of scientific development there.

From 1970 the Centre has been operated jointly by IAEA and UNESCO. Each year it offers one or more lengthy seminars followed by a research workshop, as well as short topical seminars, training courses, symposia and panels. Independent research is also carried out. The programme concentrates on high-energy and elementary particle physics, solid-state physics, low-energy physics and the theory of nuclear reactions, plasma physics and mathematics and the computer sciences.

Supplying Fissionable Materials. The Agency is empowered by its Statute to serve as an intermediary in arranging the delivery of special fissionable materials to member states. By October 1973, 154 transfers of such material, about half of them gifts, had been made to 36 recipient countries. All material supplied was for research reactors or other research purposes. Supplier States have been Belgium, Canada, France, the Federal Republic of Germany, Sweden, the U.S.S.R., U.K. and the U.S.A. The fund of special fissionable material still available to the Agency for supply to its members is almost 5,000 kilograms of uranium-235 contained in enriched uranium. However, a request already received for enriched uranium for a power reactor in Mexico will use most of this material. Negotiations with supplying countries are under way regarding additional quantities.

BUDGET

The Regular Budget for 1973, original appropriation, amounts to $18,127,000; the Regular Budget for 1974 will be $25,064,000. The target for voluntary contributions to finance the IAEA programme of technical assistance is $3.0 million.

SUMMARY OF THE STATUTE

(Adopted October 23rd, 1956)

The Agency is authorized:

1. To encourage and assist research on, and development and practical application of, atomic energy for peaceful uses throughout the world; and, if requested to do so, to act as an intermediary for the purposes of securing the performance of services or the supplying of materials, equipment, or facilities by one member of the Agency for another; and to perform any operation or service useful in research on, or development or practical application of, atomic energy for peaceful purposes.

2. To make provision, in accordance with this Statute for materials services, equipment, and facilities to meet the needs of research on, and development and practical application of, atomic energy for peaceful purposes, including the production of electric power, with due consideration for the needs of the under-developed areas of the world.

3. To foster the exchange of scientific and technical information on peaceful uses of atomic energy.

4. To encourage the exchange and training of scientists and experts in the field of peaceful uses of atomic energy.

5. To establish and administer safeguards designed to ensure that special fissionable and other materials, services, equipment, facilities, and information made available by the Agency or at its request or under its supervision or control are not used in such a way as to further any military purpose; and to apply safeguards, at the request of the parties, to any bilateral or multilateral arrangement or, at the request of a State, to any of that State's activities in the field of atomic energy.

6. To establish or adopt, in consultation and, where appropriate, in collaboration with the competent organs of the United Nations and with the specialized agencies concerned, standards of safety for protection of health and minimization of danger to life and property (including such standards for labour conditions), and to provide for the application of these standards to its own operations as well as to the operations making use of materials, services, Life Sciences. The Agency's programme, in co-operation with WHO, includes projects in the fields of medical applications of radioisotopes, dosimetry for intentional radiation applications and radiation biology. The Agency provides experts and equipment in these fields to member states, awards fellowships for individual study and organizes training courses and study tours, and awards research contracts and agreements. There are about 70 current research contracts and agreements in the field of medical applications of radioisotopes, 10 in radiation dosimetry and 40 in radiation biology, many of these forming part of co-ordinated research programmes supported by work in the Agency's headquarters laboratory. Questions of intercomparison and standardization of techniques form an important part of the programme. Scientific meetings are linked with the programme. At present 2-3 open symposia, 4-6 meetings of expert panels and a number of smaller consultants' meetings dealing with the life sciences are organized each year and their proceedings published.

Physical Sciences. The Agency's programme in physical sciences is designed specifically for practical problems in the use of atomic energy; particularly the introduction of nuclear power into developing countries. Regular international conferences on fission physics, neutron inelastic scattering, and controlled nuclear fusion are held for this purpose. Panel meetings of experts are also frequently convened, usually on topics of special interest to the technical assistance programmes, such as: the utilization of neutron generators; pulsed neutron sources; low-energy accelerators; and the Mössbauer technique. In co-operation with UNESCO, FAO and other UN organizations, the Agency provides experts to member states in the application of nuclear techniques to water resource investigations. The Isotope Hydrology Laboratory provides analytical support to co-operative field studies in member states and to the IAEA/WMO isotopes-in-precipitation survey and distributes standards for stable isotope (D, 180) and tritium calibration. Applications of nuclear methods for raw materials exploration and for trace element analysis are being encouraged. Meetings concerned with homodynamics and analytical chemistry of nuclear materials are being sponsored. Analytical quality control programmes involving developing member states are being carried out.

Nuclear Power and Reactors. The Agency provides advice and assistance to member states on the technical feasibility, design, technology and economics of power reactor systems. Economic studies relating to nuclear power are made, including world energy needs and the future role of nuclear power. Using methodologies recently developed in a Nuclear Market Survey in 14 developing countries, the Agency can now make long-range generation planning studies. Member states are advised about the feasibility of installing any specific nuclear power plant, and assisted in the use of research reactors and in the exploration and evaluation of uranium reserves. Information is collected and disseminated on power and research reactors and on world resources of uranium. The Agency's role in co-ordinating research and developing an exchange of information is carried out by a number of international working groups, panels and training courses. Regional study groups have been used to stimulate reactor science and technology in developing countries.

Nuclear Safety and Environmental Protection. In co-operation with other international organizations, the Agency has established basic standards and recommendations relating to all aspects of radiation safety under normal and emergency conditions. Forty publications concerning these standards and recommendations have been issued, as well as numerous technical reports on the safe design and operation of nuclear facilities and utilization and handling of radioactive materials. IAEA regulations, revised 1972, for the safe transport of radioactive materials have been adopted as legal standards by many governments and are observed by nearly all international organizations concerned with transport. Studies are continuing on the development of environmental monitoring programmes and the application of radiation doses to the population. There has been increased emphasis on minimizing environmental contamination; work in progress includes: implementation of the London Convention governing disposals of radioactive wastes; and studies on the behaviour of radionuclides in marine and other environments. The Agency provided assistance to member states in assessing the safety of proposed and operating nuclear facilities, and in the selection of suitable sites for nuclear power reactors. First steps have been taken to organize regulatory activities by member states. Health and safety missions visited several research reactors.

Information and Technical Services. The International Nuclear Information System (INIS), the first international, decentralized and computerized information-handling scheme, began operations in 1970. INIS provides a world catalogue of technical information (INIS Atomindex) relating to the peaceful uses of nuclear energy. Each year the IAEA organizes 12 to 15 large international conferences and some 40 smaller meetings, and publishes papers presented at these. The headquarters library contains approximately 30,000 books, 180,000 reports, 550 films and 1,440 serial titles. At the Nuclear Data Section, which collaborates with three other principal centres at Brookhaven (U.S.A.), Obninsk (U.S.S.R.) and the Nuclear Energy Agency (NEA) centre at Saclay (France), the world's neutron data are collected, reviewed and distributed, free of charge.

Safeguards. Of the 75 Non-Nuclear Weapon States which are party to the Treaty for the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons, 37 have signed the safeguard agreement required by that treaty, 20 of which have significant quantities of nuclear material. Of these 37 agreements, 28 are in force (15 with states having significant quantities of nuclear material). In addition an agreement in connection with NPT has been signed with EURATOM and its Non-Nuclear Weapon Member States. Four of the 18 states party to the Treaty for the Prohibition of Nuclear Weapons in Latin America (Tlatelolco Treaty) have signed the safeguard agreement required by it, which also satisfies NPT requirements; two of these agreements are in force.

Where safeguards agreements have been concluded, and all formalities completed, the Agency is now applying safeguards to nuclear materials in 27 nuclear power stations, 107 other types of reactors, and 145 other facilities. Development and standardization is continuing in these procedures; and research and development work is also being pursued for improving equipment for measurement and surveillance.

SUMMARY OF THE STATUTE

The Agency is authorized:

1. To encourage and assist research on, and development and practical application of, atomic energy for peaceful uses throughout the world; and, if requested to do so, to act as an intermediary for the purposes of securing the performance of services or the supplying of materials, equipment, or facilities by one member of the Agency for another; and to perform any operation or service useful in research on, or development or practical application of, atomic energy for peaceful purposes.

To make provision, in accordance with this Statute for materials services, equipment, and facilities to meet the needs of research on, and development and practical application of, atomic energy for peaceful purposes, including the production of electric power, with due consideration for the needs of the under-developed areas of the world.

3. To foster the exchange of scientific and technical information on peaceful uses of atomic energy.

4. To encourage the exchange and training of scientists and experts in the field of peaceful uses of atomic energy.

5. To establish and administer safeguards designed to ensure that special fissionable and other materials, services, equipment, facilities, and information made available by the Agency or at its request or under its supervision or control are not used in such a way as to further any military purpose; and to apply safeguards, at the request of the parties, to any bilateral or multilateral arrangement or, at the request of a State, to any of that State's activities in the field of atomic energy.

6. To establish or adopt, in consultation and, where appropriate, in collaboration with the competent organs of the United Nations and with the specialized agencies concerned, standards of safety for protection of health and minimization of danger to life and property (including such standards for labour conditions), and to provide for the application of these standards to its own operations as well as to the operations making use of materials, services, equipment, facilities, and information made available by the Agency or at its request or under its control or supervision; and to provide for the application of these standards, at the request of the parties; to operations under any bilateral or multilateral arrangement, or, at the request of a State, to any of that State's activities in the field of atomic energy.

7. To acquire or establish any facilities, plant and equipment useful in carrying out its authorised functions, whenever the facilities, plant, and equipment otherwise available to it in the area concerned are inadequate or available only on terms it deems unsatisfactory.

ORGANIZATION

General Conference. A General Conference consisting of representatives of all members shall meet in regular annual session and in such special sessions as shall be convened. The Conference may discuss any matters within the scope of this statute or relating to the powers and functions of any organs provided for in this Statute, and may make recommendations.

The General Conference shall:

1. Elect members of the Board of Governors.
2. Approve states for membership.
3. Consider the annual report of the Board.
4. Approve reports to be submitted to the United Nations.
5. Approve any agreement or agreements between the Agency and the United Nations and other organizations.
6. Approve rules and limitations regarding the exercise of borrowing powers.
7. Approve amendments to the Statute.
8. Approve the appointment of the Director-General.

Board of Governors. The Board of Governors is chosen by rules laid down in Article VI of the Statute.

The Board shall have authority to carry out the functions of the Agency in accordance with the Statute, subject to its responsibilities to the General Conference. It shall meet at such times as it may determine and may establish such committees as it deems advisable.

The Board shall prepare an annual report and any other reports the Agency is required to make. These shall be submitted to the General Conference.

Staff. The staff of the Agency shall be headed by a Director-General. The Director-General shall be appointed by the Board of Governors with the approval of the General Conference for a term of four years. The Director-General shall be responsible for the appointment, organization, and functioning of the staff. The staff shall include such qualified scientific and technical and other personnel as may be required to fulfil the objectives and functions of the Agency. The Agency shall be guided by the principle that its permanent staff shall be kept to a minimum.

Information and Materials. Each member should make available such information as would, in the judgment of the member, be helpful to the Agency.

Members may make available to the Agency such quantities of special fissionable materials as they deem advisable and on such terms as shall be agreed with the Agency. On request of the Agency a member shall deliver to another member or group of members such quantities of such materials as the Agency may specify. The Agency shall be responsible for storing and protecting materials in its possession. It shall ensure that these materials shall be safeguarded against hazards of the weather, unauthorised removal or diversion, damage or destruction, including sabotage, and forcible seizure. In storing special fissionable materials, in its possession, the Agency shall ensure the geographical distribution of these materials in such a way as not to allow concentration of large amounts of such materials in any one country or region of the world.

Projects and Safeguards. Any member or group of members of the Agency desiring to set up any research project for peaceful purposes may request the assistance of the Agency in securing special fissionable and other materials. For the purpose of considering the request, the Agency may send into the territory of the member or group persons qualified to examine the project.

With respect to any Agency project the Agency shall have the following rights and responsibilities:

1. To examine the design of specialised equipment and facilities, including nuclear reactors, and to approve it only from the viewpoint of assuring that it will not further any military purpose, that it complies with applicable health and safety standards.
2. To require the maintenance and production of operating records and progress reports.
3. To approve the means to be used for the chemical processing of irradiated materials solely to ensure that this chemical processing will not lend itself to diversion of materials for military purposes and will comply with applicable health and safety standards.
4. To send into the territory inspectors who shall have access at all times to all places and data and relevant persons.

Finance. The Board of Governors shall submit to the General Conference the annual budget estimates for the expenses of the Agency.

Expenditure shall be classified as:

1. Administrative expenses (including costs of staff and meetings and costs of implementing safeguards).
2. Expenses in connection with any materials, facilities, plant, and equipment acquired or established by the Agency.

The Board shall have the authority to exercise borrowing powers on behalf of the Agency.

Privileges and Immunities. The Agency shall enjoy in the territory of each member such legal capacity and such privileges and immunities as are necessary for the exercise of its functions.

Disputes. Any question or dispute concerning the interpretation or application of this Statute which is not settled by negotiation shall be referred to the International Court of Justice unless the parties concerned agree on another mode of settlement.

WORLD FOOD PROGRAM—WFP

Via delle Terme di Caracalla, Rome, Italy

WFP is a joint UN-FAO effort to stimulate economic and social development through aid in the form of food and to provide emergency relief. It became operational in January 1963 after parallel resolutions of the UN General Assembly and the FAO Conference to establish it in late 1961.

ORGANIZATION

Intergovernmental Committee: 24 members, 12 elected by ECOSOC and 12 by FAO.

Joint UN-FAO Administrative Unit: carries out the day-to-day activities of the WFP.

Executive Director: FRANCISCO AGUIÑO. (El Salvador)

ACTIVITIES

Member governments of the United Nations and FAO make voluntary contributions of commodities, cash, and services (particularly shipping) to WFP, which uses the food for emergency relief for victims of natural and man-made disasters and for support for economic and social development projects in the developing countries. The food is supplied, for example, as an incentive in development self-help schemes, as part wages in labour-intensive projects of many kinds, particularly in the rural economy, but also in the industrial field, and in support of institutional feeding schemes where the emphasis is mainly on enabling the beneficiaries to have an adequate and balanced diet. In some cases it is feed for livestock that is supplied, the introduction of modern feeding practices leading to increased production and thus to an improvement of the people's nutrition. Recipient governments are encouraged to take steps to replace the WFP aid as soon as each project, which may be for anything up to five years, comes to an end.

As at December 31st, 1973, 591 development projects in 88 countries had been approved since the beginning of the Programme's operations at a total cost to WFP of $1,374,983,622. Broken down by region: in Latin America and the Caribbean, 85 projects in 23 countries; in North Africa and the Near East, 123 projects in 11 countries; in West Africa, 115 projects in 22 countries; in Mediterranean Europe and East Africa, 102 projects in 17 countries; in Asia and the Far East, 166 projects in 16 countries. In addition, 174 emergency operations have been undertaken in 74 countries at a total cost to the Programme of $133,488,842.

The biggest single project ever undertaken is for the development of the dairy industry in several areas of India at a total cost to the Programme of nearly $56 million.

RESOURCES

As at December 31st, 1973, the resources made available to the Programme through voluntary contributions by governments, including pledges for the period 1973-74, stood at a total of $1,199,096,643; $886,565,647 were in commodities and $312,530,996 in cash and services. A further $83,360,568 worth of food grains was made available to the Programme by signatories of the Food Aid Convention. The target set by the UN and FAO for the pledging period 1973-74 amounts to $340 million.

UNITED NATIONS CONFERENCE ON TRADE AND DEVELOPMENT— UNCTAD

Telephone: 34 60 11, 31 02 11.

UNCTAD was set up as an organ of the UN General Assembly by a resolution of December 1964. It is a world-wide forum with the largest membership (145 states) of any international organization. Its aim is to evolve a co-ordinated set of policies, to be adopted by all its member states, designed to accelerate the economic development of the developing countries. In the context of this broad objective, UNCTAD's concern covers the entire spectrum of policies in both developed and developing countries which influence the external trade and payments and economic development of developing countries.

MEMBERSHIP

(see Table on pages 28-30)

ORGANIZATION

CONFERENCE

First session, Geneva, March 23rd-June 16th, 1964.
Second session, New Delhi, February 1st-March 29th, 1968. Third session, Santiago, April 13th-May 21st, 1972.

Secretary-General: GAMANI COREA (Sri Lanka).

TRADE AND DEVELOPMENT BOARD

Between Conferences, the continuing work of the organization is carried out by the Trade and Development Board together with its various committees and subsidiary bodies. Sessions of the Board are generally held annually towards the end of summer. Fourteenth session: August 20th-September 13th, 1974.

MAIN COMMITTEES 1974

Committee on Commodities; Permanent Group on Synthetics and Substitutes (attached to the Committee on Commodities); sixth session, September 23rd-27th; Committee on Manufactures: sixth session (second part), July 1st-12th; Committee on Invisibles and Financing Related to Trade; Committee on Shipping: sixth session, March 11th-12th; Special Committee on Preferences: sixth session, May 20th-31st; Intergovernmental Group on the Transfer of Technology: third session, July 15th-26th; Working Group on the Charter of Economic Rights and Duties of States: third session, February 4th-22nd, fourth session, June 10th-28th.

INTERGOVERNMENTAL CONSULTATIONS

In addition, the UNCTAD calendar provides for intergovernmental consultations over 1974 on a series of commodities including rice; citrus fruits; jute; oilseeds, oils and fats; hides and skins; grains, excluding wheat; manganese ore; phosphates; tobacco; hard fibres; bananas; tea; and cotton.

ACTIVITIES

UNCTAD co-operates closely with other international organizations operating in the trade, development and financing fields and is actively engaged in technical assistance activities. To some extent, UNCTAD has placed the development problems of the Third World in the forefront of the preoccupations of the international community. Indeed, the greater part of the United Nations International Development Strategy for the Second Development Decade directly reflects the consensus reached on these problems in UNCTAD. A few examples of UNCTAD activities are referred to below.

The UNCTAD secretariat is actively assisting developing countries in their preparation for, and participation in, the multilateral trade negotiations launched by GATT in 1973. In addition, UNCTAD itself is engaged in co-ordinating a series of intensive intergovernmental consultations designed to explore ways of reducing existing trade barriers to the primary commodity exports of developing countries, and of improving their prices. UNCTAD is the United Nations organization responsible for the convening of commodity conferences: in 1973, the International Olive Oil Agreement was extended by the adoption of a Protocol, and a new Sugar Agreement, though without economic provisions, was concluded to enter into force on January 1st, 1974. The International Cocoa Agreement, negotiated in 1972, entered into force on June 30th, 1973.

As regards trade in manufactures, a major breakthrough was achieved earlier by UNCTAD's Generalized System of Preferences (GSP), under which tariff preferences are granted by developed countries to imports of specified manufactured and semi-manufactured products from developing countries. Much, however, remains to be done to improve the present schemes and to achieve universal implementation. UNCTAD is endeavouring to reduce or eliminate also non-tariff barriers and restrictive business practices which adversely affect exports by developing countries. In the financial field, effective liaison operates between UNCTAD and the international financial institutions—the World Bank and the International Monetary Fund on the external financing problems of developing countries, and UNCTAD is represented among the Deputies of the Committee of Twenty considering the reform of the international monetary system.

Also in 1973, UNCTAD was engaged in negotiating a code of conduct for liner conferences; another noteworthy new initiative was the preparation of a draft charter on economic rights and duties of states.

BUDGET

1973: U.S. $11,409,000.

1974 (Estimate): U.S. $13,043,000.

The estimated budget for the biennium 1974-75 is U.S. $28,135,000.

PUBLICATIONS

There were 19 UNCTAD sales publications in 1973, including six volumes covering the proceedings of the third session of the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development which was held in 1972, in Santiago de Chile. Other subjects include restrictive business practices, review of maritime transport, international trade and development statistics, the economic consequences of the closure of the Suez Canal, trade and development policies in the 1970s, the United Nations Cocoa Conference, 1972 (proceedings), the United Nations Conference on Olive Oil (proceedings), and three volumes on economic integration among the developing countries.

UNITED NATIONS RESEARCH INSTITUTE FOR SOCIAL DEVELOPMENT—UNRISD

Palais des Nations, 1211 Geneva 10, Switzerland

Established in 1964 as an autonomous UN activity to conduct research into problems and policies of social development and economic development during different phases of economic growth.

ORGANIZATION

BOARD

Supervises the activities of the Institute. Members include representatives of the Secretary-General of UN, of two of the four Specialized Agencies directly concerned (ILO, UNESCO, FAO, WHO) in rotation, and of the UN regional institutes for Asia, Latin America and Africa, as well as the Institute's Director and seven individuals nominated by the Commission for Social Development and elected by the Economic and Social Council.

Chairman: JAN TINBERGEN (Netherlands).

Members: J. DELORS (France), G. K. MYRDAL (Sweden), K. A. NAQVI, H. M. A. ONITIRI, B. SÉFER, Mrs. E. B. SHELDON. (One position is vacant).

PROFESSIONAL STAFF

Director: D. V. McGRANAHAN (U.S.A.).

Twelve research officers and assistants plus various experts and consultants.

FUNCTIONS

The Institute was created to conduct research into problems and policies of social development and relationships between various types of social development and economic development during different phases of economic growth. It was intended that the studies of the Institute should contribute to (a) the work of the United Nations Secretariat in the field of social policy, social development, planning and balanced economic and social development; (b) regional planning institutes under the auspices of the United Nations; (c) national institutes in the field of economic and/or social development and planning.

The Institute was set up with the active support of the Social Commission of the United Nations (now the Commission for Social Development), which had for some time been emphasizing, in reports and resolutions, the importance of taking social factors into account in development planning and of achieving a balanced and integrated economic and social development policy. Intensified research on the means of achieving that goal was felt to be desirable.

ACTIVITIES

Research is carried out under four programmes as listed below:

1. The Inter-relations between Social and Economic Development.
2. Methodology of Social Planning.
3. The Introduction of Social Change and Innovation.
4. Regional Development.

Current Projects:

Compilation of a Research Data Bank of Development Indicators for 1970.
Methods of Quantitative Analysis of Socio-Economic Development;
The Measurement of Real Progress at Local Level;
Unified Approach to Development Analysis and Planning;
Social and Economic Implications of the Large-Scale Introduction of High-Yielding Varieties of Food-grain ("Green Revolution");

THE UNITED NATIONS—(OTHER BODIES)

UNITED NATIONS INSTITUTE FOR TRAINING AND RESEARCH— UNITAR

801 United Nations Plaza, New York, N.Y. 10017, U.S.A.

Established 1965 as an autonomous body within the framework of the United Nations. Provides training to personnel, particularly from developing countries, for national and international service, and conducts research and study related to the functions and objectives of the United Nations.

ORGANIZATION

BOARD OF TRUSTEES

Composed of up to 24 members appointed by the UN Secretary-General to serve for three years. The UN Secretary-General and the Presidents of the General Assembly and ECOSOC, and the Executive Director of the Institute are ex-officio members. Specialized agencies are represented appropriately at meetings. The Board meets usually once a year and is responsible for determining basic policies of the Institute and for reviewing and adopting the annual budget.

EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

The Executive Director is appointed by the Secretary-General, after consultation with the Board, and is responsible for the overall organization, direction and administration of the Institute.

Executive Director: Dr. DAVIDSON NICOL (Sierra Leone).

FUNCTIONS

The purpose of the Institute is to enhance, by training and research, "the effectiveness of the United Nations in achieving the major objectives of the Organization, in particular the maintenance of peace and security and the promotion of economic and social development". Training at various levels is provided to persons, particularly from the developing countries, for assignments with the UN or the specialized agencies and for assignments in their national services which are connected with the work of the UN. The Institute also conducts research and study into problems which may concern the UN.

Training Programmes in 1973:

1. Courses for members of permanent missions were held on (a) functioning and procedures of the General Assembly; (b) functioning and procedures of the UN system; (c) special programmes for foreign service officials; (d) regional structures in the UN and relations with non-UN regional bodies in economic and social matters.
2. In the field of peaceful settlement of disputes, there were: (a) conferences with the International Peace Academy on peaceful settlement; (b) a course for UN delegates on peaceful settlement procedures.
3. In the sphere of training in development and technical co-operation, there were several regional seminars on international procurement problems.
4. International Law: (a) a regional refresher course in international law for Latin America was held at Caracas at which recent developments on the law of the sea and the Vienna Convention on the Law of the Treaties were discussed; (b) twenty-one fellowships were awarded under the UN/UNITAR Fellowship Programme in International Law; (c) preparations are under way for a regional symposium in international law for Asia to be held early in 1974.

5. Programmes of attachment for interns and visiting scholars were organized.

Research Programmes in 1973:

1. United Nations structures and procedures: (a) relations between UN bodies and other international organizations; (b) co-ordination of international economic and social action; (c) the UN and the news media; (d) UN documentation; (e) status of women in the UN; (f) role of non-governmental organizations in implementing UN resolutions on apartheid.
2. Peaceful settlement of disputes: (a) procedural aspects of UN intermediary assistance; (b) relations between the UN and the Organization of American States in the peace and security field; (c) preparatory work on a review of recent academic contributions on conflict management and on the use of a computer-aided system for handling information on conflicts (CASCON data bank).
3. Economic and social development: (a) motivations and factors in the international migration and return of professionals from developing countries who have studied abroad; (b) assessment of the environmental impact of development projects; (c) survey of needs pertaining to the orientation and preparation of experts for development; (d) new forms of technical co-operation.
4. Project on the Future. UNITAR is actively engaged in preparatory work to give effect to a decision, made by the Board of Trustees in September 1971, that the Institute should undertake a programme for the continuous examination of major trends and developments having implications for the future of mankind that may require responses from the UN system. A Steering Committee which met in London in December 1972 requested that preparations be initiated for the establishment of a Commission on the Future and guidelines for the creation of a world-wide network of expertise and opinion. Funding for this project is being sought.

Through its Executive Director UNITAR will be closely associated with the projected United Nations University.

At the eighth annual meeting of directors of institutes within the UN system, held at Geneva in June 1973 and chaired by the Executive Director of UNITAR, a number of important questions of mutual interest were discussed, including emerging or new trends in the work programmes of the institutes.

FINANCE

Expenses are met from voluntary contributions made by governments, inter-governmental organizations, from foundations and other non-governmental sources.

Estimated Budget (1973): $1,723,100.

PUBLICATIONS

UNITAR Research Reports: include studies of pollution control, "brain drain", the transfer of technology to developing countries, an approach to the analysis of resolutions of the Economic and Social Council, international youth organizations and the UN, and the situation of women in the UN.

UNITAR Peaceful Settlement Series: studies on mediation in and settlement of international disputes.

UNITAR Books: studies on UN development aid, the acceptance of UN Treaties, the status and problems of small states, racial discrimination in Britain, atomic safeguards, and the financial and legal aspects of international navigable waters, the UN and the news media, and the role of multinational public corporations in the development and integration of Latin America.

UNITAR Regional Studies: study on the relations between the Council of Europe and the United Nations.

UNITAR Lecture series: studies on the UN Charter in the future, a better international economic order, the ILO in the UN family, and the future of international education.

UNITAR Conference Reports: reports on the future of the UN secretariat, the international symposium on the documentation of the UN and other intergovernmental organizations, and relations between the UN and non-regional intergovernmental organizations.

UNITAR Training Manuals: Manual of UN Technical Assistance, and Manual of External Financing.

UNITED NATIONS DEVELOPMENT PROGRAMME—UNDP

New York, N.Y. 10017, U.S.A.

Established in 1965 to help the developing countries increase the wealth-producing capabilities of their natural and human resources by providing economic and social projects, with pre-investment and technical assistance. The UNDP was established by the UN General Assembly through a merger of the Expanded Programme of Technical Assistance and the UN Special Fund.

THE UNITED NATIONS—(OTHER BODIES)

ACTIVITIES

The UNDP today is the world's largest and most universal programme of multinational technical co-operation. It works in partnership with over 130 governments, representing almost three thousand million people. Voluntary contributions from almost every nation in the world provide the UNDP with its financial resources. Governments of low-income countries all over the world, together with the United Nations and 16 other international agencies, are currently carrying out more than 6,000 UNDP-assisted activities which will cost almost $3,400 million on completion. Expenditures on UNDP-assisted projects (1959-72) have equalled nearly $4,000 million, more than half of it paid by the developing countries themselves.

In pursuit of its basic objective—helping the poorer nations to develop their human and natural resources more fully—the UNDP affords the international community a significant opportunity for productive co-operation. The sharing of technical knowledge, skills, personnel and facilities by participating countries is an essential part of the UNDP's day-to-day operations.

The developing countries receive UNDP aid through integrated 3-to-5-year "Country Programmes", which consist of projects essential for meeting national development priorities and plans—and through inter-country, inter-regional and global programmes designed to meet geographically broader needs. The country programmes are drawn up by the developing nations themselves, with the help of UN system advisers, and approved by the UNDP's Governing Council. The projects they contain assist the development efforts of low-income countries in one or more of five basic ways:

- (a) By uncovering, inventorying and determining the economic potential of natural resources and other economic growth assets;
- (b) By stimulating the flow of development capital;
- (c) By educating and training people in the knowledge and skills necessary to build and maintain modern economic and social systems;

- (d) By disseminating, adapting and applying modern productive technologies;
- (e) By strengthening national and regional frameworks for development planning and administration.

Each year, these projects engage the services of some 10,000 international experts, provide over 7,000 fellowships for advanced study abroad, and supply more than $42 million worth of equipment. In addition to providing the low-income countries with critically needed advisory, consultant and training services, they generate substantial amounts of follow-up investment, which make possible further advances in fields such as irrigated agriculture, hydro-electric power, transport, industry, telecommunications, mining, forestry, fishing and livestock production. Since 1959, UNDP-supported development work has directly or indirectly stimulated more than $10,000 million of capital investments from both external and domestic, public and private sources. Over 1,000,000 men and women have been trained for scores of essential tasks under the Programme's auspices.

UNDP Resident Representatives direct Field Offices in nearly 100 developing countries throughout the world. These officials, as leaders of the team of representatives of all United Nations organizations concerned, assist in the formulation of country programmes and see that field operations are carried out. They also increasingly work to co-ordinate bi-lateral and private development assistance with that of the UNDP in the countries where they serve.

The Programme's Administrator, who has over-all responsibility for UNDP operations, maintains close contacts with the field through four Regional Bureaux—covering Africa; Asia and the Far East; the Americas; and Europe, the Mediterranean and the Middle East. UNDP Headquarters in New York is manned by an international staff drawn from more than 60 countries.

THE UNITED NATIONS—(OTHER BODIES)

UNITED NATIONS CAPITAL DEVELOPMENT FUND

c/o United Nations, New York, N.Y. 10017, U.S.A.

Established by the UN General Assembly in December 1966, the Capital Development Fund began operations in January 1968.

ORGANIZATION

Owing to initial lack of financial resources, it has not yet been possible to give full effect to the institutional arrangement described below.

EXECUTIVE BOARD

Composed of twenty-four representatives elected by the UN General Assembly for a term of three years from among members of the UN or its related intergovernmental agencies. There is equitable representation of developed and developing countries. The Board exercises control of the policies and operations of the Capital Development Fund and is the final authority for the approval of grants and loans submitted to it by the Managing Director. The Board meets at least once a year.

The functions of the Board will provisionally be performed by the Governing Council of UNDP.

MANAGING DIRECTOR

Chief executive officer; exercises his functions under general direction of Executive Board; has overall responsibility for the operations of the Capital Development Fund; submits, with his recommendations, requests for grants and loans to Executive Board. Appointed by the UN Secretary-General for a period of four years.

Managing Director: The Administrator of UNDP (pro tem.).

FUNCTIONS

Assists developing countries in the development of their economies by supplementing existing sources of capital assistance by means of grants and loans, particularly long-term loans made free of interest or at low rates of interest.

Assistance is directed towards the achievement of the accelerated and self-sustained growth of the economies of those countries and is orientated towards the diversification of their economies, with due regard to the need for industrial development as a basis for economic and social progress.

Assistance is given to a Member Government of the UN or of its related intergovernmental organizations or to a group of such States or to an authorized entity within such a State.

Assistance may be given to support general development plans or to meet general development requirements, and is not necessarily limited to specific projects.

Assistance is co-ordinated with aid from other sources. Close liaison is maintained with the Regional Economic Commissions, UNIDO, UNDP, the UN intergovernmental organizations and the regional development banks.

FINANCE

Administrative Activities: financed by the regular budget of the UN.

Operational Activities: financed by voluntary contributions, in cash or kind, from governments or other sources.

UNITED NATIONS INDUSTRIAL DEVELOPMENT ORGANIZATION— UNIDO

Lerchenfelderstrasse 1, A-1070 Vienna, Austria

Telephone: 43 50

Created by a resolution of the General Assembly in October 1966 (established January 1967) to assist in, promote and accelerate the industrialization of the developing countries through direct assistance and mobilization of national and international resources.

ORGANIZATION

INDUSTRIAL DEVELOPMENT BOARD

Composed of 45 members elected by the UN General Assembly from among the members of the UN or its related agencies for a term of three years. Both developed and developing countries are equitably represented. The principal functions and powers of the Board are to formulate principles and policies to achieve the purpose of the Organization, to consider and approve the programme of its activities and also to review and facilitate the co-ordination of activities within the United Nations system in the field of industrial development. The Board normally holds one session a year. A subsidiary body of the Board, the Permanent Committee, holds two sessions a year.

President (1973): RAYMOND PROBST (Switzerland).

Secretary: ALMAMY SYLLA (Mali).

SECRETARIAT

Has overall responsibility for administration and research programmes and is in charge of operational programmes, including activities executed by UNIDO as a participating organization of the UNDP. The Secretariat consists of the Office of the Executive Director, the Technical Co-operation Division, Divisions of Industrial Technology, Industrial Policies and Programming, and Industrial Services and Institutions, and a Division of Administration, Conference and General Services.

Executive Director: IBRAHIM HELMI ABDEL-RAHMAN (Egypt).

FIELD ORGANIZATION

A network of Industrial Development Field Advisers exists in the developing countries. The Field Advisers are attached to the office of the Resident Representatives of UNDP.

FUNCTIONS

UNIDO activities can be divided into operational, promotional and supporting programmes. This division corresponds mainly to the type of assistance and the way in which it is delivered to the developing countries. The activities cover both macro-economic and micro-economic aspects of industrial development. At macro-economic level, questions concerning the formulation of industrial development policies, planning, programming, surveys, infrastructure and structure, institutional services to industry, etc. are considered. At micro-economic level, assistance is provided in problems of pre-feasibility and feasibility of industry or plant, investment and financing, production and productivity, product development and design, technology and techniques, management, marketing, quality, research, etc.

Operational Activities

Consist of direct technical assistance to developing countries (or regional groupings) provided in response to a specific request by the interested country. Such assistance usually consists of expert services, but can also include supply of equipment or fellowships for training in management, production, etc.

Promotional Activities

Consist mainly in action taken by the Secretariat in providing contacts between industrialized and developing countries and identifying possibilities for the solution of specific problems in developing countries. Examples of promotional activities are: investment promotion programme, international sub-contracting scheme, information service, partnership programme, etc.

Supporting Activities

Activities carried out by the Secretariat consisting mainly in research and investigation, organization of seminars, working groups, etc. on all subjects concerning industrial and technological development of developing countries. Special attention is given to such areas where research and analysis can lead to an improved performance in operational activities, e.g. transfer and adaptation of technology, etc.

OPERATIONAL ACTIVITIES IN 1973

In the last two years UNIDO participated in country programming of assistance for 82 countries involving approximately $1,000 million of UNDP funds for a period of five years. UNIDO is expected to execute about 10 per cent of this assistance with about 440 field projects. Additionally, UNIDO is implementing 42 projects with $4 million UNDP contribution in 13 countries which have not yet had a country programme. UNIDO's assistance covers services of experts, training of the nationals of the developing countries and provision of equipment needed for the projects.

The Special Industrial Services programme provided as in previous years speedy short-term assistance, with about 165 new projects approved in the first nine months of 1973. In terms of expenditures on the implementation of projects financed under the Programme, these amounted to $2.5 million during this period.

Assistance provided under the programme was of an urgent nature, consisting of solving technical and operational problems of manufacturing enterprises, sending industrial policy advisory missions and survey missions, preparing and implementing industrial projects and practical assistance at different levels in the preparation of new projects until financing is secured, among others.

UNIDO's Regular Programme in 1973 amounted to $1.5 million. A major part of the programme was devoted to the financing of fellowship posts for training in industrialized countries. The remainder of the funds was used in financing experts engaged on field projects as well as a number of regional advisers attached to the Regional Economic Commissions in Africa, the Americas and Asia and the UN Economic and Social Office in Beirut.

The UNIDO General Trust Fund which is supported from voluntary contributions by member states made annually at a pledging conference amounted in 1973 to $2,650 million. The Fund is utilized in supplementing UNIDO's activities under other technical assistance programmes and initiating new ones in such fields as the establishment of physical units (including foundries, workshops, etc.) in-plant training and other technical meetings, industrial information and plant design and laboratory testing.

In the field of training the number of individual fellowship posts established in 1973 under all UNIDO programmes amounted to 1,911 posts, representing 5,439 man-months, in various fields of specialization. In addition, 34 programmes of group in-plant training provision, seminars and symposia partly or wholly financed from UNDP/TA funds were organized in 1973 with 634 fellowship holders from developing countries. The majority of these programmes were, as in previous years, in the metalworking, mechanical textiles, pulp and paper, electrical, small-scale industries, and development financing fields.

Special International Conference

A Special International Conference of UNIDO, which was convened by the General Assembly of the UN, was held in Vienna from June 1st-8th, 1971. The Conference was attended by representatives of 106 states as well as by a number of UN bodies. The agenda of the Conference included: (i) the long-range strategy and orientation of UNIDO's activities, including the Organization's role in the Second Development Decade and the transfer and adaptation of technology for the industrial development of the developing countries; (ii) the organizational structure of UNIDO; and (iii) the question of UNIDO's financing.

The Conference adopted a consensus resolution which recommended, in particular, the implementation of such measures as: formulating plans for industrial development; mobilizing domestic and external resources for industrial development; carrying out the appropriate social and economic reforms; developing industrial co-operation among the developing countries; special consideration of the industrialization needs of the least-developed among the developing countries; creating conditions for the training of highly skilled national personnel. The resolution also recommended the appointment of a small group of high-level experts to formulate the long-range strategy for the activities of UNIDO. The consensus resolution also requested the Governing Council of UNDP to facilitate measures to ensure an increase in the level of UNDP funds allocated for industrial development and emphasized the importance of the Special Industrial Services programme of UNIDO, which provides emergency short-term aid to industry. The second Special International Conference of UNIDO will take place from March 12th-16th, 1975, in Lima, Peru.

FINANCE

Administrative and Research Budget: part of the regular budget of the UN; total (1973) U.S. $16,800,000. The total UNIDO Budget for 1974 and 1975 is U.S. $30,798,000.

Operational Programmes: financed from voluntary contributions by governments, from the UNDP, and from the UNIDO regular programme.

Special Industrial Services (SIS): financed through UNDP; these services provide, at short notice, emergency assistance to governments.

UNITED NATIONS MIDDLE EAST MISSION—UNMEM

P.O.B. 2324, Nicosia, Cyprus

Established by the UN Security Council in November 1967 to form and maintain contacts with the States concerned in the 1967 Arab-Israeli conflict, in order to assist efforts to achieve a peaceful and acceptable settlement in the area.

ORGANIZATION

Secretary-General's Special Representative: GUNNAR V. JARRING (Sweden).

UNITED NATIONS FUND FOR POPULATION ACTIVITIES—UNFPA

485 Lexington Avenue, 20th Floor, New York, N.Y. 10017, U.S.A.

Created by the Secretary-General in 1967 to assist developing countries with high population growth rates and low national incomes, to expand the population activities of the UN system, and to innovate programmes in the population field. Placed under the authority of the UN General Assembly in 1972, with the Governing Council of UNDP as its governing body, under policy supervision of the Economic and Social Council.

ORGANIZATION

EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

Overall supervision of the Population Fund (as it is known) is entrusted to an Executive Director. The Executive Director has the authority in consultation with the Administrator of UNDP to approve projects up to a value of $1 million; projects involving larger amounts, as well as those of an innovative character, and comprehensive country programmes, are approved by the Governing Council of UNDP. The Executive Director exercises co-ordination with other organizations in the UN system through an Inter-Agency Advisory Board, composed of representatives of UN Agencies.

Executive Director: RAFAEL M. SALAS (Philippines).

EXECUTING AGENCIES

In most projects assistance is extended through member organizations of the UN system; the Fund may also call on the services of non-governmental organizations in this role and sometimes it acts as its own executing agency.

FIELD ORGANIZATION

UNFPA Co-ordinators, attached to the offices of the UNDP Resident Representatives, assist governments in formulating requests for aid and co-ordinate the work of the executing agencies in any given country or area.

FUNCTIONS

The aims and purposes as set out by the Economic and Social Council in 1973 are as follows:

to build up, on an international basis, with the assistance of the competent bodies of the UN system, the knowledge and the capacity to respond to national, regional, inter-regional and global needs in the population and family planning fields; to promote co-ordination in planning and programming, and to co-operate with all concerned; to promote government awareness of social and economic implications of population problems; of the human rights aspects of family planning; and of possible strategies to deal with them, in accordance with the plans and priorities of each country; to extend systematic and sustained assistance to countries seeking to define and solve population problems;

to play a leading role in the United Nations system in promoting population programmes and to co-ordinate projects supported by the Fund.

The Fund was also assigned the supervision of preparations for the World Population Year, proclaimed by the United Nations for 1974. The projects supported include: collection and analysis of basic demographic data; provision of demographic research and training facilities; demonstration programmes in family planning connected with maternal and child welfare services; inclusion of courses on population subjects in such educational programmes as adult education, teacher training and agricultural extension; provision of contraceptive supplies and manufacturing materials, and formulation of population policies and the measures to be taken in accordance with the national development objectives.

ACTIVITIES

By mid-1973 the Fund was financing over 900 projects benefiting 92 countries and developing areas. Of these many were regional and inter-regional and included staff support to population units within the UN regional Economic Commissions. In addition, comprehensive country projects, through which a wide variety of inputs are provided to national population programmes, have been concluded with Chile, Egypt, Indonesia, Iran, Malaysia, Mauritius, the Philippines, Sri Lanka and Thailand, and one with the Republic of Korea is close to completion.

Africa. Since the continent suffers from a scarcity of census-based statistics, an African Census Programme, so far comprising 21 countries, has been launched under the sponsorship of the Economic Commission for Africa (ECA). Besides providing funds for census activities, UNFPA has also strengthened ECA's statistics and population programme centres. The results of the censuses, for which UNFPA has planned to disburse over $11 million, are to help African countries in their development planning.

Asia and the Far East. Most countries have already embarked on government-sponsored population programmes. Besides assisting these, the Fund aids regional projects devoted to training, education and research. In a number of countries facilities for family planning are directly supported.

Middle East. Countries receiving UNFPA assistance include Iraq, Jordan, Kuwait, Lebanon, and the People's Democratic Republic of Yemen, as well as Saudi Arabia, Syria and Turkey. Activities supported are mostly related to demographic activities and training and research.

THE UNITED NATIONS—(OTHER BODIES)

Latin America. Assistance has been given to expand the facilities of CELADE, the regional demographic centre located in Santiago, Chile, and its sub-centre in San Jose, Costa Rica. In 1972 Chile became the first Latin American country to sign an agreement with UNFPA, and other countries are expected to follow. Assistance is given to a wide range of census and training and research activities; in the Caribbean, where some governments have become concerned with their population growth rate, assistance is also given to family planning facilities.

WORLD POPULATION YEAR

To stimulate greater support and governmental recognition of the importance of population activities, the UN

General Secretary has designated 1974 as World Population Year.

The Fund has initiated a world-wide programme involving the joint efforts of governments, UN agencies and organizations, and bilateral and non-governmental organizations, directed toward increasing awareness of population problems.

The highlight of the Year will be the World Population Conference to be held in Bucharest, Romania, in August 1974, which will bring together government leaders and international specialists to study and exchange views on population issues and to examine a draft World Population Plan of Action being formulated by the Secretary-General with the assistance of an Advisory Committee of Experts on Global Population Strategy.

OFFICE OF THE UNITED NATIONS DISASTER RELIEF CO-ORDINATOR—UNDRO

Palais des Nations, Geneva, Switzerland

Established in 1972 to co-ordinate and mobilize the relief to disaster areas provided by other bodies, and to co-operate in the prevention of disasters.

ORGANIZATION

DISASTER RELIEF CO-ORDINATOR

A Disaster Relief Co-ordinator was appointed at Under-Secretary-General level, in March 1972, to report directly to the UN Secretary-General. UNDRO is thus a separate entity, a distinct element within the UN Secretariat.

Co-ordinator: FARUK BERKOL (Turkey).

FIELD ORGANIZATION

UNDRO is represented in some 90 developing countries by the Resident Representatives of the UNDP, part of whose task consists in encouraging advance measures to ward off disasters, and to co-ordinate relief and reconstruction.

THE UNITED NATIONS—(OTHER BODIES)

FUNCTIONS

UNDRO's essential function is that of co-ordination and the mobilization of aid provided by other bodies. The responsibilities laid upon the Office by the General Assembly call upon it to take action in disaster-prone and disaster-stricken countries, both before and after disasters. It is concerned at all times with the prevention, control and prediction of disasters and with preparedness and contingency planning. When disasters strike it is, of course, concerned with disaster relief itself. To do its job effectively it must also work closely with donors so that by advance planning the most effective use can be made of their generosity. Its purpose is to act as a catalyst to stimulate others, and act as a link between the many governments and institutions active in disaster situations.

ACTIVITIES

As news of external aid requirements begins to flow into UNDRO's Geneva Office, it will be recorded on a 24-hour basis in the clearing house, which will issue a series of disaster relief bulletins by telex and, possibly, other means. Any government or recognized institution actively concerned with disaster relief will be able to obtain these bulletins. Thus UNDRO should progressively become a world information and action centre on disaster situations and relief measures.

The Co-ordinator is also authorized to accept contributions which he will normally arrange to be spent through existing relief agencies and organizations.

Budget: the UNDRO budget allocated by the United Nations for the biennium 1974-75 is U.S. $1,018,000.

UNITED NATIONS ENVIRONMENT PROGRAMME—UNEP

(Established in Nairobi, Kenya, October 2nd, 1973)

The United Nations Environment Programme was established by the UN General Assembly to provide machinery for international co-operation in matters relating to the human environment.

ORGANIZATION

GOVERNING COUNCIL

Fifty-eight states are members (16 African, 12 Asian, 10 Latin American, 6 Eastern European and 13 Western European and other states). The main function of the Governing Council is to provide general policy guidelines for the direction and co-ordination of environmental programmes within the UN system. The first session met in June 1973 in Geneva, the second in March 1974 in Nairobi.

UNEP SECRETARIAT

The Secretariat serves as a focal point for environmental action and co-ordinates all environment activities within the UN system. The Environment Fund, administered by the Secretariat, is to finance new and existing environment activities. The agreed target for the first five years of its operation (1974-78) is approximately U.S. $100 million.

Executive Director: MAURICE STRONG (Canada).

ENVIRONMENT CO-ORDINATION BOARD

Under the Chairmanship of the Executive Director, the Board strives to ensure co-operation and co-ordination among all agencies and organizations in the UN system concerned with implementation of environmental programmes.

AIMS AND ACTIVITIES

UNEP aims to create new values and standards for exercising international responsibility in protecting and enhancing the life-sustaining resources of our planet earth.

The Governing Council, at its first session, decided on programme priorities and requested UNEP to take measures to meet such objectives as: preserving the health of the oceans; preventing the loss of productive soil; improving water quality; preserving threatened species of plant and animal life; improving the quality of rural and urban settlements; and mobilizing resources to help developing countries with environmental concerns.

Budget: The UNEP budget allocated by the United Nations for the biennium 1974-75 is U.S. $6,090,000.

UNITED NATIONS EMERGENCY FORCE—UNEF

Cairo, Egypt

Set up in October 1973 by the UN Security Council after the Arab-Israeli war to supervise a full ceasefire on the Suez Canal front and to ensure a return to the positions held by both sides at 16.50 hours G.M.T. on October 22nd, 1973, when the Security Council's original truce was to have gone into effect.

Commander: Maj.-Gen. E. SIILASVUO (Finland).

CHARTER OF THE UNITED NATIONS

We the peoples of the United Nations determined to save succeeding generations from the scourge of war, which twice in our lifetime has brought untold sorrow to mankind, and to reaffirm faith in fundamental human rights, in the dignity and worth of the human person, in the equal rights of men and women and of nations large and small,
and
to establish conditions under which justice and respect for the obligations arising from treaties and other sources of international law can be maintained, and to promote social progress and better standards of life in larger freedom,

And for these ends

to practice tolerance and live together in peace with one another as good neighbours, and to unite our strength to maintain international peace and security, and to ensure, by the acceptance of principles and the institution of methods, that armed force shall not be used, save in the common interest, and to employ international machinery for the promotion of the economic and social advancement of all peoples,

Have resolved to combine our efforts to accomplish these aims.

Accordingly, our respective Governments, through representatives assembled in the city of San Francisco, who have exhibited their full powers found to be in good and due form, have agreed to the present Charter of the United Nations and do hereby establish an international organization to be known as the United Nations.

CHAPTER I

PURPOSES AND PRINCIPLES

Article 1

The Purposes of the United Nations are:

1. To maintain international peace and security, and to that end: to take effective collective measures for the prevention and removal of threats to the peace, and for the suppression of acts of aggression or other breaches of the peace, and to bring about by peaceful means, and in conformity with the principles of justice and international law, adjustment or settlement of international disputes or situations which might lead to a breach of the peace;

2. To develop friendly relations among nations based on respect for the principle of equal rights and self-determination of peoples, and to take other appropriate measures to strengthen universal peace;

3. To achieve international co-operation in solving international problems of an economic, social, cultural, or humanitarian character, and in promoting and encouraging respect for human rights and for fundamental freedoms for all without distinction as to race, sex, language, or religion;
and,

4. To be a centre for harmonizing the accusations of nations in the attainment of these common ends.

Article 2

The Organization and its Members, in pursuit of the Purposes stated in Article 1, shall act in accordance with the following Principles.

1. The Organization is based on the principle of the sovereign equality of all its Members.

2. All Members, in order to ensure to all of them the rights and benefits resulting from membership, shall fulfil in good faith the obligations assumed by them in accordance with the present Charter.

3. All Members shall settle their international disputes by peaceful means in such a manner that international peace and security, and justice, are not endangered.

4. All Members shall refrain in their international relations from the threat or use of force against the territorial integrity or political independence of any state, or in any other manner inconsistent with the Purposes of the United Nations.

5. All Members shall give the United Nations every assistance in any action it takes in accordance with the present Charter, and shall refrain from giving assistance to any state against which the United Nations is taking preventive or enforcement action.

6. The Organization shall ensure that states which are not Members of the United Nations act in accordance with these Principles so far as may be necessary for the maintenance of international peace and security.

7. Nothing contained in the present Charter shall authorize the United Nations to intervene in matters which are essentially within the domestic jurisdiction of any state or shall require the Members to submit such matters to settlement under the present Charter; but this principle shall not prejudice the application of enforcement measures under Chapter VII.

CHAPTER II

MEMBERSHIP

Article 3

The original Members of the United Nations shall be the states which, having participated in the United Nations Conference on International Organization at San Francisco, or having previously signed the Declaration by United Nations of January 1, 1942, sign the present Charter and ratify it in accordance with Article 110.

Article 4

1. Membership in the United Nations is open to all other peace-loving states which accept the obligations contained in the present Charter and, in the judgement of the Organization, are able and willing to carry out these obligations.

2. The admission of any such state to membership in the United Nations will be effected by a decision of the General Assembly upon the recommendation of the Security Council.

Article 5

A Member of the United Nations against which preventive or enforcement action has been taken by the Security Council may be suspended from the exercise of the rights and privileges of membership by the General Assembly upon the recommendation of the Security Council. The exercise of these rights and privileges may be restored by the Security Council.

Article 6

A Member of the United Nations which has persistently violated the Principles contained in the present Charter may be expelled from the Organization by the General Assembly upon the recommendation of the Security Council.

THE UNITED NATIONS

CHAPTER III

ORGANS

Article 7

1. There are established as the principal organs of the United Nations; a General Assembly, a Security Council, an Economic and Social Council, a Trusteeship Council, an International Court of Justice, and a Secretariat.

2. Such subsidiary organs as may be found necessary may be established in accordance with the present Charter.

Article 8

The United Nations shall place no restrictions on the eligibility of men and women to participate in any capacity and under conditions of equality in its principal and subsidiary organs.

CHAPTER IV

THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY

Composition

Article 9

1. The General Assembly shall consist of all the Members of the United Nations.

2. Each Member shall have not more than five representatives in the General Assembly.

Functions and Powers

Article 10

The General Assembly may discuss any questions or any matters within the scope of the present Charter or relating to the powers and functions of any organs provided for in the present Charter, and, except as provided in Article 12, may make recommendations to the Members of the United Nations or to the Security Council or to both on any such questions or matters.

Article 11

1. The General Assembly may consider the general principles of co-operation in the maintenance of international peace and security, including the principles governing disarmament and the regulation of armaments, and may make recommendations with regard to such principles to the Members or to the Security Council or to both.

2. The General Assembly may discuss any questions relating to the maintenance of international peace and security brought before it by any Member of the United Nations, or by the Security Council, or by a state which is not a Member of the United Nations in accordance with Article 35, paragraph 2, and, except as provided in Article 12, may make recommendations with regard to any such question to the state or states concerned or to the Security Council or both. Any such question on which action is necessary shall be referred to the Security Council by the General Assembly either before or after discussion.

3. The General Assembly may call the attention of the Security Council to situations which are likely to endanger international peace and security.

4. The powers of the General Assembly set forth in this Article shall not limit the general scope of Article 10.

Article 12

1. While the Security Council is exercising in respect of any dispute or situation the functions assigned to it in the present Charter, the General Assembly shall not make any recommendations with regard to that dispute or situation unless the Security Council so requests.

2. The Security Council shall have the right to request the General Assembly to elect members of the Council, and to request the General Assembly to elect members of the Economic and Social Council, and to request the General Assembly to elect members of the Trusteeship Council, and to request the General Assembly to elect members of the International Court of Justice.

by the Security Council and shall similarly notify the General Assembly, or the Members of the United Nations if the General Assembly is not in session, immediately the Security Council ceases to deal with such matters.

Article 13

1. The General Assembly shall initiate studies and make recommendations for the purpose of:

(a) promoting international co-operation in the political field and encouraging the progressive development of international law and its codification;

(b) promoting international co-operation in the economic, social, cultural, educational, and health fields, and assisting in the realization of human rights and fundamental freedoms for all without distinction as to race, sex, language, or religion.

2. The further responsibilities, functions and powers of the General Assembly with respect to matters mentioned in paragraph 1(b) above are set forth in Chapters IX and X.

Article 14

Subject to the provision of Article 12, the General Assembly may recommend measures for the peaceful adjustment of any situation, regardless of origin, which it deems likely to impair the general welfare or friendly relations among nations, including situations resulting from a violation of the provisions of the present Charter setting forth the Purposes and Principles of the United Nations.

Article 15

1. The General Assembly shall receive and consider annual and special reports from the Security Council; these reports shall include an account of the measures that the Security Council has decided upon or taken to maintain international peace and security.

2. The General Assembly shall receive and consider reports from the other organs of the United Nations.

Article 16

The General Assembly shall perform such functions with respect to the international trusteeship system as are assigned to it under Chapters XII and XIII, including the approval of the trusteeship agreements for areas not designated as strategic.

Article 17

1. The General Assembly shall consider and approve the budget of the Organization.

2. The expenses of the Organization shall be borne by the Members as apportioned by the General Assembly.

3. The General Assembly shall consider and approve any financial and budgetary arrangements with specialized agencies referred to in Article 57 and shall examine the administrative budgets of such specialized agencies with a view to making recommendations to the agencies concerned.

Voting

Article 18

1. Each Member of the General Assembly shall have one vote.

2. Decisions of the General Assembly on important questions shall be made by a two-thirds majority of the members present and voting. These questions shall include: recommendations with respect to the maintenance of international peace and security, the election of the non-permanent Members of the Security Council, the election of the Members of the Economic and Social Council, the election of Members of the Trusteeship Council in accordance with paragraph 1(c) of Article 86 the admission of new Members to the United Nations, the suspension of the rights and privileges of membership, the expulsion of Members, questions relating to the operation of the trusteeship system, and budgetary questions.

THE UNITED NATIONS

3. Decisions on other questions, including the determination of additional categories of questions to be decided by a two-thirds majority, shall be made by a majority of the members present and voting.

Article 19

A Member of the United Nations which is in arrears in the payment of its financial contributions to the Organization shall have no vote in the General Assembly if the amount of its arrears equals or exceeds the amount of the contributions due from it for the preceding two full years. The General Assembly may, nevertheless, permit such a Member to vote if it is satisfied that the failure to pay is due to conditions beyond the control of the Member.

Procedure

Article 20

The General Assembly shall meet in regular annual sessions and in such special sessions as occasion may require. Special sessions shall be convoked by the Secretary-General at the request of the Security Council or of a majority of the Members of the United Nations.

Article 21

The General Assembly shall adopt its own rules of procedure. It shall elect its President for each session.

Article 22

The General Assembly may establish such subsidiary organs as it deems necessary for the performance of its functions.

CHAPTER V

THE SECURITY COUNCIL

Composition

Article 23

1. The Security Council shall consist of eleven Members of the United Nations. The Republic of China, France, the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, and the United States of America shall be permanent members of the Security Council. The General Assembly shall elect six other Members of the United Nations to be non-permanent members of the Security Council, due regard being specially paid, in the first instance to the contribution of Members of the United Nations to the maintenance of international peace and security and to the other purposes of the Organization, and also to equitable geographical distribution.

2. The non-permanent members of the Security Council shall be elected for a term of two years. In the first election of the non-permanent members, however, three shall be chosen for a term of one year. A retiring member shall not be eligible for immediate re-election.

3. Each member of the Security Council shall have one representative.

Functions and Powers

Article 24

1. In order to ensure prompt and effective action by the United Nations, its Members confer on the Security Council primary responsibility for the maintenance of international peace and security, and agree that in carrying out its duties under this responsibility the Security Council acts on their behalf.

2. In discharging these duties the Security Council shall act in accordance with the Purposes and Principles of the United Nations. The specific powers granted to the Security Council for the discharge of these duties are laid down in Chapters VI, VII, VIII, and XII.

3. The Security Council shall submit annual and, when necessary, special reports to the General Assembly for its consideration.

Article 25

The Members of the United Nations agree to accept and carry out the decisions of the Security Council in accordance with the present Charter.

Article 26

In order to promote the establishment and maintenance of international peace and security with the least diversion for armaments of the world's human and economic resources, the Security Council shall be responsible for formulating, with the assistance of the Military Staff Committee referred to in Article 47, plans to be submitted to the Members of the United Nations for the establishment of a system for the regulation of armaments.

Voting

Article 27

1. Each member of the Security Council shall have one vote.

2. Decisions of the Security Council on procedural matters shall be made by an affirmative vote of seven members.

3. Decisions of the Security Council on all other matters shall be made by an affirmative vote of seven members including the concurring votes of the permanent members; provided that, in decisions under Chapter VI, and under paragraph 3 of Article 52, a party to a dispute shall abstain from voting.

Procedure

Article 28

1. The Security Council shall be so organized as to be able to function continuously. Each member of the Security Council shall for this purpose be represented at all times at the seat of the Organization.

2. The Security Council shall hold periodic meetings at which each of its members may, if it so desires, be represented by a member of the government or by some other specially designated representative.

3. The Security Council may hold meetings at such places other than the seat of the Organization as in its judgment will best facilitate its work.

Article 29

The Security Council may establish such subsidiary organs as it deems necessary for the performance of its functions.

Article 30

The Security Council shall adopt its own rules of procedure, including the method of selecting its President.

Article 31

Any Member of the United Nations which is not a member of the Security Council may participate, without vote, in the discussion of any question brought before the Security Council whenever the latter considers that the interests of that Member are specially affected.

Article 32

Any Member of the United Nations which is not a member of the Security Council or any state which is not a Member of the United Nations, if it is a party to a dispute under consideration by the Security Council, shall be invited to participate, without vote, in the discussion relating to the dispute. The Security Council shall lay down such conditions as it deems just for the participation of a state which is not a Member of the United Nations.

THE UNITED NATIONS

CHAPTER VI PACIFIC SETTLEMENT OF DISPUTES

Article 33

1. The parties to any dispute, the continuance of which is likely to endanger the maintenance of international peace and security, shall, first of all, seek a solution by negotiation, enquiry, mediation, conciliation, arbitration, judicial settlement, resort to regional agencies or arrangements, or other peaceful means of their own choice.

2. The Security Council shall, when it deems necessary, call upon the parties to settle their disputes by such means.

Article 34

The Security Council may investigate any dispute, or any situation which might lead to international friction or give rise to a dispute, in order to determine whether the continuance of the dispute or situation is likely to endanger the maintenance of international peace and security.

Article 35

1. Any Member of the United Nations may bring any dispute, or any situation of the nature referred to in Article 34, to the attention of the Security Council or of the General Assembly.

2. A state which is not a Member of the United Nations may bring to the attention of the Security Council or of the General Assembly any dispute to which it is a party if it accepts in advance, for the purposes of the dispute, the obligations of pacific settlement provided in the present Charter.

3. The proceedings of the General Assembly in respect of matters brought to its attention under this Article will be subject to the provisions of Articles 11 and 12.

Article 36

1. The Security Council may, at any stage of a dispute of the nature referred to in Article 33 or of a situation of like nature, recommend appropriate procedures or methods of adjustment.

2. The Security Council should take into consideration any procedures for the settlement of the dispute which have already been adopted by the parties.

3. In making recommendations under this Article the Security Council should also take into consideration that legal disputes should as a general rule be referred by the parties to the International Court of Justice in accordance with the provisions of the Statute of the Court.

Article 37

1. Should the parties to a dispute of the nature referred to in Article 33 fail to settle it by the means indicated in that Article, they shall refer it to the Security Council.

2. If the Security Council deems that the continuance of the dispute is in fact likely to endanger the maintenance of international peace and security, it shall decide whether to take action under Article 36 or to recommend such terms of settlement as it may consider appropriate.

Article 38

Without prejudice to the provisions of Articles 33 to 37, the Security Council may, if all the parties to any dispute so request, make recommendations to the parties with a view to a pacific settlement of the dispute.

CHAPTER VII ACTION WITH RESPECT TO THREATS TO THE PEACE, BREACHES OF THE PEACE, AND ACTS OF AGGRESSION

Article 39

The Security Council shall determine the existence of any threat to the peace, breach of the peace, or act of aggression and shall make recommendations, or decide what measures shall be taken in accordance with Articles 41 and 42, to maintain or restore international peace and security.

Article 40

In order to prevent an aggravation of the situation, the Security Council may, before making the recommendations or deciding upon the measures provided for in Article 39, call upon the parties concerned to comply with such provisional measures as it deems necessary or desirable. Such provisional measures shall be without prejudice to the rights, claims, or position of the parties concerned. The Security Council shall duly take account of failure to comply with such provisional measures.

Article 41

The Security Council may decide what measures not involving the use of armed force are to be employed to give effect to its decisions, and it may call upon the Members of the United Nations to apply such measures. These may include complete or partial interruption of economic relations and of rail, sea, air, postal, telegraphic, radio, and other means of communication, and the severance of diplomatic relations.

Article 42

Should the Security Council consider that measures provided for in Article 41 would be inadequate or have proved to be inadequate, it may take such action by air, sea, or land forces as may be necessary to maintain or restore international peace and security. Such action may include demonstrations, blockade, and other operations by air, sea, or land forces of Members of the United Nations.

Article 43

1. All Members of the United Nations, in order to contribute to the maintenance of international peace and security, undertake to make available to the Security Council, on its call and in accordance with a special agreement or agreements, armed forces, assistance, and facilities, including rights of passage, necessary for the purpose of maintaining international peace and security.

2. Such agreement or agreements shall govern the numbers and types of forces, their degree of readiness and general location, and the nature of the facilities and assistance to be provided.

3. The agreement or agreements shall be negotiated as soon as possible on the initiative of the Security Council. They shall be concluded between the Security Council and Members or between the Security Council and groups of Members and shall be subject to ratification by the signatory states in accordance with their respective constitutional processes.

Article 44

When the Security Council has decided to use force it shall, before calling upon a Member not represented on it to prove armed forces in fulfilment of the obligations assumed under Article 43, invite that Member, if the Member so desires, to participate in the decisions of the Security Council concerning the employment of contingents of that Member's armed forces.

Article 45

In order to enable the United Nations to take urgent military measures, Members shall hold immediately available national air-force contingents for combined international enforcement action. The strength and degree of readiness of these contingents and plans for their combined action shall be determined, within the limits laid down in the special agreement and agreements referred to in Article 43, by the Security Council with the assistance of the Military Staff Committee.

THE UNITED NATIONS

Article 46

Plans for the application of armed force shall be made by the Security Council with the assistance of the Military Staff Committee.

Article 47

1. There shall be established a Military Staff Committee to advise and assist the Security Council on all questions relating to the Security Council's military requirements for the maintenance of international peace and security, the employment and command of forces placed at its disposal, the regulation of armaments, and possible disarmament.

2. The Military Staff Committee shall consist of the Chiefs of Staff of the permanent members of the Security Council or their representatives. Any Member of the United Nations not permanently represented on the Committee shall be invited by the Committee to be associated with it when the efficient discharge of the Committee's responsibilities requires the participation of that Member in its work.

3. The Military Staff Committee shall be responsible under the Security Council for the strategic direction of any armed forces placed at the disposal of the Security Council. Questions relating to the command of such forces shall be worked out subsequently.

4. The Military Staff Committee, with the authorization of the Security Council and after consultation with appropriate regional agencies, may establish regional sub-committees.

Article 48

1. The action required to carry out the decisions of the Security Council for the maintenance of international peace and security shall be taken by all the Members of the United Nations or by some of them, as the Security Council may determine.

2. Such decisions shall be carried out by the Members of the United Nations directly and through their action in the appropriate international agencies of which they are members.

Article 49

The Members of the United Nations shall join in affording mutual assistance in carrying out the measures decided upon by the Security Council.

Article 50

If preventive or enforcement measures against any state are taken by the Security Council, any other state, whether a Member of the United Nations or not, which finds itself confronted with special economic problems arising from the carrying out of those measures shall have the right to consult the Security Council with regard to a solution of those problems.

Article 51

Nothing in the present Charter shall impair the inherent right of individual or collective self-defence if an armed attack occurs against a Member of the United Nations, until the Security Council has taken measures necessary to maintain international peace and security. Measures taken by Members in the exercise of this right of self-defence shall be immediately reported to the Security Council and shall not in any way affect the authority and responsibility of the Security Council under the present Charter to take at any time such action as it deems necessary in order to maintain or restore international peace and security.

CHAPTER VIII REGIONAL ARRANGEMENTS

Article 52

1. Nothing in the present Charter precludes the existence of regional arrangements or agencies for dealing with such matters relating to the maintenance of international peace and security as are appropriate for regional action, provided that such arrangements or agencies and their activities are consistent with the Purposes and Principles of the United Nations.

2. The Members of the United Nations entering into such arrangements or constituting such agencies shall make every effort to achieve pacific settlement of local disputes through such regional agencies before referring them to the Security Council.

3. The Security Council shall encourage the development of pacific settlement of local disputes through such regional arrangements or by such regional agencies either on the initiative of the states concerned or by reference from the Security Council.

4. This Article in no way impairs the application of Articles 34 and 35.

Article 53

1. The Security Council shall, where appropriate, utilize such regional arrangements or agencies for enforcement action under its authority. But no enforcement action shall be taken under regional arrangements or by regional agencies without the authorization of the Security Council, with the exception of measures against any enemy state, as defined in paragraph 2 of this Article, provided for pursuant to Article 107 or in regional arrangements directed against renewal of aggressive policy on the part of any such state, until such time as the Organization may, on request of the Governments concerned, be charged with the responsibility for preventing further aggression by such a state.

2. The term enemy state as used in paragraph 1 of this Article applies to any state which during the Second World War has been an enemy of any signatory of the present Charter.

Article 54

The Security Council shall at all times be kept fully informed of activities undertaken or in contemplation under regional arrangements or by regional agencies for the maintenance of international peace and security.

CHAPTER IX INTERNATIONAL ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL CO-OPERATION

Article 55

With a view to the creation of conditions of stability and well-being which are necessary for peaceful and friendly relations among nations based on respect for the principle of equal rights and self-determination of peoples, the United Nations shall promote:

- (a) higher standards of living, full employment, and conditions of economic and social progress and development;
- (b) solutions of international economic, social, health, and related problems; and international cultural and educational co-operation; and
- (c) universal respect for, and observance of, human rights and fundamental freedoms for all without distinction as to race, sex, language, or religion.

Article 56

All Members pledge themselves to take joint and separate action in co-operation with the Organization for the achievement of the purposes set forth in Article 55.

Article 57

1. The various specialized agencies, established by intergovernmental agreement and having wide international responsibilities, as defined in their basic instruments, in economic, social, cultural, educational, health, and related fields, shall be brought into relationship with the United Nations in accordance with the provisions of Article 63.

THE UNITED NATIONS

2. Such agencies thus brought into relationship with the United Nations are hereinafter referred to as specialized agencies.

Article 58

The Organization shall make recommendations for the co-ordination of the policies and activities of the specialized agencies.

Article 59

The Organization shall, where appropriate, initiate negotiations among the states concerned for the creation of any new specialized agencies required for the accomplishment of the purposes set forth in Article 55.

Article 60

Responsibility for the discharge of the functions of the Organization set forth in this Chapter shall be vested in the General Assembly and, under the authority of the General Assembly, in the Economic and Social Council, which shall have for this purpose the powers set forth in Chapter X.

CHAPTER X

THE ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL

Composition

Article 61

1. The Economic and Social Council shall consist of eighteen Members of the United Nations elected by the General Assembly.

2. Subject to the provisions of paragraph 3, six members of the Economic and Social Council shall be elected each year for a term of three years. A retiring member shall be eligible for immediate re-election.

3. At the first election, eighteen members of the Economic and Social Council shall be chosen. The term of office of six members so chosen shall expire at the end of one year, and of six other members at the end of two years, in accordance with arrangements made by the General Assembly.

4. Each member of the Economic and Social Council shall have one representative.

Functions and Powers

Article 62

1. The Economic and Social Council may make or initiate studies and reports with respect to international economic, social, cultural, educational, health, and related matters and may make recommendations with respect to any such matters to the General Assembly, to the Members of the United Nations, and to the specialized agencies concerned.

2. It may make recommendations for the purpose of promoting respect for, and observance of, human rights and fundamental freedoms for all.

3. It may prepare draft conventions for submission to the General Assembly, with respect to matters falling within its competence.

4. It may call, in accordance with the rules prescribed by the United Nations, international conferences on matters falling within its competence.

Article 63

1. The Economic and Social Council may enter into agreements with any of the agencies referred to in Article 57, defining the terms on which the agency concerned shall be brought into relationship with the United Nations. Such agreements shall be subject to approval by the General Assembly.

2. It may co-ordinate the activities of the specialized agencies through consultation with and recommendations to such agencies and through recommendations to the General Assembly and to the Members of the United Nations.

Article 64

1. The Economic and Social Council may take appropriate steps to obtain regular reports from the specialized agencies. It may make arrangements with the Members of the United Nations and with specialized agencies to obtain reports on the steps taken to give effect to its own recommendations and to recommendations on matters falling within its competence made by the General Assembly.

2. It may communicate its observations on these reports to the General Assembly.

Article 65

The Economic and Social Council may furnish information to the Security Council and shall assist the Security Council upon its request.

Article 66

1. The Economic and Social Council shall perform such functions as fall within its competence in connection with the carrying out of the recommendations of the General Assembly.

2. It may, with the approval of the General Assembly, perform services at the request of Members of the United Nations and at the request of specialized agencies.

3. It shall perform such other functions as are specified elsewhere in the present Charter or as may be assigned to it by the General Assembly.

Voting

Article 67

1. Each member of the Economic and Social Council shall have one vote.

2. Decisions of the Economic and Social Council shall be made by a majority of the members present and voting.

Procedure

Article 68

The Economic and Social Council shall set up commissions in economic and social fields and for the promotion of human rights, and such other commissions as may be required for the performance of its functions.

Article 69

The Economic and Social Council shall invite any Member of the United Nations to participate, without vote, in its deliberations on any matter of particular concern to that Member.

Article 70

The Economic and Social Council may make arrangements for representatives of the specialized agencies to participate, without vote, in its deliberations and in those of the commissions established by it, and for its representatives to participate in the deliberations of the specialized agencies.

Article 71

The Economic and Social Council may make suitable arrangements for consultation with non-governmental organizations which are concerned with matters within its competence. Such arrangements may be made with international organizations and, where appropriate, with national organizations after consultation with the Member of the United Nations concerned.

THE UNITED NATIONS

Article 72

1. The Economic and Social Council shall adopt its own rules of procedure, including the method of selecting its President.

2. The Economic and Social Council shall meet as required in accordance with its rules, which shall include provision for the convening of meetings on the request of a majority of its members.

CHAPTER XI

NON-SELF-GOVERNING TERRITORIES

Article 73

Members of the United Nations which have or assume responsibilities for the administration of territories whose peoples have not yet attained a full measure of self-government recognize the principle that the interests of the inhabitants of these territories are paramount, and accept as a sacred trust the obligation to promote to the utmost, within the system of international peace and security established by the present Charter, the well-being of the inhabitants of these territories, and, to this end:

- (a) to ensure, with due respect for the culture of the peoples concerned, their political, economic, social, and educational advancement, their just treatment, and their protection against abuses;
- (b) to develop self-government, to take due account of the political aspirations of the peoples, and to assist them in the progressive development of their free political institutions, according to the particular circumstances of each territory and its peoples and their varying stages of advancement;
- (c) to further international peace and security;
- (d) to promote constructive measures of development, to encourage research, and to co-operate with one another and, when and where appropriate, with specialized international bodies with a view to the practical achievement of the social, economic, and scientific purposes set forth in this Article; and
- (e) to transmit regularly to the Secretary-General for information purposes, subject to such limitations as security and constitutional considerations may require, statistical and other information of a technical nature relating to economic, social, and educational conditions in the territories for which they are respectively responsible other than those territories to which Chapters XII and XIII apply.

Article 74

Members of the United Nations also agree that their policy in respect of the territories to which this Chapter applies, no less than in respect of their metropolitan areas, must be based on the general principles of good-neighbourliness, due account being taken of the interests and well-being of the rest of the world, in social, economic, and commercial matters.

CHAPTER XII

INTERNATIONAL TRUSTEESHIP SYSTEM

Article 75

The United Nations shall establish under its authority an international trusteeship system for the administration and supervision of such territories as may be placed thereunder by subsequent individual agreements. These territories are hereinafter referred to as trust territories.

Article 76

The basic objectives of the trusteeship system, in accordance with the Purposes of the United Nations laid down in Article 1 of the present Charter, shall be:

- (a) to further international peace and security;

- (b) to promote the political, economic, social, and educational advancement of the inhabitants of the trust territories, and their progressive development towards self-government or independence as may be appropriate to the particular circumstances of each territory and its peoples and the freely expressed wishes of the peoples concerned, and as may be provided by the terms of each trusteeship agreement;
- (c) to encourage respect for human rights and for fundamental freedoms for all without distinction as to race, sex, language, or religion, and to encourage recognition of the interdependence of the peoples of the world; and
- (d) to ensure equal treatment in social, economic, and commercial matters for all Members of the United Nations and their nationals, and also equal treatment for the latter in the administration of justice, without prejudice to the attainment of the foregoing objectives and subject to the provisions of Article 80.

Article 77

1. The trusteeship system shall apply to such territories in the following categories as may be placed thereunder by means of trusteeship agreements:

- (a) territories now held under mandate;
- (b) territories which may be detached from enemy states as a result of the Second World War; and
- (c) territories voluntarily placed under the system by states responsible for their administration.

2. It will be a matter for subsequent agreement as to which territories in the foregoing categories will be brought under the trusteeship system and upon what terms.

Article 78

The trusteeship system shall not apply to territories which have become Members of the United Nations, relationship among which shall be based on respect for the principle of sovereign equality.

Article 79

The terms of trusteeship for each territory to be placed under the trusteeship system, including any alteration of amendment, shall be agreed upon by the states directly concerned, including the mandatory power in the case of territories held under mandate by a Member of the United Nations, and shall be approved as provided for in Articles 83 and 85.

Article 80

1. Except as may be agreed upon in individual trusteeship agreements, made under Articles 77, 79, and 81, placing each territory under the trusteeship system, and until such agreements have been concluded, nothing in this Chapter shall be construed in or of itself to alter in any manner the rights whatsoever of any states or any peoples or the terms of existing international instruments to which Members of the United Nations may respectively be parties.

2. Paragraph 1 of this Article shall not be interpreted as giving grounds for delay or postponement of the negotiation and conclusion of agreements for placing mandated and other territories under the trusteeship system as provided for in Article 77.

Article 81

The trusteeship agreement shall in each case include the terms under which the trust territory will be administered and designate the authority which will exercise the administration of the trust territory. Such authority, hereinafter called the administering authority, may be one or more states or the Organization itself.

THE UNITED NATIONS

Article 82

There may be designated, in any trusteeship agreement, a strategic area or areas which may include part or all of the trust territory to which the agreement applies, without prejudice to any special agreement or agreements made under Article 43.

Article 83

1. All functions of the United Nations relating to strategic areas, including the approval of the terms of the trusteeship agreements and of their alteration or amendment, shall be exercised by the Security Council.

2. The basic objectives set forth in Article 76 shall be applicable to the people of each strategic area.

3. The Security Council shall, subject to the provisions of the trusteeship agreements and without prejudice to security considerations, avail itself of the assistance of the Trusteeship Council to perform those functions of the United Nations under the trusteeship system relating to political, economic, social, and educational matters in the strategic areas.

Article 84

It shall be the duty of the administering authority to ensure that the trust territory shall play its part in the maintenance of international peace and security. To this end the administering authority may make use of volunteer forces, facilities, and assistance from the trust territory in carrying out the obligations towards the Security Council undertaken in this regard by the administering authority, as well as for local defence and the maintenance of law and order within the trust territory.

Article 85

1. The functions of the United Nations with regard to trusteeship agreements for all areas not designated as strategic, including the approval of the terms of the trusteeship agreements and of their alteration or amendment, shall be exercised by the General Assembly.

2. The Trusteeship Council, operating under the authority of the General Assembly, shall assist the General Assembly in carrying out these functions.

CHAPTER XIII THE TRUSTEESHIP COUNCIL

Composition

Article 86

1. The Trusteeship Council shall consist of the following Members of the United Nations:

- those Members administering trust territories;
- such of those Members mentioned by name in Article 23 as are not administering trust territories; and
- as many other Members elected for three-year terms by the General Assembly as may be necessary to ensure that the total number of members of the Trusteeship Council is equally divided between those Members of the United Nations which administer trust territories and those which do not.

2. Each member of the Trusteeship Council shall designate one specially qualified person to represent it therein.

Functions and Powers

Article 87

The General Assembly and, under its authority, the Trusteeship Council, in carrying out their functions, may:

- consider reports submitted by the administering authority;
- accept petitions and examine them in consultation with the administering authority;

- provide for periodic visits to the respective trust territories at times agreed upon with the administering authority; and
- take these and other actions in conformity with the terms of the trusteeship agreements.

Article 88

The Trusteeship Council shall formulate a questionnaire on the political, economic, social, and educational advancement of the inhabitants of each trust territory, and the administering authority for each trust territory within the competence of the General Assembly shall make an annual report to the General Assembly upon the basis of such questionnaire.

Voting

Article 89

1. Each member of the Trusteeship Council shall have one vote.

2. Decisions of the Trusteeship Council shall be made by a majority of the members present and voting.

Procedure

Article 90

1. The Trusteeship Council shall adopt its own rules of procedure, including the method of selecting its President.

2. The Trusteeship Council shall meet as required in accordance with its rules, which shall include provision for the convening of meetings on the request of a majority of its members.

Article 91

The Trusteeship Council shall, when appropriate, avail itself of the assistance of the Economic and Social Council and of the specialized agencies in regard to matters with which they are respectively concerned.

CHAPTER XIV

THE INTERNATIONAL COURT OF JUSTICE

Article 92

The International Court of Justice shall be the principal judicial organ of the United Nations. It shall function in accordance with the annexed Statute, which is based upon the Statute of the Permanent Court of International Justice and forms an integral part of the present Charter.

Article 93

1. All Members of the United Nations are ipso facto parties to the Statute of the International Court of Justice.

2. A state which is not a Member of the United Nations may become a party to the Statute of the International Court of Justice on condition to be determined in each case by the General Assembly upon the recommendation of the Security Council.

Article 94

1. Each Member of the United Nations undertakes to comply with the decision of the International Court of Justice in any case to which it is a party.

2. If any party to a case fails to perform the obligations incumbent upon it under a judgment rendered by the Court, the other party may have recourse to the Security Council, which may, if it deems necessary, make recommendations or decide upon measures to be taken to give effect to the judgment.

Article 95

Nothing in the present Charter shall prevent Members of the United Nations from entrusting the solution of their differences to other tribunals by virtue of agreements already in existence or which may be concluded in the future.

THE UNITED NATIONS

Article 96

1. The General Assembly or the Security Council may request the International Court of Justice to give an advisory opinion on any legal question.

2. Other organs of the United Nations and specialized agencies, which may at any time be so authorized by the General Assembly, may also request advisory opinions of the Court on legal questions arising within the scope of their activities.

CHAPTER XV THE SECRETARIAT

Article 97

The Secretariat shall comprise a Secretary-General and such staff as the Organization may require. The Secretary-General shall be appointed by the General Assembly upon the recommendation of the Security Council. He shall be the chief administrative officer of the Organization.

Article 98

The Secretary-General shall act in that capacity in all meetings of the General Assembly, of the Security Council, of the Economic and Social Council, and of the Trusteeship Council, and shall perform such other functions as are entrusted to him by these organs. The Secretary-General shall make an annual report to the General Assembly on the work of the Organization.

Article 99

The Secretary-General may bring to the attention of the Security Council any matter which in his opinion may threaten the maintenance of international peace and security.

Article 100

1. In the performance of their duties the Secretary-General and the staff shall not seek or receive instructions from any government or from any other authority external to the Organization. They shall refrain from any action which might reflect on their position as international officials responsible only to the Organization.

2. Each Member of the United Nations undertakes to respect the exclusively international character of the responsibilities of the Secretary-General and the staff and not to seek to influence them in the discharge of their responsibilities.

Article 101

1. The staff shall be appointed by the Secretary-General under regulations established by the General Assembly.

2. Appropriate staffs shall be permanently assigned to the Economic and Social Council, the Trusteeship Council, and, as required, to other organs of the United Nations. These staffs shall form a part of the Secretariat.

3. The paramount consideration in the employment of the staff and in the determination of the conditions of service shall be the necessity of securing the highest standards of efficiency, competence, and integrity. Due regard shall be paid to the importance of recruiting the staff on as wide a geographical basis as possible.

CHAPTER XVI MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS

Article 102

1. Every treaty and every international agreement entered into by any Member of the United Nations after the present Charter comes into force shall as soon as possible be registered with the Secretariat and published by it.

2. No party to any such treaty or international agreement which has not been registered in accordance with the provisions of paragraph 1 of this Article may invoke that treaty or agreement before any organ of the United Nations.

Article 103

In the event of a conflict between the obligations of the Members of the United Nations under the present Charter and their obligations under any other international agreement, their obligations under the present Charter shall prevail.

Article 104

The Organization shall enjoy in the territory of each of its Members such legal capacity as may be necessary for the exercise of its functions and the fulfillment of its purposes.

Article 105

1. The Organization shall enjoy in the territory of each of its Members such privileges and immunities as are necessary for the fulfillment of its purposes.

2. Representatives of the Members of the United Nations and officials of the Organization shall similarly enjoy such privileges and immunities as are necessary for the independent exercise of their functions in connection with the Organization.

3. The General Assembly may make recommendations with a view to determining the details of the application of paragraphs 1 and 2 of this Article or may propose conventions to the Members of the United Nations for this purpose.

CHAPTER XVII TRANSITIONAL SECURITY ARRANGEMENTS

Article 106

Pending the coming into force of such special agreements referred to in Article 43 as in the opinion of the Security Council enable it to begin the exercise of its responsibilities under Article 42, the parties to the Four-Nation Declaration signed at Moscow, October 30, 1943, and France, shall, in accordance with the provisions of paragraph 5 of that Declaration, consult with one another and as occasion requires with other Members of the United Nations with a view to such joint action on behalf of the Organization as may be necessary for the purpose of maintaining international peace and security.

Article 107

Nothing in the present Charter shall invalidate or preclude action, in relation to any state which during the Second World War has been an enemy of any signatory to the present Charter, taken or authorized as a result of that war by the Governments having responsibility for such action.

CHAPTER XVIII AMENDMENTS

Article 108

Amendments to the present Charter shall come into force for all Members of the United Nations when they have been adopted by a vote of two-thirds of the members of the General Assembly and ratified in accordance with their respective constitutional processes by two-thirds of the Members of the United Nations, including all the permanent members of the Security Council.

Article 109

1. A General Conference of the Members of the United Nations for the purpose of reviewing the present Charter may be held at a date and place to be fixed by a two-thirds of power, transport and telecommunications has been established with ECA, IBRD and UNDP under the chairmanship of the African Development Bank. The Bank has also entered into co-operative agreements with FAO, UNESCO, ILO and OAU. The Bank is one of the executing agencies for UNDP projects in Africa.

In order to increase its capital resources and raise money for lending at concessionary terms, the Bank has promoted the establishment of an African Development Fund, which is open to contributions from the industrialized capital-exporting countries. The Bank and fifteen non-African countries have now signed the Agreement establishing the Fund. The Fund commenced operations in August 1973.

Together with a number of private banks, AfDB is promoting the International Financial Corporation for Investment and Development in Africa (Société internationale financière pour les investissements et le développement en Afrique—SIFIDA), registered in Luxembourg in July 1970, with a capital of $12.5 million.

The Bank is active in numerous other fields, including co-operation with African national development finance institutions, the joint financing of projects with other agencies, equity participation in national development banks and the granting of a wide variety of technical assistance facilities.

ORGANIZATION

ANDEAN GROUP COMMISSION

This is the supreme authority of the Group consisting of permanent representatives of each member country who alternate in the Presidency.

Bolivia: FERNANDO VILLA.

Chile: MAXIMO ERRAZURIZ.

Colombia: ENRIQUE ZUREK MEZA.

Ecuador: Dr. FRANCISCO ROSALES RAMOS.

Peru: LUIS BARANDIARÁN PAGADOR (President).

Venezuela: Dr. JULIO SOSA RODRIGUES

JUNTA

This body formulates policy for submission to the Commission and supervises the implementation of the Commission's decisions.

Co-ordinator: FELIPE SALAZAR SANTOS.

ACTIVITIES

In August 1966, representatives from Chile, Colombia, Ecuador, Peru and Venezuela met in Bogotá and signed a pact calling for accelerated regional integration measures to facilitate the establishment of a Latin American Common Market. In June 1967, at the close of the fifth Inter-American ECOSOC conference at Viña del Mar, the Andean Development Corporation (see below) was founded, and a Mixed Commission of ten delegates from the five countries was formed.

In July 1967 the Mixed Commission held its second meeting in Quito to draw up a sub-regional planning agreement. This agreement covers co-operation on development projects, particularly in the petrochemical, iron and steel, automotive and electronics industries, and also includes provisions for the eventual establishment of a common external tariff for the region and plans for co-ordinating national economic policies. The text of the agreement was approved by the Council of LAFTA Foreign Ministers in September 1967.

In July 1968, at a meeting at Cartagena, Colombia, the Mixed Commission agreed that the first integration measures should take effect in 1970 and that elimination of internal tariffs and the adoption of a common external tariff should be achieved by 1980.

In May 1969 the Mixed Commission, including a delegate from Bolivia, met in Cartagena, Colombia, to sign an Andean Regional Agreement (Acuerdo Regional Andino). Bolivia, Chile, Colombia, Ecuador and Peru signed the pact, which calls for rapid reductions in tariff barriers, leading to the establishment by 1980 of a free trade area, and for integration of industry in the region. Timetables for the removal of tariffs and the forming of common external tariffs were varied, with special concessions granted to Bolivia and Ecuador, the less advanced nations party to the agreement.

The pact provides for a common policy on foreign capital, trademarks, patents, licences and royalties to be established, the co-ordination of the financial policies of the states, a joint system for industrial promotion and multi-national enterprises and the unification of the various systems of industry, agriculture and the creation of a common reserve fund.

The first step towards reduction of tariff barriers and other trade restrictions within the Group came on April 15th, 1970 with the coming into force of the Andean Regional Agreement. The 175 items to be traded freely between Chile, Colombia and Peru comprise the LAFTA Common List and include agricultural products, raw materials and a few items of industrial machinery. Bolivia and Ecuador who are also signatories to the Cartagena Agreement are expected to remove tariffs more gradually.

An agreement was signed by member countries in 1970 providing for the pooling of merchant fleets.

The joint financing of development projects by members of the Group was discussed at a meeting in June 1970 of representatives of banks in the region.

In October 1970 the Commission reached agreement on the gradual removal of basic customs duties as envisaged in the Cartagena Agreement. They would disappear by 1981.

In November 1970, the President of the Andean Group, Jorge Valencia Jaramillo, visited the Commission of the European Communities in Brussels. Discussions covered trade, investment policy and technical and financial co-operation. Further contacts during 1971 developed the suggestion that a Joint Committee should be set up between the Andean Group and the Communities and a sub-committee was formed in February 1973.

In December 1970 it was decided that from July 1971 foreign investments in all the member states wishing to qualify for preferential treatment would have to transfer 51 per cent of their shares to local investors over a period of 15 years in Colombia, Chile and Peru and 20 years in Bolivia and Ecuador. Except in cases which the Commission ruled to be exceptional, foreign-owned companies would not be allowed to repatriate dividends of more than 14 per cent. The Commission decided that proposals for the establishment of a minimum common external tariff should come into operation by the end of 1980.

Argentina and the Andean Group established a joint commission to further mutual assistance.

In November 1972 a joint Andean-Mexican Commission was created to initiate close co-operation and the Andean Development Corporation (ADC), the development-financing organ of the Group, established a system of consultation with the Central American Economic Integration Bank. A Health Council was created to co-ordinate national health policies.

Negotiations which began in March 1972 over Venezuela's application to join the Andean Group were concluded in February 1973 when Venezuela became the sixth member of the Group. In May a 30 per cent inter-airways fare reduction came into force.

The representatives of the Group set up a joint Hispano-Andean Commission with Spain in June 1973 to establish mutual collaboration over a wide range of fields. Two separate bureaux were created in Lima and Madrid and Spain undertook to grant financial assistance to the ADC.

SECURITY TREATY

(Between Australia, New Zealand and the U.S.A.)

The parties to this treaty:

reaffirming their faith in the purposes and principles of the UN Charter and their desire to live in peace with all peoples and Governments, and desiring to strengthen the fabric of peace in the Pacific area;

noting that the United States already has arrangements pursuant to which its armed forces are stationed in the Philippines, and has armed forces and administrative responsibilities in the Ryukyus, and upon the coming into force of the Japanese peace treaty may also station armed forces in and about Japan to assist in the preservation of peace and security in the Japan area;

recognizing that Australia and New Zealand, as members of the British Commonwealth of Nations, have military obligations outside as well as within the Pacific area; desiring to declare publicly and formally their sense of unity, so that no potential aggressor could be under the illusion that any of them stand alone in the Pacific area; and desiring further to co-ordinate their efforts for collective defence for the preservation of peace and security pending the development of a more comprehensive system of regional security in the Pacific area; declare and agree as follows:

Article 1

The parties undertake, in conformity with the UN Charter, to settle by peaceful means any international disputes in which they might be involved, and to refrain in their international relations from the use of force in any manner inconsistent with the purposes of the United Nations.

Article 2

In order more effectively to achieve the objectives of the treaty, the parties will maintain and develop their individual and collective capacity to resist armed attack "by means of continuous self-help and mutual aid".

Article 3

The parties will consult together when, in the opinion of any one of them, the territorial integrity, political independence, or security of any one of them is threatened in the Pacific.

ANZUS TREATY

Article 4

"Each party recognizes that an armed attack in the Pacific area on any of the other parties would be dangerous to its own peace and safety, and declares that it will act to meet the common danger in accordance with its constitutional processes." Any such attack, and all measures taken as a result of such attack will be reported to the UN Security Council. Such measures will be terminated when the Security Council has taken the necessary steps to restore and maintain international peace and security.

Article 5

For the purpose of Article 4, an armed attack on any of the three countries will be deemed to include "an armed attack on the metropolitan territory of any of the parties, or on the island territories under its jurisdiction in the Pacific, or on its armed forces, public vessels, or aircraft in the Pacific".

Article 6

The treaty will not affect the rights and obligations of the three countries under the UN Charter, or the responsibility of the United Nations for the maintenance of international peace and security.

Article 7

The three countries will establish a Council, consisting of their Foreign Ministers or deputies, to consider matters concerning the implementation of the treaty. The Council will be organized as to be able to meet at any time.

Article 8

Pending the development of a more comprehensive regional security system in the Pacific, and the development by the UN of more effective means to maintain international peace and security, the Council established under Article 7 will maintain a consultative relationship with States, regional organizations, associations of States, and other authorities in the Pacific area which are in a position to further the purpose of the treaty and contribute to the security of the area.

Article 9

The Treaty is to be ratified by the parties in accordance with their respective constitutional processes. The instruments of ratification are to be deposited with the Australian Government.

Article 10

The Treaty is to remain in force indefinitely. Any party may cease to be a member of the Council established by Article 7 one year after notice has been given to the Government of Australia, which will inform the Governments of the other parties.

THE ARAB LEAGUE

THE PACT OF THE LEAGUE OF ARAB STATES

(March 22nd, 1945)

Article 1

The League of Arab States is composed of the independent Arab States which have signed this Pact.

Any independent Arab state has the right to become a member of the League. If it desires to do so, it shall submit a request which will be deposited with the Permanent Secretariat-General and submitted to the Council at the first meeting held after submission of the request.

Article 2

The League has as its purpose the strengthening of the relations between the member states; the co-ordination of their policies in order to achieve co-operation between them and to safeguard their independence and sovereignty; and a general concern with the affairs and interests of the Arab countries. It has also as its purpose the close co-operation of the member states, with due regard to the organization and circumstances of each state, on the following matters:

- (a) Economic and financial affairs, including commercial relations, customs, currency, and questions of agriculture and industry.
- (b) Communications: this includes railways, roads, aviation, navigation, telegraphs and posts.
- (c) Cultural affairs.
- (d) Nationality, passports, visas, execution of judgments, and extradition of criminals.
- (e) Social affairs.
- (f) Health problems.

Article 3

The League shall possess a Council composed of the representatives of the member states of the League; each state shall have a single vote, irrespective of the number of its representatives.

It shall be the task of the Council to achieve the realization of the objectives of the League and to supervise the execution of agreements which the member states have concluded on the questions enumerated in the preceding article, or on any other questions.

It likewise shall be the Council's task to decide upon the means by which the League is to co-operate with the international bodies to be created in the future in order to guarantee security and peace and regulate economic and social relations.

Article 4

For each of the questions listed in Article 2 there shall be set up a special committee in which the member states of the League shall be represented. These committees shall be charged with the task of laying down the principles and extent of co-operation. Such principles shall be formulated as draft agreements, to be presented to the Council for examination preparatory to their submission to the aforesaid states.

Representatives of the other Arab countries may take part in the work of the aforesaid committees. The Council shall determine the conditions under which these representatives may be permitted to participate and the rules governing such representation.

Article 5

Any resort to force in order to resolve disputes arising between two or more member states of the League is prohibited. If there should arise among them a difference which does not concern a state's independence, sovereignty, or territorial integrity, and if the parties to the dispute have recourse to the Council for the settlement of this difference; the decision of the Council shall then be enforceable and obligatory.

In such a case, the states between whom the difference has arisen shall not participate in the deliberations and decisions of the Council.

The Council shall mediate in all differences which threaten to lead to war between two member states, or a member state and a third state, with a view to bringing about their reconciliation.

Decisions of arbitration and mediation shall be taken by majority vote.

Article 6

In case of aggression or threat of aggression by one state against a member state, the state which has been attacked or threatened with aggression may demand the immediate convocation of the Council.

The Council shall by unanimous decision determine the measures necessary to repulse the aggression. If the aggressor is a member state, his vote shall not be counted in determining unanimity.

If, as a result of the attack, the government of the State attacked finds itself unable to communicate with the Council, that state's representative in the Council shall have the right to request the convocation of the Council for the purpose indicated in the foregoing paragraph. In the event that this representative is unable to communicate with the Council, any member state of the League shall have the right to request the convocation of the Council.

Article 7

Unanimous decisions of the Council shall be binding upon all member states of the League; majority decisions shall be binding only upon those states which have accepted them.

In either case the decisions of the Council shall be enforced in each member state according to its respective basic laws.

Article 8

Each member state shall respect the systems of government established in the other member states and regard them as exclusive concerns of those states. Each shall pledge to abstain from any action calculated to change established systems of government.

Article 9

States of the League which desire to establish closer co-operation and stronger bonds than are provided by this Pact may conclude agreements to that end.

Treaties and agreements already concluded or to be concluded in the future between a member state and another state shall not be binding or restrictive upon other members.

Article 10

The permanent seat of the League of Arab States is established in Cairo. The Council may, however, assemble at any other place it may designate.

Article 11

The Council of the League shall convene in ordinary session twice a year, in March and in September. It shall convene in extraordinary session upon the request of two member states of the League whenever the need arises.

Article 12

The League shall have a permanent Secretariat-General which shall consist of a Secretary-General, Assistant Secretaries, and an appropriate number of officials.

The Council of the League shall appoint the Secretary-General by a majority of two-thirds of the states of the League. The Secretary-General, with the approval of the Council, shall appoint the Assistant Secretaries and the principal officials of the League.

The Council of the League shall establish an administrative regulation for the functions of the Secretariat-General and matters relating to the Staff.

The Secretary-General shall have the rank of Ambassador and the Assistant Secretaries that of Ministers Plenipotentiary.

The first Secretary-General of the League is named in an Annex to this Pact.

Article 13

The Secretary-General shall prepare the draft of the budget of the League and shall submit it to the Council for approval before the beginning of each fiscal year.

The Council shall fix the share of the expenses to be borne by each state of the League. This share may be reconsidered if necessary.

Article 14

The members of the Council of the League as well as the members of the committees and the officials who are to be designated in the administrative regulation shall enjoy diplomatic privileges and immunity when engaged in the exercise of their functions.

The building occupied by the organs of the League shall be inviolable.

Article 15

The first meeting of the Council shall be convened at the invitation of the head of the Egyptian Government. Thereafter it shall be convened at the invitation of the Secretary-General.

The representatives of the member states of the League shall alternately assume the presidency of the Council at each of its ordinary sessions.

Article 16

Except in cases specifically indicated in this Pact, a majority vote of the Council shall be sufficient to make enforceable decisions on the following matters:

- (a) Matters relating to personnel.
- (b) Adoption of the budget of the League.
- (c) Establishment of the administrative regulations for the Council, the Committees, and the Secretariat-General.
- (d) Decisions to adjourn the sessions.

Article 17

Each member state of the League shall deposit with the Secretariat-General one copy of every treaty or agreement concluded or to be concluded in the future between itself and another member state of the League or a third state.

Article 18

If a member state contemplates withdrawal from the League, it shall inform the Council of its intention one year before such withdrawal is to go into effect.

The Council of the League may consider any state which fails to fulfil its obligations under this Pact as having become separated from the League, this to go into effect upon a unanimous decision of the states, not counting the state concerned.

Article 19

This Pact may be amended with the consent of two-thirds of the states belonging to the League, especially in order to make firmer and stronger ties between the member states, to create an Arab Tribunal of Arbitration, and to regulate the relations of the League with any international bodies to be created in the future to guarantee security and peace.

Final action on an amendment cannot be taken prior to the session following the session in which the motion was initiated.

If a state does not accept such an amendment it may withdraw at such time as the amendment goes into effect, without being bound by the provisions of the preceding article.

Article 20

This Pact and its Annexes shall be ratified according to the basic laws in force among the High Contracting Parties.

The instruments of ratification shall be deposited with the Secretariat-General of the Council and the Pact shall become operative as regards each ratifying state fifteen days after the Secretary-General has received the instruments of ratification from four states.

This Pact has been drawn up in Cairo in the Arabic language on this 8th day of Rabi' II, thirteen hundred and sixty-four (March 22nd, 1945), in one copy which shall be deposited in the safe keeping of the Secretariat-General.

An identical copy shall be delivered to each state of the League.

Annex Regarding Palestine

Since the termination of the last great war the rule of the Ottoman Empire over the Arab countries, among them Palestine, which had become detached from that Empire, has come to an end. She has come to be autonomous, not subordinate to any other state.

The Treaty of Lausanne proclaimed that her future was to be settled by the parties concerned.

However, even though she was as yet unable to control her own affairs, the Covenant of the League (of Nations) in 1919 made provision for a regime based upon recognition of her independence.

Her international existence and independence in the legal sense cannot, therefore, be questioned, any more than could the independence of the other Arab countries.

Although the outward manifestations of this independence have remained obscured for reasons beyond her control, this should not be allowed to interfere with her participation in the work of the Council of the League.

The states signatory to the Pact of the Arab League are therefore of the opinion that, considering the special circumstances of Palestine and until that Country can effectively exercise its independence, the Council of the League should take charge of the selection of an Arab representative from Palestine to take part in its work.

Annex Regarding Co-operation with Countries which are not Members of the Council of the League

Whereas the member states of the League will have to deal in the Council as well as in the committees with matters which will benefit and affect the Arab world at large;

And whereas the Council has to take into account the aspirations of the Arab countries which are not members of the Council and has to work toward their realization;

Now therefore, it particularly behoves the states signatory to the Pact of the Arab League to enjoin the Council of the League, when considering the admission of those countries to participation in the committees referred to in the Pact, that it should do its utmost to co-operate with them, and furthermore, that it should spare no effort to learn their needs and understand their aspirations and hopes; and that it should work thenceforth for their best interests and the safeguarding of their future with all the political means at its disposal.

ARAB ECONOMIC UNITY AGREEMENT

The Economic Unity Agreement between the member states of the Arab League was drawn up in Cairo on June 6th, 1962, and subsequently came into effect on April 30th, 1964. The Agreement was signed in 1962 by Jordan, Kuwait, Morocco, Syria and U.A.R., in 1963 by Iraq and Yemen, and in 1968 by Sudan. It has been ratified by Kuwait (1962), U.A.R. (1963), Iraq, Jordan and Syria (1964), Yemen (1967) and Sudan (1969). The Unity Council held its first meeting in Cairo on June 3rd, 1964.

The Agreement is summarized below.

OBJECTS

Preamble

The Governments of the member-states of the Arab League, desirous of organizing between them and unifying their relations on bases accommodating to the natural and historical ties between them, and for the purpose of creating the best conditions for the growth of their economy, for promoting their riches, and for ensuring the prosperity of their peoples, have agreed on creating a complete unity between them, to be achieved gradually with the maximum possible speed ensuring the transition to the desired situation without causing harm to their essential interests.

Article 1

The main objective of the Agreement is to attain complete Arab Economic Unity. The Arab State will thus have a unified, integrated, proportionate Arab economy guided by one single economic policy for all the component parts. The member-states and their nationals are guaranteed equality in the following:

- (1) Freedom of movement of persons and capital.
- (2) Freedom of exchange of domestic and foreign goods and products.
- (3) Freedom of residence, work, employment, and exercise of economic activities.
- (4) Freedom of transport and transit and of using means of transport, ports and civil airports.
- (5) Rights of ownership, of making one's will, and of inheritance.

THE ARAB LEAGUE

METHODS

Article 2

The Arab states are required to work for accomplishing the following:

(1) The Arab states should be made one customs zone subject to a single administration. Customs tariffs, legislations, and regulations applied in these states should be standardized. This is to be achieved by gradual abolition of customs duties between the Arab states for ensuring the exchange of Arab-made goods and the eventual removal of duties altogether. In addition customs duties should be adjusted between the Arab states so as to arrive at standard rates in respect of the outside world. In this way, the Arab states would be converted into one market where both home-produced and imported goods could move without being subject to any duties other than those imposed in respect of the outside world.

(2) The Arab states should work for standardizing their import-export policies and all relevant regulations. It is a prerequisite for the creation of one Arab market to have import-export policies and regulations unified and co-ordinated.

(3) Standardizing transport and transit systems. As the means of transport will enjoy freedom of movement between all parts of the Arab homeland, they should necessarily become subject to standard regulations.

(4) Trade agreements and payments agreements with outside countries are to be concluded collectively by the Arab states. The creation of one Arab market makes it necessary to have such agreements concluded jointly. Relations with the outside world will be unified.

(5) Policies related to agriculture, industry and internal trade should be co-ordinated. Economic legislation should be standardized in a manner ensuring equal terms to all nationals of the contracting countries in respect of work in agriculture, industry, or any other calling. The co-ordination of these policies and legislations is an inevitable sequence to the creation of the United Arab Market where Arab nationals are to be guaranteed the right of taking up any profession or any economic activity anywhere in the Arab world.

(6) Steps should be taken to co-ordinate labour and social legislation. In so far as Arab workers are to enjoy the freedom of working anywhere they please in the Arab homeland, it is necessary to make them all subject to one labour law and to the same social security rules.

(7) (a) Steps should be taken to co-ordinate legislation concerning government and municipal taxes and duties and all other taxes pertaining to agriculture, industry, trade, real estate, and investments in a manner ensuring equal opportunities.

(b) Measures should be taken to prevent the duplication of taxes and duties levied on the nationals of the contracting countries.

(8) The monetary and fiscal policies and all relevant regulations of the contracting countries should be co-ordinated before the standardization of currency.

(9) Standardizing the methods of the classification of statistics.

(10) All necessary measures should be taken to ensure the attainment of the goals specified in Articles 1 and 2 of the Agreement.

It is however possible to by-pass the principle of standardization in respect to certain circumstances and certain countries—this being made with the approval of the Arab Economic Unity Council.

ORGANIZATION

Articles 3-10

Article 3 provides for the establishment of a body with the name of "The Arab Economic Unity Council". This Council will have its centre in Cairo and will be composed of a full member from each of the contracting parties. Decisions are taken by a two-thirds majority. Each state has one vote.

The Council has been vested with all necessary powers for implementing the rules of the Agreement and its protocols, for running the subsidiary committees and establishments and for appointing members of staff and experts.

Branching from the Unity Council are a number of permanent and provisional committees.

The permanent committees are:

(1) The Customs Committee, whose task will be to handle customs technical and administrative affairs and transit affairs.

(2) The Monetary and Financial Committee. This Committee will undertake the handling of affairs pertaining to monetary matters, banking taxes, duties and other financial affairs. Two Sub-Committees have been formed:

(a) Sub-Committee on Financial and Taxation Affairs;

(b) Sub-Committee on Monetary Affairs.

(3) The Economic Committee. It will be the duty of this Committee to handle matters pertaining to agriculture, industry, trade, transport, communications, labour and social affairs. Five Sub-Committees have been formed:

(a) Agricultural Growth Sub-Committee; (b) Industrial Co-ordination and Mineral Wealth Development Sub-Committee; (c) Planning and Trade Co-ordination Sub-Committee; (d) Planning and Transport and Communications Co-ordination Sub-Committee; (e) Social Affairs Sub-Committee.

The Council and its subsidiaries enjoy financial and administrative autonomy. The Council will have a special budget to which the member-states will subscribe at the rate of their subscriptions to the budget of the Secretariat-General of the Arab League. The Council has been entrusted with the tasks of formulating regulations and legislations aiming at the creation of a unified Arab customs zone and at co-ordinating foreign trade policy. The conclusion of trade agreements and of payments agreements has been made subject to the approval of the Council. The Council is also entrusted with the task of co-ordinating economic growth, laying down programmes for the attainment of common economic development plans, co-ordinating policies for agriculture, industry and external trade, working out transport and transit regulations and unification of regulations on labour and social security, and harmonizing financial and monetary policies with the purpose of standardizing currency. It will also formulate all other legislation necessary for the achievement of the purposes of the Agreement.

THE ARAB LEAGUE

IMPLEMENTATION

Articles 11-20, Protocols

The implementation of the Agreement is to take place in successive stages and in the shortest possible time. The Council has been required to draw up a practical plan for the stages of implementation and to define the legislative, administrative and technical measures necessary for each stage taking into consideration the appendix concerning the necessary steps for the realization of Arab Economic Unity, which is attached to the Agreement and constitutes an integral part of it. Article 15 stipulates that any two or more of the contracting parties have the right to conclude agreements for economic unity wider than that provided for under the Agreement.

The Council shall exercise its powers in accordance with resolutions which it will pass, which will be executed by the member-states in accordance with their constitutional rules.

The Governments of the contracting parties have pledged not to promulgate any laws, regulations or administrative decisions of a nature which might conflict with the Agreement or its Protocols. However, the contracting parties have been given the freedom, under the Agreement's First Protocol, to conclude bilateral economic agreements, for extraordinary political or defensive purposes, with outside parties, provided that such bilateral agreements contain nothing prejudicial to the objectives of this Agreement.

The Agreement's Second Protocol places limitations on the powers of the Arab Economic Unity Council. In the course of an initial period not exceeding five years (but which can be renewed for up to ten years) the Council is required to study the necessary steps for co-ordinating the economic, financial and social policies and for the attainment of the following objectives:

(a) The freedom of the movement of persons and the freedom of work, employment, residence, ownership, making one's will, and inheritance.

(b) Giving unrestricted and unqualified freedom to the movement of transit goods without any restrictions in respect of the type or nationality or the means of transport.

(c) Facilitating the exchange of Arab goods and Arab products.

(d) The freedom of exercising economic activities—it should be understood that this should cause no harm to the interests of some of the contracting parties at this stage.

(e) The freedom of using ports and civil airports in a manner guaranteeing activation and development.

At its first session held in Cairo from June 3rd-6th, 1964, the Economic Unity Council decided to interpret the time periods suggested in the Second Protocol in such a manner as to speed up the accomplishment of the various phases. Thus the Council considered the five-year period proposed as a maximum limit for the completion of the necessary studies. The Council also resolved to benefit from the rule established in Article 4 of the Protocol, which provided for the following:

"Two parties or more can, if they so desire, agree on ending the introductory stage or any other stage, and move directly to comprehensive economic unity."

The Council has therefore begun by studying the practical steps to be taken for the achievement of economic unity. It was decided that the Arab Common Market project should be accomplished as quickly as possible. A Technical Committee was assigned with the study of the subject, and its detailed report was debated and approved by the Council at its second meeting on August 7th, 1964.

The resolution passed at that meeting called for exempting from customs duties all agricultural and animal products as well as natural resources and industrial goods exchanged between the members of the Arab Market. This exemption will be either complete or gradual. It was also resolved that, in the case of gradual exemption, the rate should be ten per cent in respect of industrial goods and twenty per cent for agricultural products, to be effective from the beginning of 1965.

The Arab Common Market came into operation on January 1st, 1965, with U.A.R., Iraq, Syria, Jordan and Kuwait as members. However, the Kuwait National Assembly voted against ratification of the Agreement in July 1965. The four remaining members of the Council met again in Amman in November 1965.

In mid-1966 the Economic Unity Council adopted a resolution calling for the creation of an Arab Payments Union. The purpose of the projected Union is to reduce or eliminate non-tariff restrictions, imposed by national governments for balance of payments reasons.

In May 1968 at a meeting of the Economic Unity Council it was agreed that free movement of industrial products between member states should be achieved by 1971, and tariffs on agricultural products were to be completely abolished during 1969.

ORGANIZATION

ASIAN AND PACIFIC COUNCIL

Composed of the Foreign Ministers of member countries; meetings held to date have been at Seoul, Republic of Korea, in June 1966, at Bangkok, Thailand, in July 1967, at Canberra, Australia, in July/August 1968, at Tokyo, Japan, in 1969, at Wellington, New Zealand, in June 1970, and at Manila, Philippines, in July 1971. The seventh meeting was held at Seoul, Korea, in June, 1972.

Secretariat: Provided each year by the government of whichever member country is venue for the next Ministerial Meeting.

STANDING COMMITTEE

Composed of accredited ambassadors of the participating countries; convenes regularly between Council meetings for consultations to carry forward the decisions of the Council, e.g. the examination of proposed projects in the economic cultural and social fields.

PROJECTS

Registry of Scientific and Technical Services: Canberra, Australia; opened 1968; Dir. J. R. WOLFE.

Cultural and Social Centre: Seoul, Republic of Korea; commenced operations 1968-69; Dir. BYUNG KYU KANG.

Economic Co-operation Centre: Bangkok, Thailand; established 1970.

Food and Fertiliser Technology Centre: Taipei, Taiwan; opened 1970; Dir. HAI FAN CHU.

Maritime Co-operation Scheme: Tokyo, Japan; the first meeting was held in November 1970.

AIMS

ASPAC is a consultative association of nine countries of the Asian and Pacific region, membership being open to other countries in the region. The organization aims to foster greater co-operation and solidarity among members and to assist the development of their national economies. Co-operation is envisaged in the political, economic, cultural and social fields. Ministers, in the communiqué released after the Third Ministerial Meeting, affirmed their determination to uphold the following principles and objectives:

1. Mutual respect for national sovereignty, political independence and territorial integrity.
2. Attainment of equality, freedom and justice for all.

3. Pursuit of peace and settlement of disputes by peaceful means and respect for the rule of law.
4. Realization of a regional community where peace, order and progress are ensured.
5. Emphasis upon the self-reliance of the Asian and Pacific peoples based on their sense of a common destiny and regional solidarity.
6. Promotion of close co-operation in economic, social and cultural fields in order to further the development of a prosperous community of Asian and Pacific nations.
7. Strengthening of collaboration with other nations and existing international and regional organizations.

ASPAC MINISTERIAL MEETINGS

The Second Ministerial Meeting, held in Bangkok, accepted as ASPAC Projects a Registry of Experts' Services (later renamed Registry of Scientific and Technical Services) based in Canberra, Australia and a Cultural and Social Centre in Seoul, Republic of Korea.

At the Third Ministerial Meeting the Registry of Experts' Services was officially opened, and an international agreement was signed establishing the ASPAC Cultural and Social Centre. The meeting considered proposals for the establishment of a Food and Fertiliser Technology Centre and an Economic Co-ordination Centre for the Asian and Pacific Region. It was agreed that a Standing Committee should examine the proposal for a non-permanent Study Group to study existing economic agencies in the area with a view to determining the field of ASPAC activities in trade and economic development.

The Fourth Ministerial Meeting established Bangkok as the seat of the Economic Co-operation Centre.

At the Fifth Ministerial Meeting economic and political developments in the Region were discussed, and hopes expressed for a settlement of outstanding problems and the continuance of economic growth. The Ministers urged the cessation of atmospheric testing of nuclear weapons in the Asian and Pacific Region which had continued despite repeated protests from ASPAC member countries. The agreement setting up the Economic Co-operation Centre was signed. The proposal for an ASPAC Maritime Co-operation Scheme was referred to the Standing Committee for detailed consideration as was the proposal for an ASPAC Youth Volunteer Programme.

At the Sixth Ministerial Meeting the question of relations with China was the main topic on the agenda. It was finally agreed that the matter should be left to individual members to decide. President Park Chung Hee said at the Seventh Ministerial Meeting that ASPAC should not be directed against any nation or group of nations and that relations should be governed by "harmonious co-ordination" especially with Communist countries.

REGIONAL SURVEYS AND RESEARCH

The ADB has printed and published Asian Agricultural Survey (1969), Southeast Asia's Economy in the 1970's (1971) and Southeast Asian Regional Transport Survey (1972).

It is conducting a Study of the Coconut Industry and is associated with the ECAFE-sponsored Asian Industrial Survey, the Asian Vegetable Research and Development Center in Taipei, and a study of the legal problems in the flow of credit and provision of security for development purposes in the region. It has conducted a regional conference of development banks in Asia, a regional seminar on agriculture, a panel meeting on development bank training facilities and plans to institute a regional workshop on irrigation water management.

It is also associated with the Asian Productivity Organization's third and fourth project feasibility study training courses, and a study of the Asian Institute for Economic Development and Planning. It has conducted an evaluation study of the Nong Khai-Vientiane Bridge between Laos and Thailand and has approved a feasibility study of a ferry service across the Malacca Straits between North Sumatra and West Malaysia.

ASIAN DEVELOPMENT BANK

FINANCIAL STRUCTURE

Capital: As of 31st July, 1973, the ADB has an authorized capital of U.S. $3,365.72 million, of which $2,722.36 million has been subscribed. Each member is to pay one-half of its subscribed capital in five equal, annual instalments (except Hong Kong which pays in four equal instalments); one-half of each instalment is required to be paid in gold or convertible currency and the other half may be paid in local currency. The other half of the subscribed capital will remain as callable shares as a credit backing for the Bank's obligations.

AIMS

To accelerate the economic growth, social progress and cultural development in the region through joint endeavours in the spirit of equality and partnership in order to strengthen the foundation for a prosperous and peaceful community of South-East Asian nations.

To promote regional peace and stability through abiding respect for justice and the rule of law in the relationship among countries of the region and adherence to the principles of the United Nations Charter.

To promote active collaboration and mutual assistance on matters of common interest in the economic, social, cultural, technical, scientific and administrative fields.

To provide assistance to each other in the form of training and research facilities in the educational, professional, technical and administrative spheres.

To collaborate more effectively for the greater utilization of their agriculture and industries, the expansion of their trade, including the study of the problems of international commodity trade, the improvement of their transportation and communication facilities and the raising of the living standards of their people.

To promote South-East Asian studies.

To maintain close and beneficial co-operation with existing international and regional organizations with similar aims and purposes, and explore all avenues for even closer co-operation among themselves.

ASSOCIATION OF SOUTH EAST ASIAN NATIONS

PRINCIPAL PROJECTS OF ASEAN

ASEAN is to take over various projects that were operated or envisaged by ASA; the principal projects of ASA were:

Economic Co-operation and Development. The establishment of an Organization for Asian Economic Co-operation was agreed in principle and steps were taken to intensify trade among member countries by relaxing or eliminating regulations and restrictions on the free flow of trade. Efforts were also made to increase trade between the region and the rest of the world. The ASEAN Geneva Committee (AGC) was formed on March 7th, 1973 to deal with matters concerning multilateral trade negotiations under the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT). The private sector was also to play a greater part in promoting economic development and developing industry. In this connection a Confederation of Chambers of Commerce and Industry was established in April 1972 to facilitate closer co-operation among the private sector of the member countries.

Joint Research and Technology. There was a wide exchange of technical experts and training facilities were made available for nationals of other member countries. Experts from ASEAN countries have met to draw up comprehensive joint programmes to look into the problems of food technology involving the processing of foodstuffs, corrosion of metals, water resources and national development.

Education. Exchanges of teachers and students and increased facilities for teaching the language, history and geography of member countries. In this respect ASEAN scholarships are being awarded to deserving students in higher education and to undergraduates.

Transport and Tourism. The Malaysian and Thai national airlines have pooled services and it was planned that the Philippines join the pool at a later date. A project for a joint airline to operate supersonic aircraft was under discussion. The possibility of a U.S. $250 million Asian Shipping Line is being studied under a joint agreement between ASEAN countries, signed in June 1968. A minimum fleet of 600,000 d.w.t. is envisaged to maintain services to U.S.A. and Europe as well as within the region. The Asian Highway projects are now under construction and have been making headway satisfactorily. The telecommunications network in the ASEAN region has been greatly strengthened through the establishment of various microwave and troposcatter links. ASEAN is actively working on tourist promotion and by now certain projects have been completed with the purpose of making ASEAN a tourist area. ASEAN nationals can now visit the ASEAN countries on a 7-day visa-free period. ASEAN Common Collective Travel Documents for Package Tours have also been introduced. This Document, which is intended for package tours within the ASEAN region, may be used in lieu of a passport.

Cultural Exchanges. Tours by theatrical and dance groups, holding of art exhibitions, and exchange of radio and television programmes, films and visual aids. Cultural exchanges and social workers' exchange programmes are also being carried out.

FIFTH ASEAN MINISTERIAL MEETING

Held April 13th-14th, 1972 in Singapore. The Ministers recognized the necessity for closer co-operation and expansion of their national economies in view of the developments of significant world events. They approved the report of the Standing Committee which included 169 recommendations, one of which was that a Special Co-ordinating Committee of ASEAN Nations (SCCAN) should prepare the way for a dialogue between ASEAN and the EEC. The Meeting also noted particularly projects on prevention of drug-trafficking and problems affecting youth, and appreciated the work done by the United Nations Study Team with a view to identifying areas where ASEAN could co-operate more fruitfully.

SIXTH ASEAN MINISTERIAL MEETING

Held April 16th-18th, 1973 in Pattaya, Thailand. The meeting agreed upon the establishment of the Co-ordinating Committee for the Reconstruction and Rehabilitation of Burma, Laos, Cambodia, North and South Viet-nam; the creation of the Special Committee of ASEAN Central Banks and Monetary Authorities and the setting up of a Central Secretariat for ASEAN. The Ministers noted the establishment of the ASEAN Geneva Committee as a collective approach to the forthcoming Multilateral Trade Negotiations and acknowledged the work of the Special Co-ordinating Committee of ASEAN (SCCAN) and ASEAN Brussels Committee (ABC) and hoped that greater co-operation would arise with the EEC. The threat to ASEAN rubber exports posed by a recent increase in Japanese synthetic rubber production was discussed, together with appropriate measures to meet this threat. Directions were given to implement those recommendations of the UN Study Team which could be agreed upon and to draw up plans for the ASEAN Development Decade.

BANK FOR INTERNATIONAL SETTLEMENTS—BIS

7 Centralbahnstrasse, CH 4051 Basle, Switzerland

The Bank for International Settlements was founded in 1930. It aims to promote co-operation of central banks; to provide additional facilities for international financial operations; and to act as Trustee or Agent in regard to international financial settlements entrusted to it.

ORGANIZATION

THE COMMITTEE OF MINISTERS OF THE ECONOMIC UNION

The Committee of Ministers consists of not less than three Ministers and generally speaking the Ministers of Foreign Affairs, Foreign Trade, Economic Affairs, Agriculture, Finance and Social Affairs of the three countries. Resolutions in the Committee of Ministers must be carried unanimously, but an abstention will not be considered as a negative vote. It supervises the application of the Benelux Economic Union Treaty and ensures that the aims specified therein are pursued. To this end, the Committee of Ministers can take decisions, establish conventions, make recommendations and issue directives. The Committee may also set up Working Parties to which it may delegate certain of its powers.

THE CONSULTATIVE INTER-PARLIAMENTARY COUNCIL

Permanent Secretary: M. HONDEQUIN, Palais de la Nation, Brussels 1.

The Consultative Inter-Parliamentary Council consists of forty-nine members, twenty-one each from the Netherlands and Belgian Parliaments and seven from Luxembourg Parliament. It was set up by a Convention which entered into force in September 1956. This Council may deliberate and communicate to the three Governments its views on problems of direct concern to the Economic Union, including cultural relations, the foreign policy and the standardization of laws. The Interparliamentary Council receives an annual report, jointly established by the three Governments, on each of the above problems. These reports are published.

THE COUNCIL OF ECONOMIC UNION

Chairmen: Prof. G. BROUWERS (Netherlands), A. BAYENS (Belgium), Ch. REICHLING (Luxembourg).

The Council of Economic Union consists of three chairmen, one from each member country, and of the presidents of Committees; presidents of the Special Committees may be co-opted on to the Council when their special fields are under discussion.

The Council is responsible for ensuring the execution of the decisions of the Committee of Ministers and for making proposals to the Committee of Ministers; for co-ordinating the work of the Committees and Special Committees; for giving them directives and for transmitting their proposals to the Committee of Ministers.

COMMITTEES AND SPECIAL COMMITTEES

There are eight Committees: Foreign Economic Relations; Monetary and Financial; Industrial and Commercial; Agriculture, Food and Fisheries; Customs and Taxation; Transport; Social; Movement and Establishment of Persons.

There are nine Special Committees: Co-ordination of Statistics; Comparison of Government Budgets; Public Tenders; Public Health; Retail Trade and Handicrafts; Movement of Persons (control at external frontiers); Territorial Planning; Tourism; Administrative and Judicial Co-operation.

THE SECRETARIAT-GENERAL

Secretary-General: Dr. C. D. A. Baron VAN LYNDEN.

Deputy: E. LEICK.

The Secretary-General is always of Netherlands nationality and is assisted by one Belgian and one Luxembourg Deputy Secretary-General. They are appointed by the Committee of Ministers and are directly responsible to this Committee. The Budget of the Secretariat for 1971 was 56,229,000 Belgian Francs to which Belgium and the Netherlands each contributed 48.5% and Luxembourg 3%.

JOINT SERVICES

The Committee of Ministers may establish Joint Services to improve the functioning of the Economic Union, and determine their tasks, operational layout and working methods. A joint service for drugs registration came into operation on January 1st, 1973.

THE ARBITRATION TRIBUNAL

The Arbitration Tribunal is composed of six persons (two from each member country) appointed by the Committee of Ministers. Their function is to settle any disputes that may arise from the working of the Union.

BENELUX

COLLEGE D'IMPULSION

THE ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL ADVISORY COUNCIL

President: J. STASSART.

The Economic and Social Advisory Council consists of twenty-seven members and twenty-seven deputy members from representative economic and social organizations, each country supplying one third of the number. It may offer advice on its own initiative or prepare considered opinions when requested to do so by the Committee of Ministers.

Chairman: A. DE SCHRIJVER.

Secretary: P. VAN DER MEIREN.

The Collège d'Impulsion, a body which is intended to provide an independent stimulus to the activities of the Union, was established in 1969 for one year and subsequently prolonged for the same period. It consists of six members (two from each member country) and is responsible for proposing the most appropriate measures for an integral achievement in the application of the Union Treaty.

HISTORY

During the later war years the governments-in-exile of Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg began to lay plans for an economic and customs union of their countries. Their efforts crystallized in the London Monetary Agreement of October 21st, 1943. A firm exchange value was needed between the Belgian franc and the Dutch florin; the pre-war gold parity of 16.52 Belgian francs to one Dutch florin was agreed on, as well as a scheme of reciprocal credits between the two countries. There was also agreement on the need for continual consultation and for the co-ordination of such measures as each country felt compelled to take in their respective capital markets.

The London Customs Convention of September 5th, 1944, marked a further step forward. The principle was established of reciprocal tariff abolition, to lead in the first place to a "tariff community", which in its turn would be a preliminary step towards a full customs, and eventual economic union. Methods of procedure were established and three committees set up—the Administrative Customs Committee, the Administrative Foreign Trade Committee and the Committee for Trade Agreements. A tentative tariff list was drawn up, and provision made for withdrawal at one year's notice.

In the last months of the war Holland was devastated, whereas Belgium and Luxembourg emerged almost unscathed. A combination of factors brought economic prosperity to Belgium immediately after the war, and because of this discrepancy in recovery rates the envisaged Customs Convention could not be applied immediately. In March 1947 the first Hague Protocol was signed; the Customs Convention was given its final form and a General Secretariat established in Brussels. The Customs Union came into force on January 1st, 1948.

OPERATING THE UNION

A further step forward was made by the Pre-Union Agreement of October 15th, 1949. Among other provisions, three stand out as particularly important; these laid down the principles of progressive liberalization of exchange trade between the three partners, the systematic co-ordination of commercial and monetary policies with regard to other countries and the preparation of a unified system of foreign trade negotiation. In spite of these advances, Benelux ran into difficulties in the following year, 1950, largely arising from the war in Korea, to which the economies of Belgium and Luxembourg on the one hand and of the Netherlands on the other reacted sharply and differently. In the Netherlands the deficit in payments and gold reserves increased; in Belgium and Luxembourg gold reserves rose and the payments surplus grew to such a size as to be unhealthy. Wages and prices in the Netherlands were still at that period abnormally low; in the other two partners they rose.

In 1951 and 1952 the whole Benelux structure was in danger of breakdown, but was saved by the strenuous efforts of the three Governments, which were put into concrete and effective form by the important Hague Protocol of July 24th, 1953, the Commercial Protocol of December 9th, 1953, and the agreement on the liberalization of capital movements of July 8th, 1954. The Hague Protocol of July 1953 embodied agreements on the stabilization and adjustments of wages and rents in the three partners and the recognition of the principle that social legislation must be co-ordinated in order to avoid excessive differences between social charges which might adversely affect cost prices and the competitive positions of the three countries. The Commercial Protocol was complementary to this agreement. It laid down the guiding aim of maximum trade combined with maximum freedom, but emphasized the necessity of consultation in the case of export promotion, as well as joint action whenever complications arose with trade partners who refused reciprocity.

A convention providing for the free movement of labour was signed on June 7th, 1956, which was clarified and expanded by a further agreement on March 20th, 1957, while a protocol defining the procedure to be followed with regard to public tenders and government purchases was signed on July 6th, 1956, and came into force on August 29th, 1958.

By 1956, 96.5 per cent of the trade between the three partners was free, and of the remaining 3.5 per cent, 3.33 per cent was accounted for by food and agricultural products. Agriculture, as in all plans such as Benelux, had proved to be the most intransigent problem. In this sphere the Netherlands have a superior position, with a large export trade and low costs. In Belgium and Luxembourg the position is reversed, with a high import rate and high costs. Some price equalization duties are charged on Netherlands agricultural products exported to Belgium and Luxembourg. These duties are levied by the Netherlands Government, of which half are handed over to Belgium and Luxembourg for the development and improvement of their agriculture and half are retained by the Netherlands and devoted to the rationalization of their own agriculture.

SINGLE TRADING UNIT

One of the most significant dates in the evolution of Benelux is January 26th, 1956. On that date the Organisation for European Economic Co-operation announced that henceforth Belgium, Luxembourg and the Netherlands were to be regarded as one country for all purposes of inter-European trade. In January 1955, O.E.E.C. had raised its compulsory trade liberalization requirements to 90 per cent between member countries; the Benelux Governments presented a unified single list applying to all three of them and covering 95.6 per cent of their imports from other member countries. Consequently, O.E.E.C. could now regard the three as one.

ECONOMIC UNION TREATY

The Benelux Treaty was signed in February 1958, and came into force in November 1960. By the Treaty, all trade agreements with outside countries were to be concluded by Benelux as an entity from January 1961. By November 1963, all tenders issued by national, provincial or local authorities were to be made accessible to tenders of all three countries. By November 1970, all obstacles to the free flow of goods between the three countries, including agricultural produce, were eliminated. A customs union came into force in February 1971.

The Benelux Economic Union's main aims are to raise prosperity by co-ordinating national economic policies, by pursuing a common foreign trade policy, and permitting the free movement of persons, goods, capital and services. Unlike EEC the Benelux Economic Union is not a supra-national institution. Its institutions are based on those which grew up empirically within the Benelux Customs Union.

RESULTS

Co-operation between the Benelux countries has resulted in the area becoming the first completely free labour market. Capital movement as well as services have been made almost completely free. A number of restrictions still exist as to the free movement of goods. Strenuous efforts are being made towards the abolition of these restrictions through the harmonization of national legislation, through a Convention on mutual recognition.

There is continuous co-ordination of economic, financial and social policies and the adoption and pursuit of a common policy on economic relations with third countries and on relative payments.

THE TREATY OF ECONOMIC UNION

The Treaty consists of 100 Articles and is valid in the first instance for fifty years.

1. DEFINITION OF PRINCIPLES

The main aim of the Economic Union is to raise the prosperity of the people by realizing the free mutual movement of persons, goods, services and capital, the co-ordination of national economic policy and the pursuance of a common foreign trade policy.

All nationals of the three member countries are free to move anywhere within the territory of the Union and to enjoy in the other two countries the same rights and privileges as are accorded to the nationals of those countries, with regard to freedom of movement, residence and establishment, the exercise of economic and professional activities, capital transactions, labour conditions, social provisions, dues, taxes and legal protection. Trade between the three countries is freed from all import dues and from all restrictions of a qualitative, quantitative or currency nature. This free intercourse must neither be unduly impeded by non-economic or non-financial measures, although controls and statistical inspections at frontiers will not be considered as restrictions within the meaning of the Treaty. Capital movements are also free and exchange of services are subject to the same principles as that of merchandise. Any distortion of competitive conditions are forbidden, lest they should impede the development of mutual free trade.

The three governments engage themselves to consult jointly on matters of economic policy in order to create the necessary conditions for full economic integration. Furthermore, they will also consult each other in order to determine the Union's policy at international meetings and in all matters concerned with regional economic integration or matters relating to foreign countries, in so far as these matters affect the purposes of the Union. There will also be a common policy with regard to foreign trade and payments and a common tariff in respect of import and other duties.

The Economic Union does not include a monetary union, but certain monetary rules are laid down, particularly that policy with regard to rates of exchange must be formulated by consultation. It is further provided that should the vital interests of a member country be in danger, the Committee of Ministers may deviate from the provisions of the Treaty.

2. INSTITUTIONS OF THE UNION

These are listed as the Committee of Ministers, the Consultative Inter-Parliamentary Council, the Council of Economic Union, the Committees and Special Committees, the Secretariat-General, the Joint Services, the Arbitration Tribunal and the Economic and Social Consultative Council (see the section on Organization above).

3. SPECIAL PROVISIONS

This section elaborates certain principles laid down in Part 1, and also de-limits certain fields in which the Committee of Ministers may take binding decisions and further provides that the principles of the Treaty shall be effected by special agreement in certain cases.

4. GENERAL PROVISIONS

The main provisions of this part are that the scope of the Treaty is limited to the territories of the member countries in Europe, though the interests of Belgian and Netherlands overseas territories should be safeguarded in foreign trade agreements; and that the Treaty should be valid for a period of fifty years, subject to tacit extension by periods of ten years, unless it is revoked by any member country on one year's notice before the end of the running period.

CARIBBEAN FREE TRADE ASSOCIATION—CARIFTA

Georgetown, Guyana

The Caribbean Free Trade Association, established by Antigua, Barbados and Guyana in January 1967, aimed at a gradual reduction of customs barriers and the free interchange of labour forces within the region.

MEMBERS

Antigua
Barbados
Belize
Dominica

Grenada
Guyana
Jamaica
Montserrat

St. Christopher-Nevis-Anguilla
St. Lucia
St. Vincent
Trinidad and Tobago

During 1968 the original three members were joined by a further eight, and Belize was the final state to become a member, in June 1970.

ORGANIZATION

The Agreement signed in May 1968 aimed at promoting trade expansion within the area and encouraging economic development. It provided for the removal of tariffs from trade among member countries; further, the Agricultural Marketing Protocol protected local trading of 21 commodities from outside competition.

Secretariat: Georgetown, Guyana.

Secretary-General: WILLIAM G. DEMAS.

The agreement states that membership may be terminated at twelve months' notice; and in the event of all member states giving such notice, CARIFTA will continue to operate until all periods of notice have expired. Such will be the case when the remaining CARIFTA countries (with the exception of Antigua) accede to CARIBCOM on May 1st, 1974.

CARIBBEAN COMMON MARKET AND COMMUNITY —CARIBCOM

Georgetown, Guyana

The Caribbean Common Market and Community, two distinct bodies which form two parts of the same movement towards Caribbean unity, were opened on August 1st, 1973, after the signing of an Agreement at Chaguaramas, Trinidad, on July 4th, 1973.

MEMBERS

Barbados
Belize
Dominica
Grenada

Guyana
Jamaica
Montserrat
St. Christopher-Nevis-Anguilla

St. Lucia
St. Vincent
Trinidad and Tobago

ORGANIZATION

The original four members of CARIBCOM—Barbados, Guyana, Jamaica and Trinidad and Tobago—took the first step towards founding the community when they signed the Georgetown Accord on April 14th, 1973. This provided for preparations to be made for the opening of CARIBCOM, and by signing the actual Agreement at Chaguaramas, Trinidad, on July 4th, 1973, it was made possible for the Community and Common Market to come into operation on August 1st.

The remaining seven members agreed to make their entry into CARIBCOM on May 1st, 1974. Montserrat was the last to agree to this, in November 1973, and Antigua kept her independence. Membership of either the Community or of the Common Market can be terminated at one year's notice.

CARIBBEAN COMMUNITY

The Community is as yet a less precisely defined organization, which has the latent motivation for a political Caribbean Union. Arrangements for mutual defence would be within the scope of such a union.

The Community and Common Market have as yet the same governing bodies.

CARIBBEAN COMMON MARKET

The Common Market is largely an extension of the work done under the CARIFTA scheme, with more advanced arrangements including a Common External Tariff, which was agreed by the Common Market Council and adopted separately by the member governments in November 1973. For certain less developed countries this tariff will not come into full operation until 1981.

The Agreement also includes: a common protective policy, common regulations for trading with third countries, co-ordinated tax measures and economic planning, regulations for agriculture; monetary regulations and a common exchange rate, and arrangements for development and tourism. There is a chapter on the ensuring of benefits to the less developed countries of the region.

HEADS OF GOVERNMENT CONFERENCE

The governing body of both sections of CARIBCOM, striving to strengthen political and economic unity within the region. The conference is advised by standing ministerial groups. The office of Chairman is taken up by the Head of Government of the host country in which the Conference meets: meetings are held in each of the member states on a rota basis.

COMMON MARKET COUNCIL

The equivalent for CARIBCOM of CARIFTA's Council of Ministers, it is composed of ministers responsible for trade and industry. Meetings are held at a different place within the region each time, the chair being taken by the minister of the host country.

SECRETARIAT

Georgetown, Guyana

Posts are transferred from the corresponding positions in the CARIFTA Secretariat, including that of Secretary-General. However, on the retirement of the CARIFTA Secretary-General in the coming year, a new Secretary-General for CARIBCOM will be appointed.

ASSOCIATE INSTITUTIONS

Under the Agreement of 1973, existing institutions are mentioned as Associate Institutions of CARIBCOM, in collaboration with the principal ministerial committees and the Heads of Government Conference. They include:

Caribbean Development Bank
Caribbean Investment Corporation
Caribbean Examinations Council
Council of Legal Education
Caribbean Meteorological Council
Regional Shipping Council.

CENTRAL AMERICAN COMMON MARKET—CACM

Established in 1960 under the aegis of the Organization of Central American States (ODECA).

MEMBERS

Costa Rica Guatemala El Salvador Honduras* Nicaragua

* Honduras still regards itself as a de jure member of CACM, although it suspended participation in the common market in December 1970 by imposing tariffs on all imports from the region.

ORGANIZATION

CENTRAL AMERICAN ECONOMIC COUNCIL

(Consejo Económico Centroamericana—CEC)

Created by the General Treaty of Central American Economic Integration, the Council consists of the Ministers of Economy of the member states and meets as often as necessary or at the request of one of the contracting parties in one of the five capitals.

EXECUTIVE COUNCIL

(Consejo Ejecutivo del Tratado General—CE)

Consists of one government delegate and one alternate from each member state. Meetings are convened by the Permanent Secretariat or at the request of the contracting parties. Its function is to implement the measures necessary for the fulfilment of the terms of the General Treaty, which provides for the gradual realization of a Central American Customs Union.

PERMANENT SECRETARIAT

(Secretaría Permanente de Integración Económica Centroamericana—SIECA)

The Permanent Secretariat was set up as the administrative arm of the Economic Council and the Executive Council. It supervises the correct implementation of the legal instruments of economic integration and carries out relevant studies.

COMMON MARKET TOP-LEVEL COMMITTEE

Comprises representatives of all five member countries. The first meeting was held in Antigua, Guatemala, on August 10th, 1973. Aims initially to deal with the restructuring of the Common Market, and also to secure development aid from the richer countries. Meetings were planned for September and November 1973.

TRIPARTITE MEETING

Composed of Ministers of Economy and Finance and Directors of Central Banks. Generally meets more than once a year.

FUNCTIONS

The Central American Common Market was established under the Tratado Multilateral de Libre Comercio e Integración Económica Centroamericana and the Tratado de Integración Económica Centroamericana. It visualises the eventual elimination of all tariffs and barriers between members, and the establishment of a common external tariff for the rest of the world. So far practically all internal barriers have been removed and agreement has been reached on 98 per cent of the items in the regional customs classification; uniform tariffs now apply to 87 per cent of these items and the others are to be equalized over a five-year period. Intra-regional trade increased from $34 million in 1960 to $275 million in 1971.

It was intended that there would be a common customs administration by 1970 and further goals include a unified fiscal policy, a regional industrial policy and co-ordinated regional policies in public health, labour, education, transport and agriculture.

CENTRAL AMERICAN COMMON MARKET

between the members, and most remaining tariffs had been removed by June 1966. At a later stage restrictions on the movement of capital and labour will be removed.

TRATADO DE INTERCAMBIO PREFERENCIAL Y DE LIBRE COMERCIO

Signed by Costa Rica, Nicaragua and Panama in 1961 and ratified in 1962, to speed economic integration through tariff reductions between members.

OTHER AGREEMENTS

Convention on Integrated Industries: signed June 1958; provides that special monopoly status be given to an individual enterprise in each industry, to be established in one member country with a view to exporting to the rest. The operation of this convention has been limited and, to date, only two integration industries have been set up—a tyre factory in Guatemala and an insecticides plant in Nicaragua.

Special System of Promotion of Productive Industries: signed January 1963, this system uses tariff regulations to encourage projects requiring heavy investment, with the limitation that such projects must produce at least half the total of the regional demand.

Convention of Uniform Fiscal Incentives for Industrial Development: signed in July 1962, the Convention provides for a wide range of benefits to be applied to various categories of industries in Central America.

Agreement to establish the Central American Monetary Union: signed by the Governors of the Central Banks in 1964. The Monetary Union is not yet effective; it involves the alignment of foreign exchange and monetary policies, and the operation of a common currency (Central American peso at par with the U.S. dollar).

Treaty on Telecommunications: signed in April 1966 by Nicaragua, El Salvador, Guatemala and Honduras, and by Costa Rica in January 1967.

FUNDS

Guarantee Fund: set up 1969 by the Governors of the Central American Bank for Economic Integration. Capital of $40 million subscribed entirely by members of the Bank.

Fondo Centroamericano de Estabilización Monetaria (Central American Fund for Monetary Stabilization): agreement signed on October 1st, 1969, by Presidents of the five Central American Central Banks to provide short-term financial assistance to members facing temporary balance-of-payments difficulties. Capital to be subscribed equally by the five members: U.S. $20 million. Initial shares of $1 million each subscribed January 2nd, 1970. Additional funds will be sought from international sources. Mems.: Guatemala, El Salvador, Honduras, Nicaragua, Costa Rica.

Set up by the Congress of Vienna in 1815 to ensure free movement of traffic and equal river facilities for vessels of all nations on the Rhine.

MEMBERS

Belgium
France

German Federal Republic
Netherlands

Switzerland
United Kingdom

Map shows sections of the Rhine and its main tributaries navigable by ships of 1,000 tons or more. Also shown is the proposed Main-Danube Waterway expected to be completed by the late 1980s.

CENTRAL COMMISSION FOR THE NAVIGATION OF THE RHINE

ORGANIZATION

COMMISSION

Chairman: GUY DE LACHARRIÈRE.

General. The overall function of the Commission is to enable member Governments to co-ordinate inland waterway policy and to supervise the application of the Convention (see below). It meets twice a year (occasionally more often) in full session. Each member state provides between two and four commissioners with one or two substitutes. Decisions are taken by unanimous agreement.

ADMINISTRATIVE CENTRE FOR SOCIAL SECURITY

Set up to apply the 1950/1961 Agreement on social security of Rhine boatmen. Members: Belgium, France, German Federal Republic, Netherlands, Switzerland.

TRIPARTITE COMMISSION FOR LABOUR CONDITIONS

Set to apply the 1954/1963 Agreement on labour conditions of Rhine boatmen. Members: Belgium, France, German Federal Republic, Netherlands, Switzerland.

SECRETARIAT

Secretary-General: R. DOERFLINGER (France).

Deputy Secretary-General: H. WATERMANN (German Federal Republic).

Chief Engineer: J. DUBOIS (Belgium).

FUNCTIONS

Navigational Security. The Commission draws up and executes rules for navigational signals and routes, for the construction and loading of boats, for minimum numbers of crew and for carrying of dangerous goods.

Customs. Customs regulations have been simplified and standardized.

Court of Appeal. A Chamber of Appeal judges for criminal and civil cases involving Rhine traffic.

Hydrology. The Commission gives navigational approval to plans of bridge and barrage construction, and assesses other hydro-technical projects.

Research. The Commission undertakes study voyages from time to time.

CONVENTION

Signed at Mayence in 1831. Revised at Mannheim in 1868 and at Strasbourg in 1963.

MAIN PROVISIONS

1. Freedom of navigation for vessels and crews of all nations without technical, fiscal, customs, professional or administrative hindrance.
2. Equality of treatment for all flags.
3. Freedom of transit for all merchandise with or without warehousing or trans-shipment.
4. All import, export and transit facilities available for other forms of transport to be accorded also to Rhine transport.
5. The claiming of special rights for a vehicle or its cargo based on the fact of navigation to be forbidden.
6. Customs formalities for direct transit to be limited to the presentation of a declaration, the closure of holds or guardianship.
7. States to be obliged to open free ports and places of loading and unloading.
8. Rules relating to vessel security, navigation police and transport police to be standardised and extended.
9. States to be obliged to maintain the waterway, to co-ordinate hydro-technical works and to eliminate all technical hindrance.
10. Special jurisdiction in the riparian states, with competence fixed by the Convention and the right of parties to have recourse either to the Central Commission or to a national court.
11. All interested parties have the right to lay complaints before the Central Commission.

CENTRAL COMMISSION FOR THE NAVIGATION OF THE RHINE

BUDGET

The budget is fixed annually and member states make an equal contribution.

ASSOCIATED BODY

INTERNATIONAL ASSOCIATION FOR THE RHINE SHIPS REGISTER

89 Schiedamsevest (P.O.B. 947), Rotterdam, Netherlands

CENTRAL TREATY ORGANIZATION

PACT OF THE CENTRAL TREATY ORGANIZATION

(February 24th, 1955)

Article 1

Consistent with Article 51 of the United Nations Charter the High Contracting Parties will co-operate for their security and defence. Such measures as they agree to take to give effect to this co-operation may form the subject of special agreement with each other.

Article 2

In order to ensure the realization and effect application of the co-operation provided for in Article 1 above, the competent authorities of the High Contracting Parties will determine the measures to be taken as soon as the present Pact enters into force. These measures will become operative as soon as they have been approved by the Governments of the High Contracting Parties.

Article 3

The High Contracting Parties undertake to refrain from any interference whatsoever in each other's internal affairs. They will settle any dispute between themselves in a peaceful way in accordance with the United Nations Charter.

Article 4

The High Contracting Parties declare that the dispositions of the present Pact are not in contradiction with any of the international obligations contracted by either of them with any third state or states. They do not derogate from, and cannot be interpreted as derogating from, the said international obligations. The High Contracting Parties undertake not to enter into any international obligation incompatible with the present Pact.

Article 5

This Pact shall be open for accession to any member state of the Arab League or any other state actively concerned with the security and peace in this region which is fully recognized by both of the High Contracting Parties. Accession shall come into force from the date of which the instrument of accession of the state concerned is deposited with the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of Iraq.

Any acceding State Party to the present Pact, may conclude special agreements, in accordance with Article 1, with one or more states Parties to the present Pact. The competent authority of any acceding State may determine measures in accordance with Article 2. These measures will become operative as soon as they have been approved by the Governments of the Parties concerned.

Article 6

A Permanent Council at Ministerial level will be set up to function within the framework of the purposes of this Pact when at least four Powers become parties to the Pact.

The Council will draw up its own rules of procedure.

Article 7

This Pact remains in force for a period of five years renewable for other five-year periods. Any Contracting Party may withdraw from the Pact by notifying the other parties in writing of its desire to do so, six months before the expiration of any of the above mentioned periods, in which case the Pact remains valid for the other Parties.

Article 8

This Pact shall be ratified by the Contracting Parties and ratifications shall be exchanged at Ankara as soon as possible. Thereafter it shall come into force from the date of the exchange of ratifications.

ORGANIZATION

THE CONSULTATIVE COMMITTEE

The Consultative Committee is the highest deliberative body of the Colombo Plan and consists of Ministers, representing the member governments, who meet annually. Their meeting is preceded by a meeting of senior officials who are directly concerned with the operation of the Plan for their various countries. The officials work on a number of committees and identify the most important issues for discussion by the Ministers. Since 1962 one of the committees has had for discussion each year a special topic selected the previous year. The work of the committees is reported to the Ministers for ratification. The Annual Report of the Consultative Committee is also prepared by the officials from material provided by all the member countries and it is also finally approved by the Ministers. The Consultative Committee meets in a different member country each year. All members take part on equal terms and the meetings are attended by representatives of the Observers (above) and the Colombo Plan Bureau as a participating body.

THE COUNCIL FOR TECHNICAL CO-OPERATION IN SOUTH AND SOUTH-EAST ASIA

President: H.E. U OHN KHIN (Burma).

The Colombo Plan Council for Technical Co-operation, which holds sessions in Colombo several times a year is a forum for consultation on the general principles within which Technical Co-operation operates, subject to the general direction of the Consultative Committee. It serves as a co-ordinating and receiving body. It has also been charged by the Consultative Committee with the responsibilities of carrying out information activities on the Colombo Plan as a whole. It is composed of representatives of member governments, who are generally their diplomatic representatives in Colombo, but at times from representatives sent for that purpose. The executive arm of the Council is the Colombo Plan Bureau.

THE COLOMBO PLAN BUREAU

Director: I. K. MCGREGOR (New Zealand).
Adviser on Intra-Regional Training: GREGORIO P. ESPINOSA (Philippines).

Principal Information Officer: HADI SHARIFIAN (Iran)
Information Officer: S. A. HUSSAINI (Pakistan).
Drug Adviser: PIO A. ABARRO (Philippines).

THE COLOMBO PLAN

The functions of the Bureau are:

1. Maintaining a record of technical assistance (experts, training places, equipment), capital assistance given and received under the Colombo Plan together with statistics on costs.
2. Preparing periodic progress reports on the scheme and on the Colombo Plan at such intervals as the Council may require.
3. Circulating among member countries general notification of the availability of training facilities, experts and equipment within the region.
4. Promoting intra-regional training through the holding of seminars and colloquia.
5. Stimulating increased knowledge of, and interest in, the Colombo Plan and support for its aims and objects in member countries and elsewhere through the production and issue of publications and mass media material.
6. Encouraging the spread of information on population control.
7. Developing a co-operative programme to eliminate the causes and ameliorate the effects of drug abuse.
8. Providing assistance to host countries in the organization and administration of Consultative Committee meetings where requested; and providing assistance to co-operating countries in such other matters as may be requested.
9. Representing the Colombo Plan at meetings where its representation is required and representing the Bureau as a participating body in the Consultative Committee Meetings of the Colombo Plan.

CO-OPERATION AND CAPITAL

FORMS OF CO-OPERATION

By the supply of experts and the provision of technical training to trainees and students from South and South-East Asia and the supply of special equipment for training and research.

From 1950 to December 1971, 81,156 trainees and students had received technical training and 15,310 experts and equipment to the value of $518.5 million had been provided.

During 1971, 8,294 trainees and students received training; 1,175 experts were sent out; value of equipment supplied was $39.0 million; total value of co-operation activities from the inception of the Plan to December 1971 was over $1,697.8 million, spent in the proportion of 18 per cent on trainees and students, 51 per cent on experts and 31 per cent on technical equipment.

Of the 8,294 training places provided in 1971, the United States is the major donor country, providing 4,126 places, i.e. 49 per cent of the total. Australia (1,219) is the second largest donor, closely followed by Japan (1,208) and Britain (835).

Viet-Nam was the largest recipient of training and student awards during 1971 with 1,870 awards; followed by Thailand (1,276), India (845) and Indonesia (712).

U.S.A.: United States Entity: c/o Bonneville Power Administration, P.O.B. 3621, Portland, Oregon 97208; responsible for U.S. interests in the operation of the treaty provisions; Chair. DONALD P. HODEL.

Columbia Storage Power Exchange: P.O.B. 1709, East Wenatchee, Washington; a non-profit corporation organized in 1964 to act as the single purchaser of the Canadian Entitlement to downstream power benefits of the Columbia River scheme; represents over forty bodies in the northwest U.S.A.

Joint Bodies: Permanent Engineering Board: composed of four representatives, two from each country; keeps under surveillance progress of the treaty projects; reports on any deviation from operation plans; assists, if requested, in reconciling technical or operational differences that may arise between the Entities.

International Joint Commission: differences arising under the Columbia River Treaty which Canada and the United States of America cannot solve may be referred by either to the International Joint Commission for decision. This Commission, established under a Britain-United States treaty signed January 11th, 1909, and ratified by Canada in 1911, is composed of six members (three appointed by the President of the United States and three by the Government of Canada). The Commission reports to the Secretary of State for External Affairs of Canada and to the Secretary of State of the United States.

THE COLUMBIA RIVER BASIN

The Columbia River flows 498 miles from its source in British Columbia to the Canadian-U.S. border and a further 745 miles through northwestern U.S.A. to the Pacific. With its tributaries, of which the Snake and Kootenay rivers are the largest, it drains an area of 259,000 square miles. Of this total, 85 per cent is in the U.S.A. The basin's annual discharge of 180 million acre feet and the steep descent from the Rocky mountains to sea level, combine to create the greatest hydro-electric potential in North America. Eleven main stream dams have been built on the United States section of river, six by federal and five by non-federal U.S. agencies. Until the commencement of the Columbia Treaty projects no dams had been built on the Canadian section. The extreme seasonal variations of the flow had, therefore, consistently caused flooding during the period of maximum flow in late spring and early summer and a shortage of power during the period of minimum flow in autumn and winter. The Treaty provided for the construction of three storage dams in British Columbia to eliminate this flooding and improve the flow of the river, enabling the eleven downstream dams in the U.S.A. to produce an additional capacity of 2.8 million kilowatts as well as protecting life and property from annual flooding. The additional installed generating capacity of the Columbia basin within Canada after development will amount to over 5 million kilowatts.

In 1944, the Governments of Canada and the U.S.A. requested the International Joint Commission to determine whether the development of the water resources of the Columbia River basin would be practical and advantageous to both countries. The International Joint Commission established the International Columbia River Engineering Board to undertake these investigations, and the Board submitted its report in 1959 indicating suitable sites for the construction of storage reservoirs. Also in 1959, the Commission submitted a special report recommending the principles for calculation and apportionment of benefits that would result from the co-operative development of the basin. During 1960 and 1961 direct negotiations were conducted between the Governments of Canada and the U.S.A. concerning the selection, construction and co-operative use of specific projects. These negotiations led to the signing of the Treaty in January 1961. Canada concluded agreements in 1963 and 1964 with British Columbia (the owner of the Canadian water resources) on the respective responsibilities of each government in the development of the Columbia River. International negotiations continued until January 1964, when Canada and the U.S.A. approved an important protocol, which clarified the 1961 Treaty and in addition confirmed the sale for thirty years of the Canadian Entitlement to downstream power benefits.

COLUMBIA RIVER TREATY

PROJECTS

Three storage reservoirs built and operated in Canada:

Duncan: on Duncan River; operational July 31st, 1967;
Storage: 1.4 million acre feet.

Arrow: on Columbia River; operational October 1968;
Storage: 7.1 million acre feet.

Mica: on Columbia River; operational March 29th 1973;
Storage: 12 million acre feet of which 7 million acre feet is Treaty storage; ultimate generating capacity 2.4 million kilowatts; generating plants may also be built downstream from Mica at Downie, Revelstoke and Murphy.

The U.S.A. has exercised the option to build and operate one storage reservoir:

Libby: on Kootenai River; to be completed by 1974;
Storage: 5 million acre feet; operational April 17th, 1973;
Ultimate Capacity: 840,000 kilowatts.

FINANCE

The three Canadian dams are mainly financed by revenue from the U.S.A., derived as follows:

Canadian Entitlement Purchase: Canada sold, for a period of thirty years from the completion of each project, her half-share of the additional downstream power produced by the treaty projects. The sum of $253.9 million in U.S. funds received from the sale was transferred by Canada to the Government of British Columbia to be used for constructing the three dams.

Flood Control Benefits: As the storage reservoirs came into operation, U.S.A. paid Canada a total of $64.4 million in U.S. funds for flood control benefits on account of Duncan, Arrow and Mica projects. Additional amounts will be payable if further flood control is required.

COLUMBIA RIVER TREATY

Signed January 1961 and ratified September 1964.

ARTICLE I. Interpretation: technical terminology.

ARTICLE II. Development by Canada: 15.5 million acre feet of storage to be provided by Canada.

ARTICLE III. Development by the United States of America Respecting Power.

ARTICLE IV. Operation by Canada: Canada to operate storage for sixty years, and to operate additional storage when requested.

ARTICLE V. Entitlement to Downstream Power Benefits: Canada entitled to half these benefits.

ARTICLE VI. Payment for Flood Control.

ARTICLES VII, VIII, IX. Downstream Power Benefits: Determination, Disposal, Variation.

ARTICLE X. East-West Standby Transmission: Canadian costs.

ARTICLE XI. Use of Improved Stream Flow.

ARTICLE XII. Kootenai River Development: U.S.A. given option to build Libby Dam; each country to retain benefits accruing from this dam.

ARTICLE XIII. Diversions: limitation of diversion of waters that alters the flow within the Columbia River basin at the U.S.-Canadian border.

ARTICLE XIV. Arrangements for Implementation: U.S.A. and Canada each to designate entities to formulate and carry out the operating arrangements.

ARTICLE XV. Permanent Engineering Board.

ARTICLE XVI. Settlement of Differences: differences to be referred to the International Joint Commission, and after three months to a tribunal of three members; decisions of either body to be definitive and binding.

ARTICLE XVII. Restoration of Pre-Treaty Legal Status: upon termination of the Treaty, the Boundary Waters Treaty, 1909, shall apply to the Columbia River basin.

ARTICLE XVIII. Liability for Damage.

ARTICLE XIX. Period of Treaty: Treaty to remain in force at least sixty years.

ARTICLE XX. Ratification.

ARTICLE XXI. Registration with the United Nations.

PROTOCOLS

Signed January 1964.

Modify and clarify technical provisions and contain terms of the sale of Canada's entitlement to downstream power benefits.

HISTORY

The idea of the Commonwealth as a voluntary association of sovereign states developed during the First World War. The development of self-government in the original British Dominions resulted in the recognition at the Imperial War Conference of 1917 of the Dominions as "autonomous nations of an Imperial Commonwealth". The Dominions and India were represented individually at the Versailles Peace Conference and at the League of Nations, but it was not until 1926, at the Imperial Conference, that a formal statement of the nature of the Commonwealth relationship was made. Known as the "Balfour formula", after Lord Balfour, chairman of the Conference, the statement described member nations as "autonomous communities within the British Empire, equal in status, in no way subordinate one to another in any aspect of their domestic or external affairs, though united by a common allegiance to the Crown and freely associated as Members of the British Commonwealth of Nations". This principle was legally formulated in the Statute of Westminster of 1931, which gave effect to this fully independent status of the Dominions in relation to Great Britain and, by implication, in relation to each other.

India and Pakistan became full members of the Commonwealth when India gained independence in 1947. Ceylon joined on independence the following year. Other countries previously administered by Britain were admitted to full Commonwealth membership on the attainment of their independence during the 1950s and 1960s. Cyprus joined in March 1961, six months after independence.

In 1950 India became a republic but the Commonwealth Prime Ministers' meeting of 1949 agreed to her continued membership on the basis of her recognition of the King as the symbol of the free association of the independent member nations and as such the Head of the Commonwealth. Other countries later followed this precedent, either at independence or subsequently; and other countries with traditional monarchs also became Commonwealth members.

The following countries did not join the Commonwealth on becoming independent: Burma (1948), Ireland (1949), Sudan (1956), British Somaliland (in 1960, when it formed the Somali Republic together with the former UN Trust Territory of Italian Somaliland), Southern Cameroons (in 1961, when it joined the French Cameroons to form the Federal Republic of Cameroon), the Maldive Islands (1965, on ceasing to become a protected state) and Aden and the Protectorate of South Arabia, which became the People's Republic of Southern Yemen in 1967. The Union of South Africa became a republic in May 1961 and ceased to be a member of the Commonwealth after the Prime Ministers' Meeting of March 1961 at which there was strong opposition to South Africa's racial policies.

On November 11th, 1965, the Government of Rhodesia unilaterally declared the country independent of the British Crown. The Queen, acting through her representative, the Governor, dismissed the Government of Rhodesia and the British Parliament passed the Southern Rhodesia Act which declares that the country continues to be a part of Her Majesty's dominions and that the Government and Parliament of the United Kingdom continue to have responsibility and jurisdiction for and in respect of it. The Southern Rhodesia Constitution Order (1965) declares that any constitution which the illegal regime may purport to promulgate is void and of no effect. However, in November 1971 the British Government and the Rhodesian régime agreed on proposals for a settlement of the dispute, based on a modified version of the régime's 1969 constitution. The proposals were found to be unacceptable to the Rhodesian people as a whole by a commission headed by Lord Pearce early in January 1972.

In 1967, the islands of Antigua, St. Christopher-Nevis-Anguilla, Dominica, St. Lucia and Grenada achieved the status of Associated States within the Commonwealth. Grenada subsequently achieved full independence on February 7th, 1974.

On November 29th, 1968, Nauru (area 8½ sq. miles; population 6,000) became a "special" member of the Commonwealth.

Pakistan left the Commonwealth on January 30th, 1972, because of impending recognition of Bangladesh by Australia, Britain and New Zealand. Bangladesh was admitted to membership of the Commonwealth on April 18th, 1972. The Bahama Islands were admitted to membership at the time of independence, on July 10th, 1973.

THE COMMONWEALTH

DECLARATION OF COMMONWEALTH PRINCIPLES

Agreed by the Commonwealth Heads of Government Meeting at Singapore, January 22nd, 1971.

The Commonwealth of Nations is a voluntary association of independent sovereign states, each responsible for its own policies, consulting and co-operating in the common interests of their peoples and in the promotion of international understanding and world peace.

Members of the Commonwealth come from territories in the six continents and five oceans, include peoples of different races, languages and religions, and display every stage of economic development from poor developing nations to wealthy industrialized nations. They encompass a rich variety of cultures, traditions and institutions.

Membership of the Commonwealth is compatible with the freedom of member-governments to be non-aligned or to belong to any other grouping, association or alliance. Within this diversity all members of the Commonwealth hold certain principles in common. It is by pursuing these principles that the Commonwealth can continue to influence international society for the benefit of mankind.

We believe that international peace and order are essential to the security and prosperity of mankind; we therefore support the United Nations and seek to strengthen its influence for peace in the world, and its efforts to remove the causes of tension between nations.

We believe in the liberty of the individual, in equal rights for all citizens regardless of race, colour, creed or political belief, and in their inalienable right to participate by means of free and democratic political processes in framing the society in which they live. We therefore strive to promote in each of our countries those representative institutions and guarantees for personal freedom under the law that are our common heritage.

We recognize racial prejudice as a dangerous sickness threatening the healthy development of the human race and racial discrimination as an unmitigated evil of society. Each of us will vigorously combat this evil within our own nation.

No country will afford to regimes which practice racial discrimination assistance which in its own judgment directly contributes to the pursuit or consolidation of this evil policy. We oppose all forms of colonial domination and racial oppression and are committed to the principles of human dignity and equality.

We will therefore use all our efforts to foster human equality and dignity everywhere, and to further the principles of self-determination and non-racialism.

We believe that the wide disparities in wealth now existing between different sections of mankind are too great to be tolerated. They also create world tensions. Our aim is their progressive removal. We therefore seek to use our efforts to overcome poverty, ignorance and disease, in raising standards of life and achieving a more equitable international society.

To this end our aim is to achieve the freest possible flow of international trade on terms fair and equitable to all, taking into account the special requirements of the developing countries, and to encourage the flow of adequate resources, including governmental and private resources, to the developing countries, bearing in mind the importance of doing this in a true spirit of partnership and of establishing for this purpose in the developing countries conditions which are conducive to sustained investment and growth.

We believe that international co-operation is essential to remove the causes of war, promote tolerance, combat injustice, and secure development among the peoples of the world. We are convinced that the Commonwealth is one of the most fruitful associations for these purposes.

In pursuing these principles the members of the Commonwealth believe that they can provide a constructive example of the multi-national approach which is vital to peace and progress in the modern world. The association is based on consultation, discussion and co-operation.

In rejecting coercion as an instrument of policy they recognize that the security of each member state from external aggression is a matter of concern to all members. It provides many channels for continuing exchanges of knowledge and views on professional, cultural, economic, legal and political issues among member states.

These relationships we intend to foster and extend, for we believe that our multi-national association can expand human understanding and understanding among nations, assist in the elimination of discrimination based on differences of race, colour or creed, maintain and strengthen personal liberty, contribute to the enrichment of life for all, and provide a powerful influence for peace among nations.

The first three are designated Island Territories. One of these, the Cook Islands, has full internal self-government.

ORGANIZATION

The Commonwealth has no written constitution. The relationship between its members is to some extent defined by legislation, notably the Statute of Westminster, but for the most part rests on agreed constitutional conventions. The Commonwealth is not a federation, for there is no central government, nor are there any rigid contractual obligations such as bind the members of the United Nations. Membership is granted only by consent of all the members and the right of secession is implicit.

Sixteen member countries of the Commonwealth are monarchies and 18 are republics. All Commonwealth countries accept Queen Elizabeth II as the symbol of the free association of the independent member nations and as such the Head of the Commonwealth. Of the 18 republics, the offices of Head of State and Head of Government are combined in 12: Botswana, Cyprus, The Gambia, Ghana, Kenya, Malawi, Nauru, Nigeria, Sierra Leone, Tanzania, Uganda and Zambia. The two offices are separate in the remaining 6: Bangladesh, Guyana, India, Singapore, Sri Lanka and Western Samoa.

Of the monarchies, the Queen is Head of State of the United Kingdom and of 11 others, in each of which she is represented by a Governor-General: Australia, the Bahama Islands, Barbados, Canada, Fiji, Grenada, Jamaica, Malta, Mauritius, New Zealand and Trinidad and Tobago. Lesotho, Malaysia, Swaziland and Tonga are also monarchies, where the traditional monarch is Head of State and the Queen is accepted in her function of Head of the Commonwealth.

The position of Rhodesia in relation to the Commonwealth remains to be defined.

Those countries outside Britain where the Queen is Head of State are administered by their own governments, in the name of the Crown, and the Queen is represented by Governors-General appointed by her on the advice of the Ministers of the country concerned. The Governor-General acts in accordance with the constitutional practice obtaining in the country to which he is appointed in regard to the exercise of the powers of the Crown, and is wholly independent of the Government of the United Kingdom. In all essential respects, he holds the same position in relation to the administration of public affairs in the country to which he is appointed as the Queen holds in the United Kingdom.

The islands of Antigua, St. Christopher-Nevis-Anguilla, Dominica, St. Lucia and St. Vincent are Associated States within the Commonwealth. The Queen remains the Head of State in these territories, represented in each country by a Governor. There is a British Commissioner for the region to represent British interests. Britain retains responsibility for defence and foreign relations, but each territory is wholly responsible for internal affairs, can amend its own constitution, and both Britain and the Associated States can terminate the association unilaterally.

On November 29th, 1968, Nauru became a "special" member of the Commonwealth. This means that Nauru, which became independent on January 31st, 1968, will have the right to participate in all functional activities of the Commonwealth but will not be represented at Meetings of Commonwealth Heads of Government. It may attend meetings at ministerial and official level in such fields as education, medical co-operation, finance, etc.

Independent member countries of the Commonwealth make their own laws, decide their own policies, negotiate and sign their own treaties, decide for themselves the issues of peace and war, and maintain their own diplomatic representation in foreign countries, who in turn accredit representatives separately and independently. Governments of member countries are represented in other Commonwealth countries by High Commissioners who have a status equivalent to that of Ambassadors.

The Commonwealth is bound by a complex system of consultation and co-operation in political, economic, educational, scientific and cultural fields, operating through a multitude of Commonwealth organizations, through continuous personal contacts, and through the periodic Commonwealth Prime Ministers' Meetings. It had no formal institutional expression until the establishment in 1965 of a Commonwealth Secretariat to foster closer and more informed understanding between their governments.

THE COMMONWEALTH

HEADS OF GOVERNMENT MEETINGS

Succeeded the Colonial Conferences 1887-1907 and the Imperial Conferences 1911-37.

1944 May	First Meeting of new series of Commonwealth Conferences. United Kingdom, Australia, Canada, New Zealand, South Africa represented. India and Southern Rhodesia attended some sessions.	1964 July	Kenya, Malawi and Uganda represented.
1946 April-May	Second Meeting.	1965 June	Malta, Zambia and Gambia represented. Commonwealth Secretariat established. Discussions on Rhodesia.
1948 October	Ceylon, India and Pakistan represented.	1966 January	Lagos meeting on Rhodesia. Nineteen countries represented. Two special committees established: one on sanctions against Rhodesia and the special needs of Zambia, the other on the training of Rhodesian Africans.
1949 April	Decision to continue India's membership as a Republic recognizing the Sovereign as Head of the Commonwealth.
1951 January	Fifth Meeting.	September	Guyana represented. Special statement issued defining Commonwealth attitude to Rhodesia.
1953 June	Sixth Meeting (following the Coronation of Queen Elizabeth II).	1969 January	Barbados, Mauritius, Lesotho, Botswana and Swaziland represented.
1955 January-February	Federation of Rhodesia and Nyasaland represented.	1971 January	Singapore is host to first full-scale meeting held outside London. Name of meetings changed to Heads of Government Meetings, Tonga, Western Samoa and Fiji represented.
1956 June-July	Eighth Meeting.	1973 August	Meeting at Ottawa, Canada. Bangladesh and the Bahama Islands represented for the first time.
1957 June-July	Ghana represented.
1960 May	Federation of Malaysia represented.
1961 March	Cyprus and Nigeria represented. Discussion of South Africa's position in a multi-racial Commonwealth. South Africa withdrew from membership.
1962 September	Jamaica, Sierra Leone, Tanganyika and Trinidad and Tobago represented. Discussion of United Kingdom's application to join the European Economic Community. (Barbados, British Guiana, Hong Kong, Kenya, Malta, Mauritius, Singapore and Uganda attended some sessions.)

Meetings are private and informal. A communiqué is issued, but decisions are not normally taken except in matters of immediate constitutional importance, such as membership. Before 1971 all meetings, except that held in January 1966 in Lagos devoted to the topic of Rhodesia, took place in London. Meetings are now held in various other capitals in the Commonwealth.

COMMONWEALTH SECRETARIAT

Marlborough House, Pall Mall, London, S.W.1.

The Secretariat, established by Commonwealth Heads of Government at their meeting in London in July 1965, operates as an international organization at the service of all Commonwealth countries. Created as "a visible symbol of the spirit of co-operation which animates the Commonwealth", it is responsible to Commonwealth governments collectively and is the main agency for multi-lateral communication between them. It promotes consultation and disseminates information on matters of common concern to member governments, services the meetings of Commonwealth Heads of Government, Ministers and officials, and assists appropriate agencies in the fostering of Commonwealth links.

The cost of the Secretariat is borne by Commonwealth Governments in agreed shares based on the UN formula. A Finance Committee composed of Commonwealth High Commissioners and a representative of the British Government recommended a budget for 1973-74 of £847,920.

The Secretariat is staffed from member countries and the Secretary-General, appointed by the Heads of Government for a period of five years, is equivalent in rank to a senior High Commissioner. He is assisted by two Deputy Secretaries-General (one with general responsibilities, the other with responsibility for economic matters) and an Assistant Secretary-General with responsibility for educational and medical matters.

Secretary-General (1970-75): ARNOLD C. SMITH (Canada).

Deputy Secretaries-General: A. HUSAIN (India), HUNTER WADE (New Zealand).

Assistant Secretary-General: Dr. J. A. MARAJ (Trinidad and Tobago).

MARLBOROUGH HOUSE

Marlborough House came into use as a Commonwealth centre in 1962, to serve as a centre for Commonwealth meetings in London. In addition to the Secretariat, it houses offices for Prime Ministers and their accompanying delegations and staffs, the Commonwealth Foundation and an Information Centre.

COMMONWEALTH CO-OPERATION

ECONOMIC AND TRADE CO-OPERATION

Since 1959 official economic co-operation has been co-ordinated in the Commonwealth Economic Consultative Council. The Council generally meets at the level of Finance Ministers each year before the meetings of the International Monetary Fund and the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development.

Consultation and assistance is provided for member countries seeking association with the EEC by the Secretariat, which has conducted economic studies of the individual problems of certain countries, and prepared papers.

There have been meetings of Commonwealth Trade Ministers and of experts on tourism. The Secretariat also prepares annual reports on Commonwealth trade and collects and issues statistics on certain commodities.

Other main economic conferences under the aegis of the Commonwealth are: the Commonwealth Forestry Conference, meeting usually every five years, assisted by the Standing Committee on Commonwealth Forestry; the Royal Agricultural Society of the Commonwealth, which meets every two years; and the Commonwealth Engineering Conference, meeting every four years.

COMMONWEALTH PREFERENCE

Commonwealth Preference is a system of tariff preferences operating among Commonwealth states and territories (except Rhodesia), South Africa, South West Africa (Namibia), Burma and the Republic of Ireland. Members accord a preferential tariff rate on imports from the Commonwealth, which is lower than both Most Favoured Nation and general rates of duty. The system is not, however, necessarily reciprocal. For example, Commonwealth countries in Africa enjoy tariff preferences on their exports to Britain, but few of them accord preferences to British goods.

THE COMMONWEALTH

Factors which have reduced the advantages of the system are: the raising of some protective tariffs even within the Commonwealth; and world-wide cuts in tariffs encouraging trade outside the system. As a result, intra-Commonwealth exchanges have declined as a share of the total trade of Commonwealth countries from two-fifths in the mid-1950s to a third a decade later. In 1954 the Commonwealth took 48 per cent of British exports, but by 1970 the proportion had fallen to 21 per cent. Meanwhile, British exports to the EEC have increased, exceeding exports to the Commonwealth for the first time in 1970.

THE COMMONWEALTH AND THE EEC

Britain's membership of the EEC entails the gradual ending of Commonwealth Preference as Britain participates in the EEC's Common Agricultural Policy (CAP) and applies the Community's Common External Tariff (CET) against non-EEC countries. The developing countries of the Commonwealth have, therefore, been offered preferential arrangements with the whole of the enlarged Community. Special arrangements have additionally been made for exports of sugar from the developing Commonwealth and dairy produce from New Zealand.

Developing Commonwealth countries in Africa, the Caribbean, and the Indian and Pacific Oceans have been offered one of three relationships with the enlarged EEC, effective from 1975 (in the interim period the status quo is to be maintained):

1. Association similar to that at present in operation between the EEC and 18 Francophone African states under the Yaoundé Convention (see EEC chapter), offering reciprocal trade preferences except for certain African agricultural exports, aid from the Community and certain joint institutions. The Yaoundé Convention is due for renewal in 1975, and negotiations on the new terms started in Brussels on October 17th, 1973. Commonwealth countries participate alongside the present Yaoundé associates in the negotiations. (Mauritius has already entered into association with the Community under the present Convention.)

2. Association with reciprocal rights and obligations, particularly in the field of trade, along the lines of the Arusha Agreement between the EEC and Kenya, Tanzania and Uganda (see EEC chapter).

3. A simple trading agreement.

For the Asian Commonwealth countries and the developed Commonwealth countries, Commonwealth preferences will be phased out as the British tariff is aligned with the Common External Tariff of the EEC. This is to take place in five stages between April 1973 and July 1977. For a number of important Commonwealth raw material exports, such as newsprint, wood pulp, plywood and alumina, Britain has negotiated exemptions or reductions in the Community tariff so as to preserve access for exporters in the developed Commonwealth. For many other raw materials and primary products the CET is low or zero, for example for wool and tea. The Asian Commonwealth countries are included in the EEC's Generalized Preference Scheme, which grants to developing countries duty-free quotas for their manufactures and semi-manufactures.

Malta already has an association agreement with the EEC, offering preferential trading arrangements but not aid; Cyprus has negotiated a similar agreement, as did India in 1973.

British dependencies (with the exception of Gibraltar and Hong Kong) and the West Indies Associated States will become eligible for association under the terms of the 1957 Treaty of Rome. These arrangements, essentially similar to the terms of the Yaoundé Convention, will not apply until the renegotiated Yaoundé Convention comes into force. The status quo will be maintained until at least January 31st, 1975.

Gibraltar: Under Article 227 the provisions of the Treaty of Rome apply to European territories for whose external relations an EEC member is responsible. Despite coming within this category, Gibraltar will be excluded from the Customs area of the Community, and neither the Common Agricultural Policy nor the Community Value Added Tax (VAT) will be applied there.

Hong Kong will be included within the Community's Generalized Preference Scheme.

New Zealand has been guaranteed access for at least 80 per cent of present sales of butter to Britain, and at least 20 per cent of present sales of cheese, at the average 1969-72 prices, by the end of the first five years of British membership of the EEC. During the third year the Community will review the situation for butter and decide on suitable measures for ensuring beyond 1977 the continuation of special arrangements for New Zealand butter. The Community has undertaken to make every effort to promote the conclusion of an international agreement on dairy products, and to pursue a trade policy which will not frustrate New Zealand's efforts to diversify her economy.

COMMONWEALTH SUGAR AGREEMENT

An Agreement was concluded in 1951 between the British Government and Commonwealth sugar industries and exporters, providing for a U.K. commitment to buy specified quantities of sugar at prices negotiated as being reasonably remunerative to efficient producers, and for the orderly marketing in the U.K., New Zealand and Canada of supplies in excess of the negotiated price quotas from the exporting countries.

Exporting countries at present adhering to the Agreement, which has been extended to the end of 1974, are Australia, British Honduras, East Africa, Fiji, India, Mauritius, Swaziland and the West Indies and Guyana. (The Rhodesian quota has been placed in suspense until the return of constitutional rule).

In May 1971 Britain and the EEC reached agreement on the question of access of sugar from the developing Commonwealth countries into the market of the enlarged Community. The EEC, in addition to offering association to the sugar-dependent countries of the Commonwealth, has given a pledge to have as its firm purpose the safeguarding of the interests of countries depending to a considerable degree on the export of a single commodity, especially sugar. When the present Commonwealth Sugar Agreement expires in 1974, provisions on Commonwealth sugar to the enlarged Community will feature in the new arrangements scheduled to come into effect from 1975.

THE COMMONWEALTH

The developing Commonwealth countries and Britain at a meeting in June 1971 expressed themselves satisfied that the Community's offer represents "a firm assurance of a secure and continuing market in the enlarged Community on fair terms for the quantities of sugar covered by the Commonwealth Sugar Agreement", and the Commonwealth participants stated that they would "continue to plan their future on this basis".

ECONOMIC AID

Intra-Commonwealth aid programmes in operation include the Special Commonwealth African Assistance Plan (SCAAP), Commonwealth Education Co-operation, Overseas Service Aid and similar schemes, the Colonial Development and Welfare programmes, Australian South Pacific Technical Assistance Programme and the Australian International Awards Scheme. The Commonwealth is associated with non-Commonwealth countries in the Colombo Plan, Caribbean Technical Assistance, Indus Basin Development Fund, British Council, the economic sector of SEATO and the Indian General Scholarship Scheme. In addition there are a number of other programmes related to specific countries. The flow of official aid in the Commonwealth in 1971 amounted to £350 million.

In the field of technical assistance, in 1971 almost 14,400 experts and advisers were provided and nearly 12,000 students and trainees were financed. The number of trainees financed had declined over the five years since 1967, but the number of students had increased by one third. In 1970-71 the developing Commonwealth countries provided 710 experts for the United Nations Development Programme and the UN Regular Programme; the bulk came from India, but 20 other Commonwealth countries also provided experts.

COMMONWEALTH FUND FOR TECHNICAL CO-OPERATION (CFTC)

The Commonwealth Fund for Technical Co-operation came into existence on April 1st, 1971. This followed the conference in Singapore in January, at which Heads of Government welcomed the fact that the way was open for the Fund to be established.

A Commonwealth Programme for Technical Co-operation had been in operation for the previous three years, financed largely on a bilateral basis by developed Commonwealth members. Under the new Fund, the Programme has become truly multilateral with contributions from all 32 members, both developed and developing. The new arrangements represent a move towards partnership and away from the distinction between "donors" and "recipients".

Overall direction comes from a Board of Representatives, comprising one representative from each participating government. An eleven-man Committee of Management, appointed by the Board, supervises the general operations of the Fund. The Commonwealth Secretary-General is Chairman of this Committee.

The Fund provides technical assistance for economic and social development. Its three programmes—general technical assistance, education and training, and export market development—are designed to meet the priorities of the developing Commonwealth countries.

The greater part of the CFTC's activities have so far been carried out under its General Technical Assistance Programme, which provides assistance primarily in the following fields: planning (including manpower and educational planning and sectoral analysis) and plan implementation; preparation, appraisal, execution and evaluation of development projects; statistics, finance, tourism, transport and public administration; regional and sub-regional co-operation. From the Fund's inception up to March 1973 more than 250 projects had been examined.

Through the Education and Training Programme personnel from developing Commonwealth countries receive instruction in other developing Commonwealth countries where conditions are similar. In this way educational and training facilities can be pooled.

Although the Export Market Development Programme is still in its early stages, a number of important projects have already been undertaken, including studies of the implications of the enlargement of the EEC for some of the "Associable" Commonwealth countries.

The CFTC is financed by voluntary contributions from all Commonwealth governments. For 1971-72 over £400,000 was pledged to the Fund, while for the second financial year, 1972-73, pledges were in excess of £1 million. For the third year, 1973-74, pledges are about £1.5 million.

LAW

English Common Law forms the basis of most of the judicial systems of the Commonwealth. Exceptions are the Canadian province of Quebec and the Island of Mauritius, where French law is the basis; Sri Lanka and Rhodesia, where Roman-Dutch law is the basis; and the Moslem countries of South Asia and Africa, where the legal code is in part based on Moslem civil law. There is a right of appeal to the Privy Council from some countries, including Australia and New Zealand.

There have been four Commonwealth Law Conferences, in London (1955), in Ottawa (1960), in Sydney (1965) and in New Delhi (1971). At the 1965 Conference, major discussion centred on the possibility of establishing a Commonwealth Court of Appeal, to which all members of the Commonwealth, without exception, would have recourse.

Separate meetings of Chief Justices and Law Ministers and Attorneys-General have also been held. There was a special conference of Law Ministers in 1966 and another in January 1973, at which some of the main discussions held were concerned with the functions of Law Ministers and the relationship between the executive and the judiciary; and intra-Commonwealth co-operation in the execution of judgments and in relation to fugitive offenders (on the subject of which a number of member countries revised their law following agreements reached at their 1966 meeting).

SCIENCE

Conferences on specialized subjects were held until 1962. Since then discussion has been within the framework of the meetings of the Commonwealth Scientific Committee.

At the Eighth Conference in Jamaica, 1970, it was agreed that where necessary "task forces" should be set up where the larger and more established members could give advice and expertise to the developing organizations. At the Ninth Conference, in Nairobi, October 1972, it was agreed that regional training courses should be held in six different regions of the Commonwealth; Sec. ALVA CLARKE.

TELECOMMUNICATIONS

A common-user system of cable, radio and satellite communications links most Commonwealth countries, with extensions providing a world-wide network. Besides broadband cables across the Atlantic and Pacific and from Australia to Singapore-Malaysia via New Guinea and Hong Kong, there are satellite services connecting Australia, Britain, Canada, East Africa, Hong Kong and Malaysia with various countries. In addition, HF radio systems, microwave and tropospheric scatter systems, provide communications in different parts of the network.

Commonwealth Telecommunications Organization: established in its present form in 1967. Consists of periodic conferences at government level, the Telecommunications Council and the Telecommunications Bureau (see below). Objects: to promote the efficient exploitation and development of the Commonwealth external telecommunications system, giving information and providing the machinery for consultation between member countries; and to administer joint financial arrangements.

CONFERENCES

The most recent conferences have been in 1966, in Ottawa, and 1972, in London.

Commonwealth Telecommunications Council: f. 1967 to advise Partner Governments and the nationalized telecommunications organizations on matters relating to external telecommunications systems. Mems.: 21 representing 23 Partner Governments and 1 representing British Overseas Territories and Associated States.

YOUTH

A new Commonwealth Youth Programme was approved at the first meeting of Commonwealth Ministers concerned with youth matters, in Lusaka early in 1973, and began its activities in November 1973. It is based on requests and recommendations made at a series of regional seminars on youth and national and social development—in Nairobi (1969), Port of Spain (1970), Kuala Lumpur (1971), and Malta and Cyprus (1972)—and on proposals developed by Commonwealth officials at a meeting in London in 1972.

The Commonwealth Youth Programme has six components: Commonwealth youth service awards to recognize and foster contributions made by young people to national development; regional Commonwealth centres for advanced studies in youth work to provide training for key personnel; Commonwealth fellowships for applied research with particular reference to youth matters; Commonwealth bursaries for youth personnel to attend training courses; Commonwealth study fellowships to enable youth personnel to visit other Commonwealth countries to study new developments; and a Commonwealth youth information service to meet the need for information on youth and development policies.

COMMUNAUTÉ ÉCONOMIQUE DE L'AFRIQUE DE L'OUEST—CEAO

(West African Economic Community)

Ouagadougou, Upper Volta

Created by a protocol of agreement signed in Bamako, Mali, in May 1970 by the Heads of State of the now dissolved West African Customs Union (UDEAO). The treaty establishing the Community was adopted, in principle only, in Bamako on June 3rd, 1972, by the Heads of State of six of the member countries and the Foreign Minister of Dahomey. The Heads of State met again on April 16th and 17th, 1973, in Abidjan, signed protocols annexed to the treaty, elected officers, decided on the site for the secretariat and ruled that the Community would come into being on January 1st, 1974.

MEMBERS

Ivory Coast
Mali

Mauritania
Niger

Senegal
Upper Volta

Dahomey has observer status.

ORGANIZATION

CONFERENCE OF HEADS OF STATE

The Conference of Heads of State is to be the supreme organ of the Community. It will be held at least once a year in each of the member states, in alphabetical order, and its President will be the Head of State of the host country. Decisions of the Conference must be unanimous. It appoints the Secretary-General, accountant and financial controller of the Community.

President: HAMANI DIORI (Niger).

COUNCIL OF MINISTERS

The Council of Ministers will meet at least twice a year, and always at least one month before the Conference of Heads of State, usually at the seat of the Community. Each member state will be represented by its Minister of Finance or a member of government, according to the subject under discussion. Decisions are taken unanimously.

GENERAL SECRETARIAT

This organization will be responsible for liaison between member states and for the executive functions of the Community. It will supervise the implementation of decisions of the Conference of Heads of State and the Council of Ministers. It will also supervise the Community Development Fund. An industrial development agency and a trade promotion agency are expected to function within the Secretariat. The Secretary-General is appointed for a four-year term.

Secretary-General: CHEIK IBRAHIMA FALL (Senegal).

COMMUNITY DEVELOPMENT FUND

The Fund will be financed by member states according to their respective shares in the trade of industrial products within the Community. It will be able to compensate for certain types of trade loss and to finance economic development projects.

COURT OF ARBITRATION

A Court of Arbitration is to be set up; its composition, competence and procedure are to be determined in a protocol which will be approved by the Conference of Heads of State.

FUNCTIONS

The West African Economic Community would go beyond the West African Customs Union in co-ordinating not only customs and trade measures but also the development of policies with regard to transport and communications, cattle and beef, industry, external trade, tourism, energy, research, etc.

It will develop trade between member states in agricultural and industrial products, through the establishment of an area of organized trade; and it will develop regional economic co-operation policies, in particular as regards industry and transport.

Non-manufactured, crude products may be imported and exported within the Community without internal taxes.

Industrial products of member states, when exported to other member states, may benefit from the special preferential system based on the substitution of a Regional Co-operation Tax, which replaces all other import taxes. Certain products remain subject to special agreements.

ORGANIZATION

THE COUNCIL

President: HAMANI DIORI (Niger).

The Council consists of the Heads of State and the President and Vice-President of the Legislative Assemblies of each member country, and the Ministers responsible for negotiations between the states. It is an executive body and members who fail to implement the decisions of the Council may be brought before a Court of Arbitration.

The Council meets twice a year, the place rotating annually between the capitals of the member states. The Head of State of the host country acts as President. Extraordinary meetings may be held at the request of two or more members.

COMMISSIONS

Commissions on Foreign Affairs, Justice, Labour, Public Administration, Public Works and Telecommunications, Posts and Telecommunications and on Epidemics and Epizootics have been set up.

Secretariat: Cotonou, Dahomey.

TRADE AND DEVELOPMENT

There is complete freedom of trade and a unified system of external tariffs and fiscal schedules. A single system of administration for ports and harbours, railways and road traffic and a unified quarantine organization will be set up.

FONDS D'ENTRAIDE ET DE GARANTIE

Central Guarantee Fund originally conceived as the Fonds de solidarité to support development projects, transformed in June 1966 into a mutual aid and loan guaranty fund designed to encourage outside lenders to finance development projects in member countries. Total to be provided annually by member states equals 650 million francs CFA, of which 500 million will be contributed by Ivory Coast, 42 million each by Niger, Upper Volta and Dahomey, and 24 million by Togo.

CONSEIL DE L'ENTENTE ECONOMIC COMMUNITY FOR MEAT AND CATTLE
Ouagadougou

The Community was created between the five members of the Conseil de l'Entente in March 1970. Mali was admitted to membership of the Community in November 1972. The aim of the Community is to take action in all fields of cattle and meat production within the member countries.

Secretary-General: ROGER TALL.

FUNCTIONS

In August 1960 it was agreed that there should be:

1. An identical constitutional and electoral procedure in each State with elections to be held at the same time.
2. Identical organization of the Armed Forces of each State.
3. Identical administrative organization.
4. Identical taxation and tariff policies.
5. Common Bank of Amortization.
6. A common Diplomatic Corps.

Commissions were set up to study how these measures could be implemented, but little progress has been made.

AGREEMENTS WITH FRANCE

In April 1961 the member states signed agreements with France, covering defence, economic affairs, judicial matters, higher education, cultural relations, civil aviation and postal and telecommunications. Upper Volta did not sign the defence agreement.

COUNCIL FOR MUTUAL ECONOMIC ASSISTANCE —CMEA (COMECON)

Prospekt Kalinina 56, Moscow, U.S.S.R.

The Council was founded in 1949 to assist the economic development of its member states through joint utilization and co-ordination of efforts. The Mongolian People's Republic was admitted in 1962, and the Republic of Cuba in 1972.

MEMBERS

Bulgaria	German Democratic Republic	Poland
Cuba	Hungary	Romania
Czechoslovakia	Mongolian People's Republic	U.S.S.R.

Albania ceased to participate in the activities of the Council at the end of 1961.

OBSERVERS

In accordance with Article X of the Charter, the Council may invite participation of non-member countries in the work of its organs, in spheres agreed by arrangement with the relevant countries. At the present time a number of socialist non-member countries are participating in the work of the Council's organs in the role of observers.

In 1964 an agreement was concluded whereby Yugoslavia can participate in certain defined spheres of the Council's activity, where a mutual interest with member countries prevails, in the areas of foreign trade, finance and currency, and in a number of branches of national economy, to all intents and purposes on the same level as member countries. The agreement also envisaged Yugoslavia attending sittings of the Council's organs in the capacity of observer.

ORGANIZATION

SESSION OF THE COUNCIL

Supreme organ of CMEA. Meets at least once yearly, in the capital of each member state in turn, all members being represented. Discusses proposals from members, from the Executive Committee, CMEA Committee for Co-operative Planning, CMEA Committee for Scientific and Technical Co-operation, Permanent Commissions, the Secretariat and some other bodies. Considers all fundamental questions concerning economic, scientific and technical collaboration. Lays down programme of action for CMEA.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE

Created at the 16th (Extraordinary) Session of the Council held in Moscow in June 1962 to take the place of the Conference of Members' Representatives and to form the chief executive organ of CMEA. Composed of the representatives of the member states at the level of Deputy Prime Minister, their deputies and advisers. Meets at least once every three months to examine proposals from member states, the Permanent Commissions and the Secretariat. Guides all co-ordinating work linked with the resolution of problems before the Council, in agreement with the decisions of the Session of the Council. The Chair is taken in turn by representatives of each country, and is presently occupied by T. TSOLOV (Bulgaria).

Members: TODOR TSOLOV (Bulgaria), F. HAMOUZ (Czechoslovakia), HEINRICH WEISS (German Democratic Republic), D. LAZAR (Hungary), M. JAGELSKI (Poland), GHEORGHE RADULESCU (Romania), DANDINGUIYIN GOMBOZHAY (Mongolian People's Republic), MIKHAIL LESECHKO (U.S.S.R.), F. BRAVO (Cuba).

COUNCIL FOR MUTUAL ECONOMIC ASSISTANCE

of mutual co-operation and the strengthening of an integrated economy between member states. Formed CMEA committees for co-operative planning and for scientific and technical co-operation, and Permanent CMEA Commission on posts and telecommunications.

1972 Moscow Heads of Governments of member states participated in this session.

Points were discussed relating to the furtherance of mutual co-operation and the development of an integrated socialist economic structure. The reports of the CMEA Executive on CMEA activities between the 25th and 26th sessions were considered, together with the reports prepared by the Committee for Co-operative Planning, the Committee for Scientific and technical co-operation, and the Permanent Commissions for Power and the Chemical Industry, on their progress in respect to the overall programme.

1973 Prague

The session admitted the Republic of Cuba to membership of the CMEA.

Points were discussed relating to the furtherance of mutual co-operation between member states and the development of an integrated socialist economic structure. Reports were received from the CMEA Executive Committee on their activities between the 26th and 27th sessions, and from the CMEA Committees for co-operative planning, scientific and technical co-operation, the Permanent Commission for heavy and light industry, outlining their activities within the overall programme. An agreement was reached on the co-operation between the CMEA and the Republic of Finland, which was established on May 16th, 1973. The decision was taken to form a special fund to enable member countries to issue grants for the training of personnel working in their higher educational establishments.

CMEA TRADE

Foreign trade is one of the most important forms of economic co-operation between member states of CMEA. Trade between member states was planned by yearly agreements until 1951 and thereafter by long-term bilateral and multilateral trade agreements linked to the development plans of the member countries. In 1956 the standing Commission for Foreign Trade was set up. Trade between member countries comprises more than 60 per cent of their foreign trade which is wholly conducted through state monopolies. Member countries engage in trade with socialist non-members on the basis of long-term agreements. Accordingly a long-term trade agreement was drawn up with Yugoslavia for the years 1966-70 with the result that the volume of trade between member countries and Yugoslavia doubled in this period compared with the period 1961-65.

SUMMARY OF CHARTER

(With amendments approved by the 16th and 17th Sessions of the Council).

The Governments of the People's Republic of Albania, the People's Republic of Bulgaria, the Czechoslovak Republic, the German Democratic Republic, the Hungarian People's Republic, the Polish People's Republic, the Romanian People's Republic and the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics,

Taking into account that economic co-operation, successfully effected between their countries, contributes to the most rational development of the national economy, the elevation of the living standards of the population, and the strengthening of the unity and cohesion of these countries,

Fully resolved to continue developing all-round economic co-operation on the basis of the consistent implementation of the international socialist division of labour in the interests of building socialism and communism in their countries and ensuring a lasting peace throughout the world,

Convinced that the development of economic co-operation between their countries promotes the achievement of the purposes expounded in the Charter of the United Nations,

Confirming their readiness to develop economic relations with all countries, irrespective of their social and state systems, on the principles of equality, mutual advantage, and non-interference in domestic affairs,

Recognizing the ever growing role of the Council for Mutual Economic Assistance in organizing economic co-operation between their countries,

Have agreed for these purposes to adopt the present Charter.

ARTICLE I AIMS AND PRINCIPLES

1. The aim of the C.M.E.A. is to facilitate, by uniting and co-ordinating the efforts of the Council's member countries, the planned development of their national economies, the acceleration of their economic and technical progress, an increase in the level of industrialization in the less industrialized countries, the uninterrupted growth of labour productivity and the steady advance in the welfare of the peoples of the Council's member countries.

2. The C.M.E.A. is based on the principles of sovereign equality of all its member countries.

The policy of economic, scientific and technical co-operation between the member countries shall be effected in accordance with the principles of full equality, respect for sovereignty and national interests, mutual advantage and mutual comradely assistance.

ARTICLE II MEMBERSHIP

1. The founder members of the C.M.E.A. are the countries which sign and ratify the present Charter.

2. Membership is open to any other countries which share the Council's aims and principles and agree to accept the obligations contained in the present Charter.

3. Any member country may withdraw from the Council by notice to that effect given to the depositary of the present Charter. Such notice becomes effective six months after its receipt by the depositary. On receipt of such notice the depositary will inform the member countries of the Council.

4. The member countries of the Council agree:

- (a) to ensure the fulfilment of the recommendations of the Council organs adopted by them;
- (b) to render the Council and its officials the necessary co-operation in the discharge of their functions under the present Charter;
- (c) to submit to the Council materials and information necessary for carrying out the tasks assigned to it;
- (d) to inform the Council about progress in fulfilling the recommendations adopted in the Council.

ARTICLE III FUNCTIONS AND POWERS

1. In conformity with the aims and principles laid down in Article I of the present Charter, the functions of the C.M.E.A. are as follows:

- (a) organize all-round economic, scientific and technical co-operation between the Council's member countries in the most rational use of their natural resources and the acceleration of their productive forces;
- (b) foster the improvement of the international socialist division of labour by co-ordinating national economic development plans, and the specialization and co-operation of production in the Council's member countries;
- (c) take measures to study economic, scientific and technical problems which are of interest to the Council's member countries;
- (d) assist the Council's member countries in elaborating and carrying out joint measures for:
 - the development of the industry and agriculture of the Council's member countries;
 - the development of transport with a view to ensuring first priority for increasing export, import and transit shipments of the Council's member countries;
 - the most efficient use of principal capital investments allocated by the Council's member countries for the development of the mining and manufacturing industries and for the construction of major projects which are of interest to two countries or more;
 - the development of trade and exchange of services between the Council's member countries and between them and other countries;
 - the exchange of scientific and technical achievements and advanced production experience;
- (e) take such other actions as may be required for the achievement of the aims of the Council.

2. The C.M.E.A., as represented by its organs, acting within the terms of their reference, is authorized to adopt recommendations and decisions in accordance with the present Charter.

ARTICLE IV RECOMMENDATIONS AND DECISIONS

1. Recommendations shall be made on questions of economic, scientific and technical co-operation. Recommendations shall be submitted to member countries for consideration.

Member countries carry out the recommendations they receive by decisions of their Governments or other competent bodies in accordance with their legislative processes.

COUNCIL FOR MUTUAL ECONOMIC ASSISTANCE

2. Decisions shall be adopted on organizational and procedural matters. Unless otherwise provided for therein, decisions come into force on the day on which the minutes of the meeting are signed by the appropriate organ of the Council.

3. All recommendations and decisions of the Council can be adopted only with the consent of interested member countries, and any country may declare an interest in any question under consideration by the Council.

Recommendations and decisions do not apply to members who have declared themselves as having no interest in the question concerned. Each of these countries, however, may subsequently join recommendations or decisions adopted by the other member countries of the Council.

ARTICLE V ORGANS

1. For the purpose of carrying out the functions and exercising the powers laid down in Article III of this Charter, the C.M.E.A. is divided into the following principal organs:

- Session of the Council;
- Executive Committee;
- Standing Commissions;
- Secretariat.

2. Other organs, as may be necessary, may be constituted in accordance with the present Charter.

ACTIVITIES

HUMAN RIGHTS

EUROPEAN COMMISSION

President: JAMES E. S. FAWCETT (United Kingdom).

Vice-President: GIUSEPPE SPERDUTI (Italy).

Members: JOCHEN A. FROWEIN (Federal Republic of Germany), FELIX ERMACORA (Austria), MICHAEL A. TRIANTAFYLIDIS (Cyprus), FELIX WELTER (Luxembourg), CARL AAGE NØRGAARD (Denmark), KEVIN MANGAN (Ireland), JOZEF CUSTERS (Belgium), EDWIN BUSUTTIL (Malta), LOVE KELLBERG (Sweden), BÜLENT DAVER (Turkey), TORKEL OPSAHL (Norway), C. H. F. POLAK (Netherlands).

Secretary: ANTHONY McNULTY (United Kingdom).

The Commission is competent to examine complaints made either by a Contracting Party, or in certain cases, by a person, non-governmental organization or group of individuals that the European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms has been violated by one or more of the Contracting Parties. If the Commission decides to admit the application, it then proceeds to ascertain the full facts of the case and, at the same time, to place itself at the disposal of the Parties in order to try and reach a friendly settlement. If no settlement is reached, the Commission sends a report to the Committee of Ministers in which it states an opinion as to whether there has been a violation of the Convention. It is then for the Committee of Ministers or, if the case is referred to it, the Court to decide whether or not a violation has taken place.

EUROPEAN COURT

Judges: Sir HUMPHREY WALDOCK, President (United Kingdom), GIORGIO BALLADORE PALLIERI, Vice-President (Italy), RENÉ CASSIN (France), STURE PETREN (Sweden), ALFRED VERDROSS (Austria), EUGÈNE RODENBOURG (Luxembourg), HELGA PEDERSEN (Denmark), HERMANN MOSLER (Federal Republic of Germany), MEHMED ZEKIA (Cyprus), ANTOINE FAVRE (Switzerland), PHILIP O'DONOGHUE (Ireland), JOHN CREMONA (Malta), ALI BOZER (Turkey), GERARD J. WIARDA (Netherlands), THOR. H. VILHJALMSSON (Iceland), WALTER J. GANSHOFF VAN DER MEERSCH (Belgium), STURE PETREN (Sweden), ROLV RYSSDAL (Norway).

Registrar: MARC-ANDRÉ EISSEN (France).

The Court may only deal with a case after the Commission has acknowledged the failure of efforts for a friendly settlement within the prescribed period. The following may bring a case before the Court, provided that the High Contracting Party or Parties concerned have accepted its compulsory jurisdiction or, failing that, with the consent of the High Contracting Party or Parties concerned: the Commission, a High Contracting Party whose national is alleged to be a victim, a High Contracting Party which referred the case to the Commission, and a High Contracting Party against which the complaint has been lodged. In the event of dispute as to whether the Court has jurisdiction, the matter is settled by the decision of the Court. The judgment of the Court is final. The Court may, in certain circumstances, give advisory opinions at the request of the Committee of Ministers.

INTERGOVERNMENTAL WORK PROGRAMME

On December 14th, 1972, the Committee of Ministers adopted the sixth Intergovernmental Work Programme, covering the period 1973-74. The Programme is divided into four chapters: Man's cultural development and permanent education; the adjustment of laws and administrative machinery to present-day living conditions; the improvement of man's physical environment in the town and in the country; development of economic and social structures and improvement of public health conditions.

ECONOMIC AFFAIRS

The Council has as its main objective in this field the protection of the individual in a European economy.

Work is, for example, being carried out on the improvement of the protection of the consumer (e.g. in such fields as developing Europe-wide measures to put an end to misleading advertising). A Committee of Governmental Experts is examining the scope and effects of recent trends towards press concentration in member states and is considering what measures of economic assistance to the press could be adopted in order to avoid the point where concentration might seriously threaten the public right to freedom of expression and information.

SOCIAL AFFAIRS

The Council has been active in the social sphere since its inception and a number of Conventions and agreements have been elaborated, as well as a fellowships' scheme administered through the Council.

Multilateral Treaties: Among these instruments, the European Social Charter, signed on October 18th 1961, and in force since February 26th, 1965, with regard at present to Austria, Cyprus, Denmark, German Federal Republic, Ireland, Italy, Norway, Sweden and the United Kingdom, lays down the rights and principles which are the basis of the Council's social policy, and guarantees a number of social and economic rights to the citizen. It thus complements the European Convention on Human Rights, which guarantees certain civil and political rights.

A number of international instruments in the field of social security have been concluded within the framework of the Council of Europe, including the European Code of Social Security and its Protocol. The Code covers medical care, sickness benefit, unemployment benefit, old-age benefit, employment injury benefit, family benefit, maternity benefit, invalidity benefit and survivor's benefit. In addition, two European interim agreements on social security aim to establish equality of treatment for nationals of member states. These agreements are to be replaced by the European Convention on Social Security, which was opened for signature by the Committee of Ministers on December 14th, 1972. Most of the provisions will apply automatically as soon as the Convention enters into force but others will be subject to the conclusion of additional multilateral or bilateral agreements.

Mention should also be made of the European Convention on Social and Medical Assistance, the European Convention on the Adoption of Children and the European Agreement on Au Pair Placement. A draft Convention on the Social Protection of Farmers is now being drawn up.

Resolutions Containing Recommendations: Resolutions containing recommendations to member governments have been adopted by the Committee of Ministers in the fields of social policy, social welfare and labour law, inter alia. Such resolutions are conceived as blueprints for specific concerted action in the social field.

Fellowships: The Council of Europe administers a fellowships' scheme for the training of social services personnel drawn from member countries, and an annual research fellowships programme involving the study, by a group of three or four specialists, of subjects chosen by the Council of Europe Social Committee.

Secretariat Services: The Secretary-General of the Council of Europe acted as Secretary of the Conference of European Ministers of Labour, which was held in Rome in November 1972 and was mainly concerned with two subjects: "Young People and the World of Work" and "The Situation of Migrant Workers in Europe".

The Secretary-General of the Council of Europe also acts as Secretary of the Conference of European Ministers responsible for Family Affairs which meets every second year. The thirteenth Conference was held in Nice in September 1973; the main topic was "Children and Young People at Risk".

HEALTH

The Council is working towards the pooling of medical techniques and equipment between member states. A programme of medical fellowships has been launched, designed to enable members of the medical profession and personnel of public health departments to become acquainted with new methods and techniques practised in other European countries and to participate in research of common European interest.

European Agreements provide for special facilities for the medical treatment of war cripples and other injured, for the exchange of blood-group and tissue typing reagents, for a system of supply of blood and blood products through the channel of a network of 28 Blood Transfusion Centres in 15 member states, and for the duty-free importation on loan of medical and surgical equipment. Eight member countries have concluded Administrative Arrangements setting up an "excepted sanitary area" under the terms of Article 104 of the International Sanitary Regulations. Ten states carry out activities towards harmonization of their legislation in several fields, such as the pharmaceutical field, the health control of foodstuffs and the use of pesticides. Eight countries are participating in the establishment of a European Pharmacopoeia, the first volume of which was published in 1969 and the second in 1971. A multidisciplinary Symposium on Drug Dependence took place in March 1972 and gave government experts and representatives of organizations an opportunity to prepare co-ordinated measures by member governments.

New fields of study at present include the abuse of medicaments, dental hygiene, preventive medicine, and the spread of venereal diseases.

POPULATION

The Council has been concerned with refugee problems since 1950, and in 1953 appointed M. Pierre Schneider its Special Representative for national refugees and over-population in Europe. M. Schneider's plan for a European Resettlement Fund to make loans to governments for the resettlements of refugees and helping them in solving the problems raised by over-population, was duly put into effect, nine countries contributing. The Fund has so far granted loans totalling over $50 million. M. Schneider is now engaged on improving the material, legal and psychological situation of migrant workers and is preparing a European Convention on the Legal Status of Migrant Workers as well as many other recommendations to governments on the following questions: school education of migrant workers' children; safety at work for migrant workers; methods used for compiling migration statistics; reunion of the family; equality of treatment as between national and migrant workers; equivalence of professional diploma for car repairing technicians.

The First European Population Conference was held in 1966 and a second took place at Strasbourg in September 1971. The twelve resolutions of the latter deal mainly with economic and social problems caused by changes in European population structures.

Annual programmes of vocational training grants for student-instructors, unskilled workers and instructor trainees have been in operation since 1964.

LEGAL CO-OPERATION

The importance of this branch of the Council's activities was acknowledged by the creation in 1963 of a European Committee on Legal Co-operation, grouping delegations from all member states and from the Assembly. This committee has general responsibility for the preparation and implementation of the Council's inter-governmental activities in the legal field. It normally meets twice a year. Most of the specialized committees of legal experts work under its direction.

In addition, the Ministers of Justice of member states of the Council of Europe meet from time to time for the purpose of stimulating co-operation in the legal field. The Sixth Conference of Ministers of Justice took place in March 1970 in The Hague and the Seventh Conference in Basle in May 1972. The Eighth Conference was held in Stockholm in May 1973.

Among the more important legal conventions concluded within the framework of the Council of Europe are those on Establishment, the Peaceful Settlement of Disputes, Patents (application, classification, unification of substantive law), Extradition, Commercial Arbitration, Compulsory Motor Insurance, "Pirate" Broadcasts, Information on Foreign Law, Multiple Nationality, Foreign Money Liabilities, Liability of Hotelkeepers, Consular Functions and Bearer Securities. A European Convention on State Immunity is in the final stages of preparation.

PENAL LAW AND CRIMINOLOGY

The European Committee on Crime Problems is the main body of the Council of Europe working on penal law, penology and criminology. It is assisted by a Criminological Scientific Council composed of specialists in law, psychology, sociology and related sciences. It organizes every year a conference of Directors of Criminological Research Institutes.

The activities of the European Committee on Crime Problems have in recent years resulted in Conventions on Extradition, on Mutual Assistance in Criminal Matters, on the Punishment of Road Traffic Offences, on the Supervision of Conditionally Sentenced and Conditionally Released Offenders, on Repatriation of Minors and the International Validity of Criminal Judgments. Several Resolutions arising out of the work of the European Committee on Crime Problems have been adopted by the Committee of Ministers and concern the Mass Media and the Protection of Young People, the Status, Selection and Training of Prison Staff, the Setting-up of a simplified Procedure to Deal with Minor Road Traffic Offences, Measures for the Supervision and After-Care of Conditionally Sentenced or Conditionally Released Offenders and Hidden Criminality.

Various studies in penal law, penology and criminology are at present being carried out by thirty Expert Committees.

EDUCATION AND CULTURE

The Council for Cultural Co-operation was founded in 1962 to draw up proposals for the cultural policy of the Council of Europe and to allocate the resources of the Cultural Fund, which finances the cultural programme of the Organization. It is assisted by three Permanent Committees: Higher Education and Research, General and Technical Education and Out-of- School Education and Cultural Development. All member states of the Council of Europe are represented on these bodies, together with Finland, Greece, Spain and the Holy See.

The educational and cultural programme is based on two main concepts: permanent education and cultural development. As regards education, which represents some 80 per cent of the programme, there are four sectors: a general sector (covering problems common to education as a whole) and three sectors corresponding to the traditional branches of the educational systems. The Eighth Conference of the European Ministers of Education was held in Berne in 1973; the main topic was "Education for the 16 to 19 age group".

Moreover, an intensified programme in the field of modern languages, covering all three branches of education, was actively pursued, with the aim of improving and accelerating language teaching throughout Europe. The results were assessed in 1973. On the basis of this a new programme of action will be prepared in 1974.

Great attention is paid in all three branches of education to the present and future applications of modern media ranging from films and closed-circuit television to multi-media systems and satellites.

Education-General: Steering groups have been set up to supervise the work on permanent education, which is henceforth to be devoted to pilot experiments, on educational technology, which centres upon distant teaching systems and their implications for the reform of contents and methods, on educational documentation, with particular reference to the Eudised project (thesaurus and computerisation) and on educational research, which is aiming towards co-operative research between member states.

Higher Education and Research: The work is centred on reform and development, on the harmonization of interests concerned with planning and administration, on the mobility of students, staff and research workers, on the equivalence of qualifications and on research co-operation. It is carried out in close co-operation with university authorities who are represented with governments on the Committee.

General and Technical Education: Inter-governmental co-operation in tackling educational problems common to European countries began with an emphasis on comparative studies (history, geography, civic education, school guidance, teacher training, etc.), as well as with the assembly of basic material on school systems. The emphasis is now placed on obtaining guidelines for the development of key sectors of the educational system, such as: technical and vocational education, the further training of teachers, examinations and continuous assessment, pre-school and primary education, the sixteen to nineteen age group. There is also a long-standing project for co-production of educational films for schools.

Out-of-School Education: In adult education the problems of the organization and content of this branch of education within a system of permanent education and questions of new technologies of out-of-school education are prominent. Particular attention is being paid to the provision of a learner-centred education, to the application of new technologies and to the training of adult educators.

Cultural Development: In the field of cultural development a new series of projects is under way, designed to provide the quantitative and qualitative data to enable governments and local authorities to redefine their policies with regard to determination of the needs of the population, choice of facilities, management and investments. Action is also being taken to ensure the promotion of greater aesthetic, social and scientific awareness among individuals. Moreover, a long-term programme is carried out on the theme of "Sport for All". Its aim is to promote sport as an instrument for the fitness and sociocultural development of the largest possible number. Research into youth problems is also promoted. A number of traditional projects are being continued including European Art Exhibitions which demonstrate the interdependence of national cultures and the Cultural Identity Card which offers special facilities to research workers.

Youth: In May 1972 the European Youth Centre moved into premises specially designed and built for it in Strasbourg. Its aim is to enable young people to supplement their knowledge of European problems and participate more fully in European developments. In the same year the Committee adopted a resolution setting up a European Youth Foundation, the Statute of which was also adopted. Its main purpose is to help youth organizations to finance activities of European interest. It became operational in 1973.

Documentation and Publications: A Documentation Centre for Education in Europe was established in 1964. In 1967 it was linked with a new service for information on educational research. The main educational publications of the Council for Cultural Co-operation are published in the series Education in Europe. Other works of a more technical character are also produced. Three periodicals Education and Culture, Newsletter and Bulletin of the Documentation Centre for Education in Europe are available to specialists free of charge.

ENVIRONMENTAL QUESTIONS

The European Committee for the Conservation of Nature and Natural Resources (created in 1962) advises the Committee of Ministers on environmental questions. It prepares policy recommendations and promotes European co-operation in this field. Twelve Diplomas have been awarded to protected landscapes, reserves and natural features of European interest. A European Water Charter was made public in Strasbourg in May 1968 when a European Information

THE COUNCIL OF EUROPE

Campaign on Water Problems was launched. 1970 was proclaimed Nature Conservation Year by the Committee of Ministers. A European Conservation Conference was held in Strasbourg in February 1970. This Conference ended with the adoption of a Declaration on the management of the natural environment of Europe. The recommendations contained in this declaration have begun to be put into effect (creation of Ministries of Environment, management of marginal lands, etc.). One of the most important recommendations concerned the convocation of a Ministerial Conference on the Environment, which was held in March 1973 in Vienna.

For the European Information Centre for Nature Conservation, created in 1967, the year 1971 was a particularly active year. Its illustrated review, Nature in Focus, is published quarterly in English and French, and an information sheet, Newsletter, appears monthly in seven languages.

A Committee of Experts on Air Pollution was created in 1966 with tasks similar to those of the above-mentioned Committee. A Declaration of Principles of Air Pollution Control, prepared by this Committee, was approved by the Committee of Ministers in 1968.

The European Committee for the Conservation of Nature and Natural Resources has elaborated a new medium-term work programme, which is being studied by the Committee of Ministers.

LOCAL AUTHORITIES AND REGIONAL PLANNING

The Council of Europe provides a particularly appropriate framework for European co-operation in local authorities and regional planning questions. The Council entered this field in 1952 with the formation of a Committee on Local and Regional Affairs within the Consultative Assembly, followed in 1955 by the creation of the European Conference of Local Authorities, as a common forum for elected representatives of local and regional government from member states. The Conference held its ninth Plenary Session in Strasbourg from September 25th to 29th on the theme of "the participation by citizens, local authorities and regions in the regional planning of Europe." The protection of the environment has always been a main preoccupation of the Conference.

In 1967 the Committee on Co-operation in Municipal and Regional Matters was set up to enable senior officials from Ministries responsible for local government affairs and/or leading local government figures in the member states to meet.

At the same time, in response to recommendations by the European Conference of Local Authorities and the Consultative Assembly, the Council began to study regional planning problems and in 1970 called together the first European Conference of Ministers responsible for Regional Planning. The Consultative Assembly's Committee altered its name in 1968 to the "Committee on Regional Planning and Local Authorities". The objectives are many and varied. Firstly, the intention is to provide, through the European Conference of Local Authorities, for the participation of local and regional administrators in European co-operation.

Through the Committee on Co-operation in Municipal and Regional Matters machinery exists to establish co-operation between governments in local government questions, with a view to enabling national governments to exchange experience and ensure, as far as is possible and necessary, that the various national structures and legislations develop in harmony. Amongst the activities of this Committee are those aimed at the strengthening of the structures of local and regional government and their adaptation to the requirements of modern society and European unification.

The European Conference of Ministers responsible for Regional Planning has set itself the task of laying the foundations of a European regional planning policy, with a view to ensuring a more balanced use of the European territory and the harmonious development of its various regions.

At their first Conference, in Bonn, September 1970, the Ministers responsible for regional planning in the states represented agreed to co-operate in the following fields: institution between the participating countries of a standing exchange of information on policy legislation, experience and current developments in the field of regional planning; co-operation in the field of long-range forecasting and establishment of regular co-operation between public research institutes concerned with regional planning; co-ordination in time and space of plans and measures relating to regional planning in frontier areas; meetings and discussions between officials and research workers in the field of regional planning, in order to harmonize and improve their training and familiarize them with the policies and techniques in use in other European states; harmonization of terminology, statistics and cartographical methods.

The second Conference was held at La Grande Motte (France) in September 1973.

MONUMENTS AND SITES

Following a series of five symposia organised by the Council for Cultural Co-operation of the Council of Europe between 1965 and 1968 on specific aspects and taking account of the resolutions of the European Conference of Ministers Responsible for the Preservation and Rehabilitation of the Cultural Heritage of Monuments and Sites, Brussels, in November 1969, the Committee of Ministers of the Council of Europe decided to create a Committee on Monuments and Sites for a period of five years.

The Committee on Monuments and Sites has three aims: (1) to promote, at European and national level, close co-operation between public authorities responsible for historic buildings and those responsible for town and country planning, thus ensuring the integration of conservation measures in the activities of national and regional planners; (2) to awaken the interest of European peoples in the cultural, social and economic value of their common architectural heritage, with the help of local authorities, non-governmental organizations, press and television, and youth and educational organizations; (3) to provide technical assistance to those national and local public authorities which request it.

In 1973 the Committee launched a vast campaign which will culminate in 1975 in the European Architectural Heritage Year, based on the slogan "A Future for our Past".

CONVENTIONS AND AGREEMENTS

In an effort to harmonize national laws, to put the citizens of member countries on an equal footing and to pool certain resources and facilities, the Council has concluded a large number of treaties covering particular aspects of European co-operation:

Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms.

European Convention on Social and Medical Assistance.

EXTERNAL RELATIONS

Agreements providing for co-operation and exchange of documents and observers have been concluded with the United Nations and its Agencies, and with most of the European inter-governmental organizations. Particularly close relations exist with the European Communities, OECD, EFTA and Western European Union. Members of the European Parliament hold an annual joint meeting with members of the Consultative Assembly.

Israel is represented in the Consultative Assembly by observers, and certain European non-member countries have been invited to participate in or send observers to certain meetings of technical committees and specialized conferences.

Relations with non-member states, other organizations and non-governmental organizations are co-ordinated within the Secretariat by the Directorate of Political Affairs inside which an external relations division was established in 1972.

SUMMARY OF STATUTE

The Statute of the Council of Europe was signed in London on May 5th, 1949. It defines the aim of the Council, the conditions of membership and the composition and tasks of its institutions. (For an account of the latter, see the section on Organization above.)

The aim of the Council of Europe is stated by the Statute to be the achievement of "a greater unity between its members for the purpose of safeguarding and realizing the ideals and principles which are their common heritage and facilitating their economic and social progress". Collaboration with the United Nations and other international organizations are not to be affected by membership of the Council.

Every member state must "accept the principles of the rule of law and of the enjoyment by all persons within its jurisdiction of human rights and fundamental freedoms, and collaborate sincerely and effectively in the realization of the aims of the Council". It is further laid down that "any European state deemed able and willing to fulfil these provisions may be invited by the Committee of Ministers to become a member of the Council". This has later been modified by the Committee of Ministers, who now undertake to consult the Assembly before issuing an invitation to join.

DANUBE COMMISSION

Benczúr utca 25, Budapest, Hungary

Telephone: 228-085.

The Danube Commission Convention was signed in Belgrade in 1948. The Commission ensures the preconditions and requirements of shipping on the Danube.

MEMBERS

Austria
Bulgaria

Czechoslovakia
Hungary
Romania

U.S.S.R.
Yugoslavia

ORGANIZATION

THE ANNUAL SESSION

President: IOAN COTOI (Romania).

Vice-President: STOIO STANOEV (Bulgaria).

Secretary: VLADIMIR I. PAVLOV (U.S.S.R.).

Sessions are held once a year. A Session may adopt a resolution by a simple majority with a quorum of five, but important decisions require the attendance of the full Session. The President, Vice-President and Secretary are elected for three years by a simple majority. The Session appoints Expert Groups, if necessary, which meet between Sessions.

SECRETARIAT AND SERVICES

The Secretariat is composed of the Technical Section, the Administrative Section and the Accounts Department. These sections deal with nautical, hydrotechnical, hydro-meteorological, statistical and legal matters as well as with correspondence, publications, administration and accounting matters. Staff is drawn from all the member countries.

Director: Dr. GYÖRGY FEKETE (Hungary).

Assistant Directors (Secretariat): ALEKSANDAR NOVAKOVIC (Yugoslavia), GHEORGHE SECARIN (Romania).

ACTIVITIES

General Plan of Works. Based on proposals of the Danubian States and the special river administrations. The Commission assesses total expenditure for any large plans.

Uniform Navigational System. Shipping rules have been unified and Basic Regulations for Navigation on the Danube have been adopted.

Manuals for River Users. Publications include pilots' charts covering most of the Danube, sailing directions, mileage charts and lists of temporary winter quarters.

Co-ordination in Hydro-Meteorological Services. Liaison has been improved for the provision of hydro-meteorological information and water-level forecasts. Assessing water-levels is carried out by a uniform method. The Commission works out statistical surveys noting the appearance of sandbanks, and classifies the results. A similar analysis is being made of glacial activity.

Hydrotechnical Services. Minimum dimensions of locks and bridges and the minimum heights of high-tension cables and telephone lines have been measured and recorded in albums.

Customs, Sanitary, Veterinary and Phytosanitary Regulations. The Commission has made recommendations to member states for the purpose of unification of the respective rules.

Legal Problems. The Secretariat of the Commission studies the most important legal questions connected with shipping on the Danube and submits its proposals to the Commission.

International Co-operation. The Commission works closely with many international bodies, including the UN Economic Commission for Europe, the World Meteorological Organization, ITU, WHO, PIANC, CCNR, COMECON, UNIDROIT, etc.

BUDGET

1973: 6,137,300 forints.

Member countries pay an equal annual contribution to the costs of the Commission.

EAST AFRICAN COMMUNITY

Established December 1967, the Community provides an institutional and legal framework to strengthen the Common Market between Kenya, Tanzania and Uganda and has absorbed the common services and research activities formerly controlled by the East African Common Services Organization.

MEMBERS

Kenya

Tanzania

Uganda

Zambia, Ethiopia, Somalia and Burundi have made formal application to join the Community.

HISTORY

The foundations of regional integration in east Africa were laid under British colonial rule. A customs union between Kenya and Uganda had been established in 1917, into which Tanganyika was drawn in successive stages. An East African Common Market was established in the 1920s, giving Kenya, Uganda and Tanganyika a common external tariff, designed to protect European-dominated highland agriculture in Kenya and the new industries in Nairobi and Mombasa. The East African Currency Board was established in 1917 and a common currency was in use in east Africa from that date until 1966, when the three countries set up their own central banks and issued national currencies.

In 1948 the East African High Commission, headed by the governors of the three territories, was set up to operate joint services in the fields of transport and communications, administration, research and education. In addition to the common external tariff, there were common monetary, banking and financial systems. These joint operations encouraged a sharp increase in trade within the region.

After independence the High Commission was replaced in 1961 by the East African Common Services Organization under the three Heads of State. Integrated activities were continued, and several joint ministerial committees were created.

There were no provisions for integrated economic planning or for harmonization of taxation and monetary policy, and the arrangements were increasingly threatened by the separate policies pursued by the three countries. The benefits derived from the union appeared to be largely in Kenya's favour, while Tanzania was the net loser. Industries, as well as the administrative headquarters of common services, tended to be concentrated in Kenya. Tanzania pressed for reforms of the economic institutions, and in 1964 the Kampala Agreement was signed, providing for the relocation of certain industries and joint measures to protect new industries in Uganda and Tanzania from Kenyan competition. However, the Agreement was badly implemented and led to bitter disputes between the member countries. In 1965 the EASCO was in danger of breaking up, and a Commission on East Africa was set up, composed of three senior ministers from each state, and chaired by a UN official, Professor Kjeld Philip. The Commission presented its report to the three governments in May 1966. On the basis of its recommendations, a Treaty for East African Economic Co-operation was drawn up and signed, coming into effect in December 1967.

The Treaty takes into account the need for planned development policies, a better framework for close co-ordination and more equitable allocation of gains and growth opportunities. Under the terms of the Treaty administrative offices have been relocated so that they are more equally divided between the member States, and the East African Development Bank has been established. The East African Common Market is given a legal basis as an integral part of the East African Community, established by the Treaty.

Accession of new members is provided for. In 1968 negotiations were opened between the East African Community and Zambia, Ethiopia, Somalia and Burundi, who had all applied to join the Community.

In October 1965 the UN Economic Commission for Africa sponsored a conference at Lusaka, at which the idea of an Economic Community of Eastern Africa was launched. This would embrace the East African Community, Zambia, Ethiopia and Burundi, and possibly Somalia, Malawi and Rwanda. A draft treaty was initialled at a conference of ministers in Addis Ababa in May 1966, and a Provisional Council created.

Negotiations between the European Economic Community and Kenya, Uganda and Tanzania were opened in 1965. In July 1968 an Association Agreement was signed at Arusha by the EEC and the members of the East African Community, but never came into force. A new Arusha Agreement was signed in September 1969 and will expire on January 31st 1975.

ORGANIZATION

EAST AFRICAN AUTHORITY

Responsible for the general direction and control over the executive functions of the Community. Composed of the Presidents of Kenya, Tanzania and Uganda. Three East African Ministers assist the Authority in the exercise of its executive functions and advise it generally on the affairs of the Community. The East African Ministers have no national responsibilities but are able to attend and speak at meetings of the Cabinet of the country by which they were nominated.

East African Ministers: AL NOOR KASSUM, WILLIAM RWETSIBA, DR. ROBERT OUKO.

EAST AFRICAN LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY

Replaces the Central Legislative Assembly. Legislates on services provided by the Community.

Members: nine from each state, the three East African Ministers and Deputy Ministers, Secretary-General, Counsel to the Community, and a Chairman.

COMMON MARKET COUNCIL

Main organ for the supervision of the functioning and development of the Common Market; keeps its operation under review; settles problems and disputes arising from the implementation of the Treaty concerning the Common Market; considers methods of creating closer economic and commercial links with other States, associations of States and international organizations.

Members: the three East African Ministers, three National Ministers from each country.

OTHER COUNCILS

The following four Councils have also been established as consultative organs to advise Member States and the Community on planning and the co-ordination of policies; each is composed of the three East African Ministers and a varying number of national Ministers from each country:

Communications Council

Economic Consultative and Planning Council

Finance Council

Research and Social Council

COMMON MARKET TRIBUNAL

Composed of a Judicial Chairman, three members (one from each country) and a fourth chosen by the other three, plus the Chairman. Only member states are permitted to refer disputes to the Tribunal, although the Common Market Council may seek advisory opinions. Decisions, which are binding on member states, are reached by a majority vote.

Chairman: Prof. ELIHU LAUTERPACHT.

Members: Prof. PHILIP L. U. CROSS, JUSTICE SAMUEL W. NAMBUZI, ROBERT WILSON, (one place vacant).

Registrar: MAGANLAL D. DESAI.

CENTRAL SECRETARIAT

Arusha, Tanzania

Composed of the three Secretariats (Ministries): Finance and Administration (Deputy Minister: S. K. DE LEKN), Common Market and Economic Affairs (Deputy Minister: S. MUNABI), Communications, Research and Social Services (Deputy Minister: S. B. TAMBWE); Office of the Secretary-General, The Chambers of the Counsel to the Community and the Community Service Commission.

The Secretariat co-ordinates the work of the five Councils and is responsible for execution of the Councils' decisions. The Common Market and Economic Affairs Secretariat of the Central Secretariat is also charged with co-ordinating the implementation of the Association Agreement signed in September 1969 at Arusha, between the East African Community and the European Economic Community.

Secretary-General: CHARLES GATERE MAINA.

Counsel to the Community: PAULO SEBALU.

COURT OF APPEAL FOR EAST AFRICA

P.O.B. 30187, Nairobi

Permanent Members:

President: Mr. Justice W. A. H. DUFFUS.

Vice-President: Mr. Justice J. F. SPRY.

Justices of Appeal: E. J. E. LAW, B. C. W. LUTTA, A. MUSTAFA.

Registrar: T. T. M. ASWANI.

This Court, which was established in 1951, hears appeals from the Courts of Tanzania (except Zanzibar island, where it has no jurisdiction), Uganda and Kenya.

EAST AFRICAN COMMUNITY

EAST AFRICAN DEVELOPMENT BANK

Kampala, Uganda

Established in 1967, the Bank's aims are as follows:

To provide financial and technical assistance to promote the industrial development of the member states; priority is given to industrial development in the relatively less developed countries and about 77 per cent of ordinary and special funds are to be invested in Tanzania and Uganda over consecutive five-year periods.

To further the aims of the East African Community by financing, wherever possible, projects designed to make the economies of the member states increasingly complementary in the industrial field.

To co-operate with national development agencies in the three countries in financing operations, and also with other institutions, both national and international, that are interested in the industrial development of member states.

The Bank's members are the three governments together with such other non-governmental bodies, enterprises and institutions whose membership is approved by the governments. Total initial subscriptions by the governments totals Sh. 120 million and the total authorized capital is Sh. 400 million. The Bank is administered by a Board of Directors appointed by the members.

Director-General and Chairman: IDDI SIMBA.

Directors: P. NDEGWA, S. K. MUKASA, E. P. MWALUKO.

COMMUNITY CORPORATIONS

The four Community Corporations are self-accounting, statutory bodies. The Railways, Harbours, and Posts and Telecommunications Corporations are each controlled by a Board of Directors consisting of a Chairman, three members (one from each member state) appointed by the East African Authority, and a Director-General. Board of Directors of the Airways Corporation is composed of a Chairman, Director-General, two members appointed by the Authority and two by each member state.

East African Railways Corporation: P.O.B. 30121, Nairobi; regional headquarters in each State; took over in 1969 the internal transport functions exercised by the East African Railways and Harbours; Director-General Dr. E. NJUGUNA GAKUO.

East African Harbours Corporation: Dar es Salaam, Tanzania; takes over the harbours functions formerly exercised by the East African Railways and Harbours; Director-General E. N. BISAMUNYU.

East African Posts and Telecommunications Corporation: P.O.B. 7106, Kampala; formerly the East African Posts and Telecommunications Administration. The service has been self-contained and self-financing since January 1949; there are regional headquarters in each partner state; Director-General J. KETO.

East African Airways Corporation: Headquarters: Sadler House, Koinange St., P.O.B. 41010, Nairobi, Kenya; Uganda Regional Office: P.O.B. 523, Kampala; Tanzania Regional Office: Airways Terminal, Tancot House, P.O.B. 543, Dar es Salaam; operates extensive services throughout Kenya, Tanzania and Uganda; also regular scheduled services to Europe, the United Kingdom, Pakistan, India, Zambia, Rwanda, Burundi, Aden, Madagascar, Mauritius, Ethiopia and Somalia; Director-General G. SUMMARY OF TREATY FOR EAST AFRICAN CO-OPERATION

Signed at Kampala, Uganda, on June 6th, 1967, by the Presidents of Kenya, Tanzania and Uganda.

PREAMBLE

Refers among other points to the fact that Tanzania, Uganda and Kenya have enjoyed close commercial, industrial and other ties for many years, and to the determination of the three Partner States to strengthen these ties and their common services, by the establishment of an East African Community, and a Common Market as an integral part of the Community.

CHAPTER 1

(Articles 1-4)

Aims and Institutions

General undertaking included that the three countries shall make every effort to plan and direct their policies with a view to creating conditions favourable for the development of the Common Market and the achievement of the aims of the Community.

CHAPTER 2

(Articles 5-8)

External Trade

Three countries to maintain a Common External Tariff.

Three countries will not enter into agreements whereby tariff concessions negotiated with any country outside the Community are not available to all three countries.

Three countries will take effective measures to counteract any deviation of trade, resulting from barter agreements, away from goods produced in East Africa to goods produced outside the Common Market.

CHAPTER 3

(Articles 9-16)

Inter-Territorial Trade

Guarantees freedom of transit across one State of goods destined for another country, subject to the normal customs and other rules.

Customs duty collected on goods imported into one of the three countries, but in transit to another, shall go to the second country.

Prohibits internal tariffs (except for the transfer tax; see below), and quantitative import restrictions upon goods produced in East Africa. Exceptions made in respect of goods covered by certain special obligations, certain agricultural goods, and for restrictions imposed for certain defined reasons (e.g. control of arms and munitions) or in defined circumstances (e.g. balance of payments difficulties).

One country must not engage in discriminatory practices against goods from either or both of the other countries.

CHAPTER 4

(Articles 17-18)

Excise Tariffs

Removal of present differences in the excise tariff which the Common Market Council determines to be undesirable in the interests of the Common Market, and establishment of a generally common excise tariff.

Excise duty collected on goods produced in one country, but transferred to another country, to be transferred to the second country.

CHAPTER 5

(Articles 19-21)

Measure to Promote Balanced Industrial Development

1. Harmonization of fiscal incentives offered by each country towards industrial development.

2. The Transfer Tax System:

The Transfer Tax: States which are in deficit in their total trade in manufactured goods with the other two States may impose transfer taxes upon such goods originating from the other two countries, up to a value of goods equivalent in each case to its deficit with that country. A transfer tax can only be imposed if goods of a similar description to those taxed are being manufactured, or are reasonably expected to be manufactured within three months, in the tax-imposing country. The industry to be protected by the tax must have a productive capacity equivalent to at least 15 per cent of the total domestic consumption of such products in the tax-imposing country or to a value of 2 million shillings E.A., whichever is the less.

Rate of Transfer Tax: limited to 50 per cent of the equivalent external customs tariff imposed on such goods coming from outside East Africa.

Collection: Customs and Excise Department of East Africa responsible for collection, administration and management of all transfer taxes; costs to be borne by the country or countries which imposed transfer taxes.

Limitations: No transfer tax can be imposed for longer than eight years, and all such taxes are to be revoked fifteen years after the Treaty comes into force. There will be an examination of the effectiveness of the system five years after the first tax is imposed. If a significant deviation of trade takes place to goods produced outside the Common Market, as a result of the imposition of transfer taxes, measures shall be taken to counteract such a deviation. If a tax-protected industry is able to export 30 per cent of its annual production to the other two countries, the transfer tax must be revoked, and if its exports to all countries reach 30 per cent, the situation can be considered by the Common Market Council. A country which comes into 80 per cent balance in its total trade in manufactured goods inside East Africa loses the right to impose new transfer taxes, although existing taxes will continue in force.

Anti-Dumping Provisions: Prohibit the transfer of manufactured goods at a price lower than their true value, in such a way as to prejudice the production of similar goods in each Partner State, and prohibit export subsidies for such goods (other than tax incentives and refunds of a general and non-discriminatory kind).

3. Establishment of the East African Development Bank (see above).

EAST AFRICAN COMMUNITY

CHAPTER 6

(Article 23)

Industrial Licences

Present system of industrial licensing shall continue, in respect of articles now scheduled, until twenty years have expired since the commencement of the original legislation.

CHAPTER 7

(Articles 24-28)

Currency and Banking

Exchange of currency notes of the three countries (but not coin) at official par value without exchange commission and without undue delay (subject to exchange control laws and regulations not in conflict with the Treaty).

Bona Fide current account payments between the three countries permitted; all necessary permissions and authorities to be given without undue delay.

Controls may be exercised on capital payments and transfers under certain conditions. Monetary policies to be harmonized; meetings of the three Central Bank Governors to be held at least four times a year.

Reciprocal credits may be given by one Partner State to help another which is in need of balance of payments assistance, up to defined limits and for a period of not more than three years.

CHAPTER 8

(Article 29)

Other Fields of Co-operation

Harmonization of commercial laws in each State; co-ordination of surface transport policies.

CHAPTER 9

(Articles 30-31)

Common Market Council

(See above: Organization)

CHAPTER 10

(Articles 32-42)

Common Market Tribunal

(See above: Organization)

CHAPTER 11

(Articles 43-45)

Functions of the Community

The Community will operate the services formerly controlled by the East African Common Services Organization (EACSO); also to perform services on an agency basis, as agreed by the Authority, and pass laws on certain matters.

CHAPTER 12

(Articles 46-48)

East African Authority

CHAPTER 13

(Articles 49-51)

East African Ministers

(See above: Organization)

CHAPTER 14

(Article 52)

Deputy East African Ministers

Allows the Authority, if at any time it considers it desirable, to appoint three Deputy East African Ministers to assist the Ministers.

CHAPTER 15

(Articles 53-55)

Five Councils

Establishes the following Councils: Common Market Council, Communications Council, Economic Consultative and Planning Council, Finance Council, Research and Social Council (see above: Organization).

CHAPTER 16

(Articles 56-60)

East African Legislative Assembly

(See above: Organization)

CHAPTER 17

(Articles 61-64)

Staff

Provides for the senior staff of the Community, including a Secretary General and a Counsel to the Community, and for the establishment of a Community Service Commission, which will have no responsibilities in relation to staff of the new Corporations.

CHAPTER 18

(Articles 65-70)

Finance

Creation of a General Fund and special funds, and the authorization of Community expenditure.

General Fund: to be financed by customs and excise revenue and the tax on gains or profits of companies engaged in manufacturing or finance.

Distributable Pool Fund: had been operated under the East African Common Services Organization (EACSO) to maintain those common services which are not self-supporting; the remainder of the Pool was distributed to Uganda and Tanzania. The Fund is to be retained, but to be distributed equally to the three countries. It is to cease altogether after the Partner States have paid the second instalment of their full initial subscriptions to the paid-in capital of the Development Bank.

CHAPTER 19

(Articles 71-79)

Four Corporations within the Community

(See above: Community Corporations)

CHAPTER 20

(Articles 80-81)

Court of Appeal for East Africa

Court of Appeal for Eastern Africa to continue as Court of Appeal for East Africa.

EAST AFRICAN COMMUNITY

CHAPTER 22 (Articles 83-86)

Decentralization

Location of headquarters and the new East African Tax Board.

CHAPTER 23 (Article 87)

Auditor-General

Provides for audit and the functions of the Community Auditor-General.

CHAPTER 24 (Article 88)

Transitional Provisions

CHAPTER 25 (Articles 89-96)

General Provisions

Treaty to come into force on 1st December 1967; parts of Treaty dealing with Common Market to remain in force for fifteen years and then to be reviewed; other countries may negotiate for association with the Community or for participation in its activities; modification of the Treaty by common agreement; implementation measures by way of national legislation in the three countries; abrogation of the EACSO Agreements and past agreements on the Common Market.

ACTIVITIES

General: EBU membership in 1973 consisted of 98 Active and Associate Members in 71 countries. Active membership is strictly limited to the European Broadcasting Area, as defined by the International Telecommunication Union, and Associate Members are drawn mainly from countries outside the Area. The EBU, which includes the Eurovision news and programme exchange, is defined in its Statutes as an association of organizations which operate broadcasting services. The Union is non-commercial, non-governmental and non-political. The main objectives are:

- (a) to support in every domain the interests of member broadcasting organizations and to establish relations with other broadcasting organizations or groups of organizations;

- (b) to promote and co-ordinate the study of all questions relating to broadcasting, and to ensure the exchange of information on all matters of general interest to broadcasting services;
- (c) to promote and take all measures designed to assist the development of broadcasting in all its forms;
- (d) to seek the solution, by means of international co-operation, of any differences that may arise;
- (e) to use its best endeavours to ensure that all its Members respect the provisions of international agreements relating to all aspects of broadcasting.

EUROPEAN BROADCASTING UNION

The EBU was honoured for its Eurovision activities in 1973 with the first ever Annual Directorate Award of the International Council of the National Academy of Television Arts and Sciences of the United States of America. The Award was "for outstanding achievement in the arts and sciences or management of television so extraordinary as to give added lustre to the medium as an instrument of international communications and understanding".

The Second World Conference of Broadcasting Organizations took place in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, from November 2nd-8th, 1973, at the invitation of the Associação Inter-americana de Radiodifusão and Associação Brasileira de Emissoras de Rádio e Televisão. The Conference was a follow-up to the International Conference of Broadcasting Unions on Communication Satellites organized in Rome, Italy, by the EBU in March 1972. This time the subjects discussed included not only communication satellites but also staff training, the problems of educational radio and television and programme exchanges.

Legal: Across the differences in laws and customs, broadcasters have common interests which bring them together to study the best ways of defending these interests. The essential task of the EBU Legal Committee is to follow very closely the establishment and revision of international conventions dealing with the rights that those who collaborate in or provide services for programmes can claim, or the rights that broadcasting organizations themselves can claim for their programmes. The Legal Committee is now giving close attention to all the problems raised by the growth of cable television and also the cable distribution of radio programmes. These are important questions that will certainly have an influence in the near future on the policy of broadcasting organizations with regard to programmes. Already the Legal Committee has drafted several model contracts between the distributor and the television broadcaster whose programmes are distributed.

Negotiations were satisfactorily concluded during the course of 1973 between the EBU and the International Federations of Performers for renewal of the Agreement concerning international television relays. The protracted negotiations ended in a consensus for renewal for a further two years from January 1st, 1974, subject to certain changes which are designed to bring out more clearly that the agreement is based on the fundamental principle of supplements and not all-in remuneration.

Technical: In the technical field the activities to which the EBU attaches the greatest importance are those that require collaboration between Members in order to decide upon a common course of action or point of view. Such activities are in some cases of a practical nature, such as the technical planning and supervision of international television transmissions, while in others they relate to matters of principle, which may determine for many years future trends in broadcasting practice; these include problems posed by the introduction of new techniques, studies leading to international standardization and research work of a nature which cannot readily be undertaken except by a combined effort. The technical activities of the EBU are divided into three main categories: operations, research and development and publications.

Radio Programmes: As the EBU Radio Programme Committee has matured since its creation in 1964, so its work has tended to concentrate less on physical programme exchange and more on the type of service which, due to its activities, can be rendered to member organizations. Examples include the mutual exchange of musical materials, the publication and sale of musical materials, etc., but the Committee is equally active in collecting information from Members on trends, patterns, innovations, experiments and all manner of progress and development in radio programming. Regular analyses of this information are made and distributed to all organizations. In the field of programme exchanges, music of all types is the principal concern, including the EBU Concert Seasons, which are broadcast live simultaneously by the many countries taking part; other musical activities include the commemoration of anniversaries of great composers. The EBU Radio Programme Committee also concerns itself with radio drama, education by radio, the exchange of historical and interesting sound archive material, international sporting events and co-operation with other international bodies.

A major event in 1973 was a special stereophonic radio production of Darius Milhaud's immense opera Christophe Colomb which was the most expensive joint radio undertaking of its kind in the history of broadcasting. Fourteen EBU members co-financed the production which was undertaken in Brussels by Radiodiffusion Télévision Belge.

Live stereophonic international relays were also achieved in many parts of Western Europe during the year. The first concert of the EBU's International Concert Seasons from Vienna, Austria, on September 24th, was transmitted live in stereo and relayed as such by the broadcasting organizations of eight European countries.

Television Programmes: The Television Programme Committee studies all aspects of international television programme co-operation, in particular: the organization of multilateral programme exchanges and news transmissions which include the multilateral transmissions over the Eurovision Permanent Network, and intercontinental transmissions via satellites; exchanges of recorded television programmes and films, including agricultural and educational programmes; the setting up of joint productions; the organization of screening sessions and the running of staff training courses. The EBU does not itself produce programmes but is a system for the planning and co-ordination of programmes produced and, in principle, financed by individual broadcasting organizations (except in the case of EBU contracts) and offered to Members on a multilateral basis.

The 11th EBU Screening Sessions took place as usual in Milan in October and for the first time there was experimental screening of programmes recorded on video-cassettes which gave promising results. The compatibility of the Philips VCR machines over more than 34 hours of viewing time proved satisfactory.

Eurovision: The most important event concerning Eurovision in 1973 was a unanimous decision by the EBU's General Assembly which assured the future financial basis. The new proposal followed over two years' detailed examination of the problem of the expense of Eurovision operations in the future with the prospect of more high-cost long distance circuits being introduced to connect new small members situated on the periphery of the European Broadcasting Area. One of the first countries to benefit from the Assembly's decision was Turkey, which now participates in Eurovision transmissions on a regular basis. Twenty-nine television services in 25 countries of the European Broadcasting Area are currently receiving the full Eurovision News Exchange on a daily basis.

A daily news exchange with the member countries of the Cairo-based Arab States Broadcasting Union came into operation officially in January 1974. As a result of administrative arrangements which had already been made during 1973, television viewers were able to watch the Arab/Israeli War almost as it was happening through daily satellite link-ups between Europe and the Middle East.

There are currently two daily news exchanges over the Eurovision Network and it is planned to introduce a third at mid-day in 1974 but this will depend substantially on the successful negotiation of a new bulk satellite tariff to convey material from the North American continent to Europe.

As regards programmes, the highlight of the year was the marriage of Britain's Princess Anne and Captain Mark Phillips at Westminster Abbey, London. About 600 million television viewers are thought to have seen the ceremony either over the Eurovision Network or by satellite hook-ups.

Singers representing the broadcasting organizations of 17 countries competed in the 1973 Eurovision Song Contest held in Luxembourg on April 7th. The Israel Broadcasting Authority had an entry for the first time and the transmission was seen live in that country via satellite. Turkey also saw the contest for the first time, via the Eurovision Network. Luxembourg was the winner for the second year running.

In 1972 (last complete statistical year), 709 programmes (662 in 1971) of a duration of 1,139 hours (993½ in 1971) were transmitted on the Eurovision Network and received by an average of 10.4 television services. 4,564 new items were originated (4,278 in 1971) to an average of 12.8 television news services, giving a total of 58,574 relays (51,133 in 1971).

children and young people, as well as forums of light music in radio; Lists of European broadcasting stations (long- and medium-wave and VHF sound broadcasting and television).

THE EUROPEAN COMMUNITIES

THE EUROPEAN ECONOMIC COMMUNITY—EEC

(The Common Market)

THE EUROPEAN COAL AND STEEL COMMUNITY—ECSC

THE EUROPEAN ATOMIC ENERGY COMMUNITY—EURATOM

No final decision has been made on a headquarters for the Communities. Meetings of the principal organs take place in Brussels, Luxembourg and Strasbourg.

The ECSC was created in 1951 to pool the coal and steel production of the six original members (see below). It was seen as a first step towards a united Europe. The EEC and EURATOM were established in 1957, the former to create a Common Market and approximate economic policies, the latter to promote growth in nuclear industries. Political union is regarded as the ultimate aim of the Communities.

MEMBERS

Belgium	Federal Republic of Germany	Luxembourg
Denmark*	Ireland*	Netherlands
France	Italy	United Kingdom*

* Joined on January 1st, 1973. The other six were the original members.

ORGANIZATION

The three Communities are legally separate, having been established by separate treaties, but they share central common institutions.* The four chief institutions are:

The Commission, which formulates policy and implements it;

The Council of Ministers, whose consent the Commission must seek before it can implement policy;

The European Parliament, which supervises the work of the executive organs;

The Court of Justice, which rules on the interpretation and application of the treaties.

In addition there are a number of consultative bodies and some special financial agencies.

* Originally each of the Communities had its own Commission (High Authority in the case of the ECSC) and Council, but a treaty transferring the powers of these bodies to a single Commission and a single Council came into effect in July 1967. It is planned eventually to merge the Communities and replace the three treaties by a single one. For this reason the Communities are often referred to in the singular, even in official publications, as "the Community".

THE EUROPEAN COMMUNITIES

COMMUNITY INSTITUTIONS

Commission of the European Communities

200 rue de la Loi, 1040 Brussels, Belgium

MEMBERS AND RESPONSIBILITIES

President: FRANCOIS-XAVIER ORTOLI (France): Secretariat, Legal Service, Spokesman's Group, Security Office.

Vice-Presidents: WILHELM HAFERKAMP (Federal Republic of Germany): Economic and Financial Affairs, Statistical Office.

CARLO SCARASCIA MUGNOZZA (Italy): European Parliament, Environment, Consumer Interests, Transport, Press and Information.

Sir CHRISTOPHER SOAMES (U.K.): External Relations.

Dr. PATRICK HILLERY (Ireland): Social Affairs.

HENRI SIMONET (Belgium): Taxation and Financial Institutions, Energy and EURATOM safeguards.

Members: CLAUDE CHEYSSON (France): Development and Co-operation policy, Budgets, Financial Control. ALTIERO SPINELLI (Italy): Industrial and Technological Policy.

ALBERT BORSCHETTE (Luxembourg): Competition, Personnel and Administration.

Dr. RALF DAHRENDORF (Federal Republic of Germany): Research, Science and Education.

GEORGE THOMSON (U.K.): Regional Policy.

PETRUS LARDINOIS (Netherlands): Agriculture.

FINN GUNDELACH (Denmark): Internal Market and Customs Administration.

The Commission works on the principle of collegiate responsibility but with each member having responsibility for a particular sector.

The functions of the Commission are fourfold: to ensure the application of the provisions of the Treaties and of the provisions enacted by the institutions of the Communities in pursuance thereof; to formulate recommendations or opinions in matters which are the subject of the Treaties, where the latter expressly so provides or where the Commission considers it necessary; to dispose, under the conditions laid down in the Treaties of a power of decision of its own and to participate in the preparation of acts of the Council of Ministers and of the European Parliament; and to exercise the competence conferred on it by the Council of Ministers for the implementation of the rules laid down by the latter.

The Commission is bound to publish an Annual General Report on the activities of the Community, not later than one month before the opening of the session of the European Parliament.

The Commission may not include more than two members having the nationality of the same state; the number of members of the Commission may be amended by a unanimous vote of the Council of Ministers. In the performance of their duties, the members of the Commission are forbidden to seek or accept instructions from any Government or other body, or to engage in any other paid or unpaid professional activity.

The members of the Commission are appointed by the Governments of the member states acting in common agreement for a renewable term of four years; the President and Vice-Presidents are appointed from among the members of the Commission for renewable terms of two years. Any member of the Commission, if he no longer fulfils the conditions required for the performance of his duties, or if he commits a serious offence, may be declared removed from office by the Court of Justice. The Court may furthermore, on the petition of the Council of Ministers or of the Commission itself, provisionally suspend any member of the Commission from his duties.

THE EUROPEAN COMMUNITIES

expansion. Composed of representatives of national governments and of the Commission.

Medium-term Economic Policy Committee. During 1965 and 1966 prepared a draft five-year programme setting out foreseeable trends in the Community economy and making general policy recommendations. The programme, adopted by the Council in February 1967, will be brought up to date and expanded each year, and will provide a framework for co-ordination of national economic policies and for the various common policies to be worked out at Community level. Comprises representatives of national governments and of the Commission.

Budgetary Policy Committee. Composed of leading officials responsible for drawing up the budgets of member governments, and of Commission representatives.

Committee of Central Bank Governors. Meets to discuss credit, money-market and exchange matters, with a member of the Commission attending.

Administrative Commission for the Social Security of Migrant Workers. Protects the interests of Community citizens working in a member country other than their own. Comprises national officials and representatives of the Commission.

Standing Committee on Employment. Advises on the whole area of employment policy. Comprises representatives of governments, trade unions, employers, and the Commission. Governments are represented at ministerial level.

Scientific and Technical Committee. Advises the Commission in nuclear matters. Twenty-seven members appointed by the Council after consultation with the Commission.

Special Committee on Farm Structure. Advises the Council on agricultural policy. Members are senior civil servants of member states attached to the Permanent Representatives.

Management Committees. Seventeen committees, one for each of the major agricultural products, and six standing committees advise the Commission on agriculture. Composed of civil servants of national governments.

Agricultural Fund Committee. Advises on the administration and funding of the European Agricultural Guidance and Guarantee Fund. Composed of national civil servants under an independent Commission chairman. (See below Special Funds.)

Social Fund Committee. Advises on the administration of the Social Fund. Composed of national civil servants under an independent Commission chairman. (See below Special Funds.)

European Development Fund Committee. Advises on the administration of the European Development Fund. Composed of national civil servants under an independent Commission chairman. (See below Special Funds.)

Advisory Council of the European Monetary Co-operation Fund. Advises the Commission on the administration of the Monetary Fund. Composed of members of the Committee of Central Bank Governors. (See below Special Funds.)

President: A. LAPPAS.

Vice-Presidents: A. CANONGE, H. MASPRONE.

Members: 144 persons representing economic and social fields, 12 each from Belgium and the Netherlands, 24 each from France, Germany, Italy and the U.K., 9 from Denmark and Ireland, and 6 from Luxembourg. One-third represent each side of industry and one-third the general economic interest. Appointed for a renewable term of four years by the unanimous vote of the Council of Ministers of the European Communities (Euratom is also represented in this Committee). Members are appointed in their personal capacity and are not bound by any mandatory instructions.

The Committee is advisory and is consulted by the Council of Ministers or by the Commission of the European Communities, particularly with regard to agriculture, free movement of workers, harmonization of laws and transport.

ECSC CONSULTATIVE COMMITTEE

Members: Not less than 60 and not more than 81 representing, in equal proportions, producers, workers and consumers and dealers in the coal and steel industries.

The Committee is advisory and is attached to the High Authority (Commission). Its members are appointed by the Council of Ministers for two years and are not bound by any mandate from the organizations that designated them in the first place.

Agricultural Advisory Committees. Sixteen advisory committees, one for each major commodity, give advice to the Commission. The committees are composed of representatives of various professional organizations.

In addition to the consultative bodies listed above there are some 400 pressure groups representing every type of interest within the Community (such as the farming organizations just referred to). All these hold unofficial talks with the Commission.

Special Funds

SOCIAL FUND

The Fund was established under the EEC Treaty to improve opportunities for employment within the Community by covering 50 per cent of expenses incurred by a member state in retraining or resettling workers or in granting benefits to workers whose employment was temporarily reduced. A reform of the operations of the Fund was decided on in principle in July 1970 and was adopted in February 1971, becoming effective from May 15th, 1972. Under this reform the Social Fund was called upon to act directly in two main forms: (a) action by the Fund, decided on by the Council of Ministers (acting on a qualified majority) when the employment situation is threatened by measures taken in pursuit of Community policy (industrial, commercial, agricultural, monetary, etc.); (b) action on behalf of certain industries, enterprises or regions in the case of difficulties not arising directly from the functioning of the Common Market. Handicapped persons, elderly persons, women, young people, etc., may benefit from the latter kind of aid. The reform was an important step towards harmonizing social policies within the Community. The "old" Social Fund repaid member states a total of 209 million units of account between 1961 and 1971. In the context of its new outlook the budget of the Fund, which is part of the Community budget, is provisionally put at 471 million units for 1974, while by 1975 it is scheduled to reach 500 millions.

EUROPEAN AGRICULTURAL FUND

Created in 1962 the European Agricultural Guidance and Guarantee Fund (or FEOGA as it is known after its French initials) is administered by the Commission. The Guidance Section contributes credits towards the structural reform of agriculture. The Guarantee Section, under which the bulk of the Community's budget has always been spent, acts in two ways. The prices of imports are kept at a threshold price by means of variable import levies, and the internal market is supported by the authorities who are committed to buy at an intervention price. Export refunds are also provided by this section. The Agricultural Fund still represents the largest item on the budget (66 per cent) but its relative importance is gradually diminishing. It is the intention of the Commission to replace credits allocated for price policy (intervention buying) by increasing credits for structural policy.

EUROPEAN MONETARY CO-OPERATION FUND

Created on April 6th, 1973, the Fund was intended to begin by taking over tasks already being carried out between member states. It will take over the running of the Community's special narrow margin system whereby members' currencies fluctuate against each other within limits of 2.25 per cent, compared with the 4.5 per cent permitted under international rules. The Fund will also put the settlement of debits and credits under the scheme on a multilateral basis, acting as a clearing agent, instead of leaving the two countries concerned in any one support operation for one of their currencies to settle bilaterally. In addition it will take over the management of the Community's system of short-term credits, which central banks can grant to a partner in temporary balance of payments difficulties. For book-keeping the Fund employs the European unit of account (u.a.) which is equivalent in value to the United States dollar before its 1971 devaluation.

EUROPEAN DEVELOPMENT FUND

This fund was set up in 1958 to make non-repayable grants to the 18 African states associated with the Community by the Yaoundé Convention (see below External Relations of the Community). The first fund allocation was for $581 million for the period 1958-63. For the second allocation of $800 million during 1964-69 the fund also provided aid to the territories other than the 18, namely those still linked to European member states. Under the second Yaoundé Convention the Third European Development Fund was fixed at $1,000 million of which $918 million was scheduled for the 18. In July 1973 total commitments from the Third Fund had risen to $597 million since operations began in January 1971. Only a fraction of the Second Fund remained to be disbursed. Community aid to the developing countries emphasizes investment to boost production and modernize economic and social infrastructure, general technical co-operation and measures to encourage marketing and sales promotion.

THE FUNCTIONING OF THE COMMUNITIES

The ECSC achieved its chief aims—a common market for coal and steel—in the 1950s. The goals of the EURATOM treaty are still being developed. The EEC, whose treaty lays out a much more far-reaching task than the other two treaties, set itself a transition period of 12 years in the first instance to establish a Common Market. Towards the end of the transition period the Heads of State or Government of the Six met at The Hague, in December 1969, and, declaring that the transition period was over, agreed to advance towards full economic and monetary union. They also agreed to open negotiations for the enlargement of the Community. Following the success of these negotiations, the Heads of State or Government of the Nine met in Paris in October 1972 (see summary of the communiqué below) and affirmed the principle of advance towards full European union by 1980.

CREATION OF A COMMON MARKET

Free Movement of Goods. In accordance with the EEC treaty the Community established between 1958 and 1968 a customs union covering the exchange of all goods, the prohibition of customs duties on exports and imports between member states, and the adoption of a common external tariff in relations with third countries. Quota restrictions on internal trade were abolished by 1962, while the removal of internal tariff barriers had been achieved by July 1st, 1968. Common markets for coal and steel and for nuclear materials had been achieved by 1955 and 1959 respectively. While tariff barriers have been removed, however, (or in the case of the new members are being removed) the free movement of goods is in practice restricted by a great many non-tariff barriers, such as national regulations on health and safety. The Commission proposes to deal with these as soon as possible.

Free Movement of Persons. Free movement of workers between member countries became effective on July 1st, 1968. Workers may seek employment anywhere in the Community, though governments retain the right, in some cases, to restrict free movement of labour. Community workers now enjoy equal treatment in every important field relating to unemployment, including matters relating to taxation, social insurance and dependants. Medical treatment on the same basis as that received by nationals is also available. (See below, Social Policy, for further details.)

Free Movement of Services. The Right of Establishment—the right to engage in business and supply services anywhere in the Community—is provided for in the EEC treaty. Progress has been slow in this field because of inherent difficulties such as the problem of mutual recognition of differing professional qualifications, though some progress has been achieved in banking, nursing and insurance. Many aspects of company law also require to be harmonized.

Free Movement of Capital. This is also provided for in the EEC treaty. In practice the provisions have only been implemented in a modest way. Free movement of capital is, however, entailed by the plan to achieve full economic and monetary union by 1980.

Approximation of Fiscal Policy. From January 1st, 1973, a single system of Value Added Tax was applied throughout the six original member countries, and applied throughout the new member countries from April 1st, 1973. The rates themselves differ, but will be harmonized eventually.

A first series of proposals to harmonize excise duties was approved in 1972 by the Commission. Calls have also been made for the harmonization of some direct taxes, the removal of double taxation, and the harmonization of company taxation.

Competition. Both the EEC and ECSC treaties make provision for action against practices which restrict or distort competition in intra-Community trading (competition within individual countries is excluded). Since 1961 the Commission has ruled on a large number of inter-company restrictive agreements and has become increasingly active in the anti-trust field. Following the failure of its case against the American company, Continental Can, the Commission made proposals in 1973 for strengthening the provisions of the EEC treaty on anti-trust law.

DEVELOPMENT OF COMMON POLICIES

Agriculture. The main features of the common policy on agriculture, adopted by stages since 1962, are:

- (a) the establishing of a common market for almost all major agricultural commodities—cereals, pigmeat, eggs and poultry, rice, milk and dairy products, beef and veal, fruit and vegetables including manufactures thereof, wine, oils and fats, sugar, non-food horticultural products, tobacco, flax and hemp, seed, fish, hops;
- (b) support buying, through the Agricultural Fund (see p. 225), to ensure that prices do not fall below agreed levels;
- (c) a system of protective levies on agricultural imports from third countries;
- (d) the rationalization of Community agriculture.

For much of the 1960s the activities of the Community in the agricultural sector lay in support buying. The agricultural rationalization programme was revived in the "Mansholt Plan" proposed by the Commission in 1968, which aimed at increasing the average size of farms, encouraging the movement of labour off the land, and reducing the amount of land in the Community devoted to agriculture. Action to realize these aims was taken by the Council in directives of 1972. In November 1973 a number of significant proposals were made by the Commission. These were: reducing the amount spent under the Guarantee section of the Agricultural Fund by about 1,000 million units of account by 1978 (mainly in the cereals sector and in dairy products); the reduction of demand/supply imbalances existing for certain products, notably butter; and the simplification of some of the mechanisms for implementing the Common Agricultural Policy, by reducing the number of regulations (some 200) relating to this sector. The Commission stressed that for these proposals to succeed a certain financial sacrifice on the part of producers would be required.

The amount of the Community's budget allocated to agriculture is tending to diminish: from over 90 per cent in the late 1960s it is scheduled to be under 70 per cent for 1974.

Transport. The bases for a common policy covering road, rail and inland water transport were agreed in 1965. In December 1968 a timetable was adopted, affecting primarily road transport and the harmonization of conditions of competition. Community licences for cross-frontier road transport were first issued on a limited scale in 1968 to eliminate the normal international transport formalities. In October 1971 agreement was reached on common rules for cross-frontier passenger transport and on the revision of maximum driving-times for short-distance road transport. In May 1972 it was decided to adopt before 1980 common rules for the maximum size and weight of lorries crossing frontiers.

Current priorities are greater road safety and the co-ordination of infrastructure investments.

Coal and Steel. The ECSC treaty, signed on April 18th, 1951, came into force on July 25th, 1952. By the end of 1954 nearly all barriers to trade in coal, coke, steel, pig-iron and scrap iron had been removed. The Community fixes prices and imposes fines on firms infringing treaty rules. The ECSC provides financial aid to, settles and retrain workers whose jobs are put at risk by technical developments in the coal and steel industries. Funds for this are raised by levies on coal and steel production, the rates for which are decided annually. Research and administrative expenses are also covered by these funds. The ECSC is additionally empowered to facilitate the carrying out of investment and redevelopment programmes by granting loans to enterprises or by guaranteeing other loans which it may contract. In 1972 the total ECSC funds available for grants to enterprises amounted to 231 million units of account. Loans paid out from this sum amounted to 181.6 million units of account, of which 148.3 million were granted to industrial programmes, 32.4 million to redevelopment programmes and 0.9 million to finance the construction of housing.

Steel production in the Community rose from 103.4 million metric tons in 1971 to 113.2 million in 1972, reflecting a world trend. Coal production fell from 164.9 million metric tons to 151.8 million (excluding small mines) in 1972.

Nuclear Energy. The treaty setting up EURATOM came into force on January 1st, 1958.

EURATOM's role is to create "the conditions necessary for the speedy establishment and growth of nuclear industries in the Community" by stimulating and co-ordinating public and private research in atomic energy, by ensuring the free flow of information, and by encouraging the building of power reactors. EURATOM also has various responsibilities of a regulatory character, establishing common laws and rules in the atomic field throughout the Community. A common market in nuclear materials was introduced on January 1st, 1959, which eliminates internal import and export duties on nuclear products; a common tariff is applied to third countries; assistance is granted to the free movement of specialized labour, and a common insurance scheme against nuclear risks has been established.

The supply of nuclear fuel is supervised or negotiated by an Agency, financially independent and with an option on the purchase of materials within the Community. Contracts with third countries are the exclusive right of the Agency. EURATOM is also the exclusive owner of special fissile materials.

Throughout 1968 and 1969 Euratom's activities and budget were sharply reduced owing to disagreement between the Six over the role and scope of the research activities. In December 1969 the Six agreed to maintain the research centre fully staffed but to diversify research activities into non-nuclear fields and to reorganize the centre in order that it might undertake research and development work for outside industry.

The Joint Research Centre, restructured and given more autonomy by a Council decision in December 1970, developed a research policy on the above lines during 1971, and a three-year programme was proposed in the same year which sought to rationalize and re-direct the Centre's efforts. The Six failed to agree on the programme, however, and the future of the Joint Research Centre programme remained uncertain until February of 1973 when the Council (now representing the Nine member states) at last agreed on a long-term nuclear research programme. This was to last four years and cost 160 million units of account. It also incorporated a move away from purely nuclear research.

Research: EURATOM's nuclear research assignment is to undertake research at its own Joint Research Centre or under various types of contracts with bodies in the member countries. Ispra is the largest of the four establishments of the Centre. A second is in operation (the Central Nuclear Measurements Bureau) at Mol, Belgium; a third is at Karlsruhe (the European Transuranium Elements Institute); the Dutch Petten Centre is the fourth under an agreement which came into force in 1962.

Under the agreement of 1973 the largest research field will be that of the safety of reactors. Research into non-nuclear fields will include environmental protection, industrial standards and satellite prospection of the earth's resources.

Co-operation with other countries and organizations: An important section of EURATOM's research work falls under agreements for joint research with other countries and international organizations. In November 1958 an agreement was signed between EURATOM and the U.S.A. for a joint power and research and development programme.

Under the agreements with the U.K. and Canada, signed 1959, joint discussions and exchanges of information are taking place in many fields of common interest.

Other agreements have been signed with Brazil and Argentina.

EURATOM is participating in the research projects of the Nuclear Energy Agency of the OECD. EURATOM is participating, in the place of its member countries, and in partnership with the U.K., in the building and operation of the high-temperature gas-cooled DRAGON reactor at Winfrith Heath, along with other NEA countries.

Five of the Six (all except France) signed the treaty on the non-proliferation of nuclear weapons which came into force in 1970. Under the treaty the IAEA became responsible for control and inspection in all non-nuclear weapon-states, but at the end of 1972 the IAEA and the Community agreed that inspection would be carried out by the Community, with the IAEA merely verifying the activities of the inspectors.

Industrial, Scientific and Technological Policy. In March 1970 the Commission outlined a plan for a common industrial policy aimed at stimulating the growth of industry and technology on a Continent-wide scale.

In June 1972 the Commission proposed that the Community's overall responsibility for scientific research and technological development should be recognized, that the information and instruments to carry this out should be provided, that a 300 million dollar grant for research and development should be provided for 1973-75, and that new guidelines should be decided for EURATOM's Joint Research Centre, whose activities would go beyond the nuclear sector. Committees were proposed to develop this programme.

At the Paris summit in October 1972, the Heads of State or Government decided to establish "a single industrial base for the Community as a whole". This meant the elimination of technical, fiscal and legal barriers hindering mergers between firms, the "rapid adoption of a European company statute", the "opening up of public sector purchases", the promotion "on a European scale of competitive firms in the field of high technology", the transformation and conversion of declining industries", and the maintenance of competition.

In January 1974 the Council approved the scientific and technological policy programme presented to it by the Commission. The main features of the programme were: the creation of a committee for scientific and technical research (CREST) charged with the co-ordination of all aspects of national research policies not subject to military or industrial secrecy; co-operation with the European Science Foundation; action on research projects in support of Community policy in various fields; and a pilot project on a technological forecasting unit.

Energy. A protocol on a common energy policy was signed in 1964 and basic principles for a policy were approved by the Council in 1969 but progress has been hampered by the fact that the different sectors of energy supply fall under the provisions of different treaties, and by the variations in the world energy market.

In January 1972 the Council agreed that member states should notify the Commission each year of investment plans for oil, natural gas and electricity, and of import programmes for hydrocarbons (petroleum and natural gas). During 1972 the Commission prepared proposals for a policy on the trading and procurement of hydrocarbons.

At the Paris summit in October 1972 the Heads of State and Government invited the Community institutions to "formulate as soon as possible an energy policy guaranteeing certain and lasting supplies under satisfactory economic conditions". The need for such a policy was re-emphasized at the Copenhagen summit meeting in December 1973.

Economic and Monetary Union. In February 1971 the Council decided on a ten-year, three-stage plan creating a zone where persons, goods, services and capital would be able to move more freely, and where firms would be able to develop on a Community scale. Features of the first stage (to the end of 1973) were the narrowing of exchange rate margins, the creation of a medium-term reserves pool. The co-ordination of short and medium-term economic and budgetary policies, meetings of finance ministers and central bank governors, adoption of a joint position on international monetary issues, harmonization of taxes, creation of a European Monetary Co-operation Fund, and the economic development of backward regions in the Community.

The currency crisis of 1971 prevented the implementation in that year of the narrowing of exchange rate margins, but the whole plan was re-launched in March 1972, this time with the participation of the four countries then acceding (Denmark, Ireland, Norway and the U.K.). The narrower margins procedure came into effect on May 1st, but in June the U.K. floated the pound and withdrew from the agreement. Denmark and Ireland also withdrew from the agreement.

The Paris summit communiqué of October 1972 set out further guidelines. It said that the necessary decisions should be taken in 1973 to allow the transition to the second stage of the February 1971 proposals on January 1st, 1974, with a view to completion by 1980. Fixed but adjustable parities between currencies were essential, and mechanisms for defence and mutual support would be set up. A European Monetary Co-operation Fund was to be set up on April 1st, 1973, administered by central bank governors, to concert action on the narrowing of fluctuation margins, to make multilateral positions arising from interventions in Community currencies, to administer short-term monetary support among the banks and to regroup the short-term financing of the agreement on the narrowing of margins and short-term monetary support.

The need to co-ordinate economic policy more closely was affirmed. Priority was to be given to price stability and anti-inflation measures.

A common attitude to international monetary reform was to be adopted based on fixed but adjustable parities, convertibility, regulation of the world supply of liquidities, reduced reserve roles for national currencies, effective and fair adjustment, equal rights for all, the need to lessen the unstabilizing effects of short-term capital movements, and the taking into account of the interests of developing countries.

The Monetary Co-operation Fund was established on April 6th, 1973, in Luxembourg, but its operations have been limited owing to the separate floats of the currencies of member countries. In January 1973 Italy joined Denmark, Ireland and the United Kingdom by floating its currency and in January 1974 France also floated its currency. The French Government called for a special Community meeting to be held in July 1974 to discuss the re-establishment of the plan for economic and monetary union to take account of the changed world monetary situation.

Social Policy. The emphasis in this sector has tended to be on employment problems. The ECSC treaty gave skilled workers the right to move freely from one country to another while retaining their benefit rights and continuity of contributions. Grants and loans for the retraining and resettlement of workers, where necessary, were provided. The EEC and EURATOM treaties sought to widen the application of these provisions and workers now have the right to the main unemployment benefits anywhere in the Community. Other connected rights, such as the right to retire in any country, are being introduced.

In November 1970 the Six decided to try to harmonize social security policies, prepare a Community social budget and continue their studies in depth on factors influencing employment. The reform of the Social Fund (see p. 224) was adopted in February 1971, coming into operation in 1972. The Council agreed in 1972 to study the situation of migrant workers in the Community.

Concerted action on the provisions of the Rome Treaty was proposed in October 1972 at the Paris summit. The Heads of State and Government declared that they "attached as much importance to vigorous action in the social field as to the achievement of economic and monetary union". It was essential to "ensure the increasing involvement of labour and management in the economic and social decisions of the Community". The Community institutions were invited to draw up before 1974 a programme which was to aim in particular at "carrying out a co-ordinated policy for employment and vocational training, at improving working conditions and conditions of life, at closely involving workers in the progress of firms, at facilitating . . . the conclusion of collective agreements at European levels in appropriate fields, and at strengthening and co-ordinating measures of consumer protection".

A Social Action Programme, proposed in the autumn of 1973, was accepted by the Council in December of that year. The programme consisted of a wide range of action to be implemented during 1974-76, covering full and better employment, improvement in living and working conditions and the participation of both labour and management in the economic and social decisions of the European Community. Priority measures to be put into effect included a directive concerning the principle of equal pay for equal work between men and women, the fixing before 1975 of the principle of the 40-hour week and (before 1976) of a four-week annual holiday, the harmonization of national laws on mass dismissals and the protection of workers' rights in cases of mergers.

Regional Policy. Following a Commission memorandum of October 1969 an annual review of depressed regions, the establishment of a permanent committee on regional development and the creation of an interest-free rebate fund for regional development have all been under consideration.

In March 1972 the Council agreed that in principle aid from the Agricultural Fund could be used to help backward regions and that a regional development fund should be set up.

The Heads of State and Government decided at the Paris summit that "high priority" should be given to correcting regional imbalances. They invited the Commission to prepare a report on the regions without delay and make appropriate proposals. They undertook to co-ordinate regional policy in future, and, accordingly, invited the institutions to create a Regional Development Fund by the end of 1973, which would, together with national aids, permit the correction of regional imbalances, particularly those relating to the restructuring of agriculture and to industrial change.

The Commission accordingly put forward proposals during 1973 but there had been no agreement in the Council on these by the end of the year and the discussions were continued into 1974.

The Agricultural Fund, the Social Fund, ECSC funds and European Investment Bank assistance already contribute to the backward regions of the Community, by various means.

Environment Policy. A special unit on environmental problems was established in 1971 and in the following year the Commission presented a programme for the protection of the environment, pinpointing industrial pollution, with special reference to the Rhine.

The communiqué of the Paris summit emphasized the importance of an environmental policy, and invited the Community institutions to establish, before July 31st, 1973, a programme of action with a specific timetable.

In April 1974 the Commission put forward detailed proposals embodying three different types of project: the reduction and prevention of pollutants and nuisances; the improvement of the environment and of the quality of life; and co-operation with relevant international organizations.

Educational Policy. The Education Ministers of the Six met for the first time in November 1971 to discuss the proposals for a European university and for mutual recognition of academic qualifications made in the EEC treaty. They agreed to create a European postgraduate university institute in Florence and to set up a group to study the creation of a European education development centre. The Florence institute was consequently established and was scheduled to open in October 1974.

EXTERNAL RELATIONS OF THE COMMUNITY

Under the EEC treaty European states may apply for full membership of the Community, while overseas countries having special relations with member states and other countries in the world are invited to form Association agreements with the Community. Trade links and other agreements are also possible and the Community has a common policy in most aspects of its trade relations with third countries. The Community participates as a unit in GATT arrangements and, from January 1st, 1973, all countries were obliged to trade with the Community as a unit.

Enlargement of Membership. In 1961 Denmark, Ireland and the U.K., and, in 1962, Norway applied for membership of the Communities but negotiations foundered in 1963. The same four states applied again in 1967, negotiations opened in 1970 and the Treaty of Accession was signed in January 1972. Three of the applicants (all except the U.K.) held referenda in the course of the year and Norway rejected membership. The other three states became full members on January 1st, 1973.

Association in Europe. Association agreements have been signed between the Community and Greece (1962), Turkey (1964), Malta (1971) and Cyprus (1972). Since the Greek military coup of 1967 the agreement with Greece has been in suspense. Negotiations with Turkey for entry into a transition period, with mutual tariff reductions over 22 years, concessions on Turkish farm exports and financial aid, were concluded in 1970. The Maltese agreement is a two-part preferential one, intended to lead to customs union after ten years. Proposals to improve the agreement are under consideration.

Association with Overseas Territories. The EEC treaty provided for links with overseas states and territories having special relations with member states (i.e. colonies, etc.). Many of the territories thus designated had achieved independence by 1961 and the Community offered to re-negotiate. As a result 17 African states and Madagascar entered into an Association with the Community known as the Yaoundé Convention.

Yaoundé Convention. There have been two Conventions (1964-69 and 1969-75) under which the following states are associated with the Community: Burundi, Cameroon, Central African Republic, Chad, Congo (Brazzaville), Dahomey, Gabon, Ivory Coast, Madagascar, Mali, Mauritania, Niger, Rwanda, Senegal, Somalia, Togo, Upper Volta and Zambia. The Association provides for a free trade area, a system of financial aids for social and economic development in the Yaoundé states, and for several institutions of Association. Financial aid is provided through the European Development Fund (EDF), set up by the Community in 1958, to make non-repayable grants to the overseas territories. Under the second Yaoundé Convention EDF resources were increased to 1,000 million dollars, of which 918 million was for the 18. The bulk of this was scheduled for grants, but some was for "soft" loans, and 90 million was a normal loan from the European Investment Bank.

Commonwealth "Associables". In a Protocol attached to the Treaty of Accession, signed in January 1972, the Community offered to create relationships with developing Commonwealth countries. These could be of three sorts: (a) participation in the Yaoundé Convention when it came to be renegotiated in 1975; (b) participation in a less comprehensive convention; (c) simple trade agreements. Some 20 countries were initially eligible for a relationship on one or other of these lines, though the number fell to 19 when Mauritius, having acceded to the Yaoundé Convention in 1972, became an associate from June 1st, 1973. Of the remaining 19 Kenya, Tanzania and Uganda were already associated with the Community under the Arusha Convention (see below). In July 1973 the Community invited 42 developing states (the 19 Yaoundé associates, the 19 Commonwealth "associables", plus Ethiopia, Liberia, Sudan and Guinea) to a conference in Brussels, at which it was agreed that official talks would begin in October 1973.

Trade Agreements. The Community has concluded a number of other agreements with third countries and is gradually evolving an overall policy on external trade.

Agreement with EFTA. In November 1970 the Community began talks with the non-applicant members of EFTA—Austria, Finland, Iceland, Portugal, Sweden and Switzerland—who were seeking closer association but not full membership. Detailed talks took place during 1971, formal negotiations began in November of that year and were concluded in July 1972 with the signing of bilateral free trade Agreements. The industrial sector is the only one generally covered by the Agreements though special arrangements are made for a few agricultural products. The free trade system achieved under EFTA is to be preserved and extended to the Community over a transition period. For certain "sensitive" products an extended transition period is provided. Procedures to ensure harmonious free trade and guarantee equal treatment for products originating in third countries are laid down. There are special provisions for trade in coal and steel, for the abolition of quotas and certain taxes, and for the abolition of practices restricting competition. A joint committee meets twice a year.

For four of the non-applicant EFTA countries the agreements came into force on January 1st, 1973. Finland only initialled the July agreement, owing to the resignation of the government, and did not sign until October 1973. Iceland, for reasons arising out of its fisheries dispute, did not ratify the agreement until 1973. It came into force on April 1st of that year.

Norway. Placed in a special position as a result of its rejection of membership of the Community, Norway declared in December 1972 that the agreements reached with the non-applicant EFTA members would be a suitable basis for a free trade agreement with the Community. An agreement was duly signed and came into force on July 1st, 1973.

Mediterranean Agreements. Links with Mediterranean countries include Association agreements with Greece, Turkey, Malta and Cyprus (see above) and, under provisions laid down in the EEC treaty, with Tunisia and Morocco (came into force in September 1969 for five years). Negotiations for an association with Algeria are under way. There are also preferential trade agreements with Spain and Israel (in force since October 1970) and with Egypt and Lebanon (in force from January 1973). A free trade agreement exists with Portugal under the arrangement with EFTA (see above) and a non-preferential trade agreement exists with Yugoslavia (in force since May 1970).

The idea of a "global" approach to the Mediterranean area was raised in the Council in June 1972, and in October the Commission submitted proposals for an approach to the whole region, including the gradual creation of a Mediterranean free trade area, arrangements for technical and financial aid, and other general measures of co-operation.

U.S.A. The Community has had many trade links with the U.S.A. In February 1972 the Community and the U.S. laid the basis for wide-ranging talks in the context of GATT which began in 1973.

Eastern Europe. Common rules have been formulated for trade with the state trading countries of Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union.

Latin America. In June 1971 the Community and 22 Latin American states agreed to set up machinery for a permanent dialogue to strengthen political and economic co-operation. Argentina negotiated a non-preferential agreement with the Community in November 1971, as did Uruguay in April 1973. A similar agreement is under consideration for Brazil.

Asia. India signed a special trade co-operation agreement with the Community on December 17th, 1973. Agreements on particular commodities have been or are being negotiated with most non-Communist Asian countries. Common rules apply for trade with the Communist countries.

Generalized Preferences. In July 1971 the Community introduced a scheme of generalized preferences to 91 developing countries. Under the scheme exemption from customs duties is granted on manufactures and semi-manufactures imported from the developing countries. It was decided in June 1972 to extend the scheme to a further 12 countries from January 1973. In June 1973 it was also decided that Romania, Malta and Turkey should benefit under the scheme from January 1974.

PARIS SUMMIT OBJECTIVES

The Heads of State and of Government of the enlarged Community met in Paris on October 19th and 20th, 1972, and reviewed the full range of Community objectives. A summary of the communiqué issued after the conference follows (many of its objectives have been summarized in preceding pages).

Preamble: The Heads of State and of Government declare that, in view of profound changes taking place and problems arising in world affairs, Europe must recognize the unity of its interests, capacities and duties, and make its voice heard in world affairs.

To this end: (i) the development of the Community is to be based upon the principles of democracy, free movement of persons and ideas, and participation of the peoples; (ii) economic and monetary union is to be established as the basis for social progress; (iii) the quality of life is to be improved as well as the standard of living; (iv) aid and technical help to developing countries is to be increased; (v) international trade is to be developed in a spirit of reciprocity; (vi) a policy of détente is to be followed in Europe; (vii) the Community is to be affirmed as a distinct entity determined to promote international equilibrium. The member states are to transform the whole complex of their relations into a European union by 1980.

Articles 1-4: Economic and Monetary Questions (see p. 228).

Article 5: Regional Policy (see p. 229).

Article 6: Social Policy (see p. 229).

Article 7: Industrial Scientific and Technological Policy (see p. 228).

Article 8: Environment Policy (see p. 230).

Article 9: Energy Policy (see p. 228).

Articles 10-14: External Relations.

The Community is only meaningful if members co-operate in coping with the growing responsibilities incumbent on Europe.

The Community must respond to the expectations of developing countries, importance being attached to the association principles laid down in the Treaty of Accession and to the fulfilment of Mediterranean commitments. The Community is invited to adopt a global policy of development co-operation.

Harmonious trade with industrial countries must be ensured. Importance is attached to the GATT negotiations. A global policy towards trade is to be decided on by July 1973. The Community is ready to seek a solution to the problem of relations with Norway.

A common trade policy with Eastern Europe should be followed to promote détente in Europe, linked to preparations for a conference on security.

Co-operation on foreign policy should be improved, the Foreign Ministers meeting four times a year instead of two. They should produce a report on political co-operation before July 1973.

Article 15: Reinforcement of the Institutions.

A report on the distribution of competences and responsibilities within the Community necessary for economic and monetary union to be drawn up before May 1973. Measures to reinforce the European Parliament to be put into effect. Decision making in the Council to be improved by June 30th, 1973. The Economic and Social Committee to be able to advise on its own initiative. Widest use to be made of article 235 of the EEC treaty (provision for going beyond the treaties).

Article 16: European Union.

A report on this to be drawn up by 1975.

FINANCING THE EUROPEAN COMMUNITY

Under Article 200 of the Rome Treaty the budget of the EEC is contributed by the member states according to a fixed key: France, Germany and Italy 28 per cent each; Belgium and the Netherlands 7.9 per cent each; and Luxembourg 0.2 per cent. The European Social Fund is financed in a similar fashion but with different proportions. The Euratom and ECSC Treaties lay down the means of financing those two Communities.

With the establishment of the common agricultural policy, variations on this basic EEC key were introduced for the years 1962-67 for agricultural expenditure. From July 1st, 1967, to December 31st, 1969, the budget of the European Agricultural Guidance and Guarantee Fund was financed in part by the payment to the Community of 90 per cent of the product of the levies imposed on imports into the Community of foodstuffs subject to the common agricultural policy. The remaining revenue was raised by direct contributions by the member states in the following proportions: France 32 per cent; Germany 31.2 per cent; Italy 20.3 per cent; Netherlands 8.2 per cent; Belgium 8.1 per cent; Luxembourg 0.2 per cent. These proportions represent the gross contributions to the Fund. The effect of the payments from the Fund to support Community agriculture (particularly to make export refunds) has been to make France and the Netherlands net recipients from the Fund, with the other member states making net contributions.

Under Article 201 of the Rome Treaty the Commission is empowered to propose what means of financing the Community be adopted after the completion of the common external tariff (which took place on July 1st, 1968), in particular whether the direct state contributions shall be replaced by the revenue from the common tariff. In the summer of 1969 the Commission published proposals for giving the Community its own direct revenues, and these formed the basis of the agreement reached between the six governments on December 22nd, 1969, given legal form in a Council Decision of April 21st, 1970.

"Own resources" financing system: The Community's definitive financing system started to come into force on January 1st, 1971. Over the seven years ending on January 1st, 1978, the Community will phase in a system whereby its budget will be provided by automatic payments made over by the member governments from the revenue they collect in import levies and duties, and part of the standard value-added tax introduced or being introduced in all the countries. From 1978 the Community will be financially autonomous. At the same time, the powers of budgetary control by the European Parliament will be increased.

The system is being introduced in two phases. From 1971 to 1974 inclusive, the Community's resources will be provided from:

- (a) the total value of the levies collected on agricultural imports;
- (b) an annually increasing proportion of the revenue from customs duties on other imports, starting with up to half of the total levies and duties (less 10 per cent returned to the member states for administrative costs of collecting duties and levies);
- (c) direct contributions from the member states, according to an agreed key, to cover any shortfall.

From 1975 Community expenditure will be financed by all the levy and customs-duty revenue (less 10 per cent for administration) and a proportion, equivalent to up to a one per cent rate, of the proceeds of a value added tax. This applies to the Six only.

From January 1st, 1971, until December 31st, 1974, the proportionate amount paid in direct contributions by any single member country will not be able to rise by more than 1 per cent or fall by more than 1½ per cent compared with the previous year.

From January 1st, 1975, to the end of 1977, it will be able to rise or fall by 2 per cent compared with the previous year's level. These permitted annual fluctuations are based on the percentage contributions of each member state for the reference year 1970, when virtually the whole of the Community's operations was financed by national contributions, in the following proportions: Belgium 6.80 per cent, Germany 32.90, France 32.60, Italy 20.20, Luxembourg 0.20 and Netherlands 7.30.

For the new members a percentage "key" has been set, corresponding to their shares of the GNP of the enlarged Community. Their liability is due on a scale rising from 45 per cent in 1973 to 92 per cent in 1977.

The Six agreed in April 1970 that, in order to avoid too heavy a burden for member states at the start, a country that paid large contributions under the agricultural levies (because it was a large importer of agricultural products from non-member countries), would pay less in customs duties, or none at all, to Community funds. This situation will gradually change and from 1975 all customs duties will go to the Community automatically. Until then, only the levies will be paid in their entirety to

Community funds (less administrative costs); the other payments will be "corrected" to avoid imbalances as indicated above.

An advisory committee has been set up to apply the regulation on the Community's own resources. Composed of up to five representatives for each member state, it will be chaired by a representative of the Commission, which will provide the secretariat. Introduction of the Community's own resources required a treaty amending the Rome and Paris Treaties and the Merger Treaty.

Parliamentary control: At the Council meeting of December 22nd, 1969, the six governments agreed on a draft resolution on the powers of budgetary control to be granted to the European Parliament after 1975. The draft resolution provided for four stages in adopting the budget: (1) The Council draws up an estimate of the expenditure and of revenue, the latter including the rate of value-added tax to be apportioned to the Community's budget; (2) This draft budget may be amended by the European Parliament by a majority vote of its members, though any change in the VAT rate must be within the limits set by the Council Act establishing the Community tax; (3) The Council, acting by qualified majority vote, may amend the Parliament's amendments; (4) The Parliament may amend the Council's amendments in the three stages by a vote of a majority of its members and subject to three-fifths of the votes cast being in favour. Should the Parliament not have given a decision within a fixed period the Council's amendments made in the third stage shall be deemed to be adopted.

THE EUROPEAN COMMUNITIES

SUMMARY OF EEC TREATY (TREATY OF ROME)

PART I. PRINCIPLES

The aim of the Community is, by establishing a Common Market and progressively approximating the economic policies of the member states, to promote throughout the Community a harmonious development of economic activities, a continuous and balanced expansion, an increased stability, an accelerated raising of the standard of living and closer relations between its member states. With these aims in view, the activities of the Community will include:

- (a) the elimination between member states of customs duties and of quantitative restrictions in regard to the importation and exportation of goods, as well as of all other measures with equivalent effect;
- (b) the establishment of a common customs tariff and a common commercial policy towards third countries;
- (c) the abolition between member states of the obstacles to the free movement of persons, services and capital;
- (d) the inauguration of a common agricultural policy;
- (e) the inauguration of a common transport policy;
- (f) the establishment of a system ensuring that competition shall not be distorted in the Common Market;
- (g) the application of procedures that will make it possible to co-ordinate the economic policies of member states and to remedy disequilibria in their balance of payments;
- (h) the approximation of their respective municipal law to the extent necessary for the functioning of the Common Market;
- (i) the creation of a European Social Fund in order to improve the possibilities of employment for workers and to contribute to the raising of their standard of living;
- (j) the establishment of a European Investment Bank intended to facilitate the economic expansion of the Community through the creation of new resources; and
- (k) the association of overseas countries and territories with the Community with a view to increasing trade and to pursuing jointly their effort toward economic and social development.

Member states, acting in close collaboration with the institutions of the Community, shall co-ordinate their respective economic policies to the extent that is necessary to attain the objectives of the Treaty; the institutions of the Community shall take care not to prejudice the internal and external financial stability of the member states. Within the field of application of the Treaty and without prejudice to certain special provisions which it contains, any discrimination on the grounds of nationality shall be hereby prohibited.

The Common Market shall be progressively established in the course of a transitional period of twelve years. This transitional period shall be divided into three stages of four years each; the length of each stage may be modified in accordance with the provisions set out below.

Transition from the first to the second stage shall be conditional upon a confirmatory statement to the effect that the essence of the objectives laid down in the Treaty for the first stage has been in fact achieved, and that all obligations have been observed. Failing a unanimous vote by the Council of Ministers at the end of the fourth year, the first stage shall be automatically extended for a period of one year. A similar procedure may be followed at the end of the sixth year if the first stage has in fact been extended. If at the end of the seventh year a unanimous vote is not forthcoming to proceed to the second stage, the Council of Ministers shall appoint an Arbitration Board whose decision shall bind both member states and Community institutions. The second and third stages may not be extended or curtailed except by a decision of the Council acting by means of a unanimous vote on a proposal of the Commission. These provisions shall not have the effect of extending the transitional period beyond a total duration of fifteen years after the date of entry into force of the Treaty.

PART II. BASES OF THE COMMUNITY

FREE MOVEMENT OF GOODS

Member states shall refrain from introducing between themselves any new import or export customs duties, or charges with equivalent effect, and from increasing such duties or charges as they apply in their commercial relations with each other. Member states shall progressively abolish between themselves all import and export customs duties, charges with an equivalent effect, and also customs duties of a fiscal nature. Independently of these provisions, any member state may, in the course of the transitional period, suspend in whole or in part the collection of import duties applied by it to products imported from other member states, or may carry out the foreseen reductions more rapidly than laid down in the Treaty if its general economic situation and the situation of the sector so concerned permit.

A common customs tariff shall be established, which, subject to certain conditions (especially with regard to the Italian tariff), shall be at the level of the arithmetical average of the duties applied in the four customs territories (i.e. France, Germany, Italy and Benelux) covered by the Community. This customs tariff shall be applied in its entirety not later than at the date of the expiry of the transitional period. Member states may follow an independent accelerating process similar to that allowed for reduction of inter-Community customs duties.

Member states shall refrain from introducing between themselves any new quantitative restrictions or measures with equivalent effect, and existing restrictions and measures shall be abolished not later than at the end of the first stage of the transitional period. These provisions shall not be an obstacle to prohibitions or restrictions in respect of importation, exportation or transit which are justified on grounds of public morality, health or safety, the protection of human or animal life or health, the preservation of plant life, the protection of national treasures of artistic, historic or archaeological value or the protection of industrial and commercial property. Such prohibitions or restrictions shall not, however, constitute either a means of arbitrary discrimination or a disguised restriction on trade between member states. Member states shall progressively adjust any state monopolies of a commercial character in such a manner as will ensure the exclusion, at the end of the transitional period, of all discrimination between the nationals of member states in regard to conditions of supply and marketing of goods. These provisions shall apply to any body by means of which a member state shall de jure or de facto either directly or indirectly, control or appreciably influence importation or exportation between member states, and also to monopolies assigned by the state. In the case of a commercial monopoly which is accompanied by regulations designed to facilitate the marketing or the valorisation of agricultural products, it should be ensured that in the application of these provisions equivalent guarantees are provided in respect of the employment and standard of living of the producers concerned.

The obligations incumbent on member states shall be binding only to such extent as they are compatible with existing international agreements.

AGRICULTURE

The Common Market shall extend to agriculture and trade in agricultural products. The common agricultural policy shall have as its objectives:

- (a) the increase of agricultural productivity by developing technical progress and by ensuring the rational development of agricultural production and the optimum utilisation of the factors of production, particularly labour;
- (b) the ensurance thereby of a fair standard of living for the agricultural population;
- (c) the stabilisation of markets;
- (d) regular supplies;
- (e) reasonable prices in supplies to consumers.

Due account must be taken of the particular character of agricultural activities, arising from the social structure of agriculture and from structural and natural disparities between the various agricultural regions; of the need to make the appropriate adjustments gradually; and of the fact that in member states agriculture constitutes a sector which is closely linked with the economy as a whole. With a view to developing a common agricultural policy during the transitional period and the establishment of it not later than at the end of the period, a common organization of agricultural markets shall be effected.

FREE MOVEMENT OF PERSONS, SERVICES AND CAPITAL

Workers: The free movement of workers shall be ensured within the Community not later than at the date of the expiry of the transitional period, involving the abolition of any discrimination based on nationality between workers of the member states as regards employment, remuneration and other working conditions. This shall include the right to accept offers of employment actually made, to move about freely for this purpose within the territory of the member states, to stay in any member state in order to carry on an employment in conformity with the legislative and administrative provisions governing the employment of the workers of that state, and to live, on conditions which shall be the subject of implementing regulations laid down by the Commission, in the territory of a member state after having been employed there. (These provisions do not apply to employment in the public administration).

In the field of social security, the Council shall adopt the measures necessary to effect the free movement of workers, in particular, by introducing a system which permits an assurance to be given to migrant workers and their beneficiaries that, for the purposes of qualifying for and retaining the rights to benefits and of the calculation of these benefits, all periods taken into consideration by the respective municipal law of the countries concerned shall be added together, and that these benefits will be paid to persons resident in the territories of the member states.

Right of Establishment: Restrictions on the freedom of establishment of nationals of a member state in the territory of another member state shall be progressively abolished during the transitional period, nor may any new restrictions of a similar character be introduced. Such progressive abolition shall also extend to restrictions on the setting up of agencies, branches or subsidiaries. Freedom of establishment shall include the right to engage in and carry on non-wage-earning activities, and also to set up and manage enterprises and companies under the conditions laid down by the law of the country of establishment for its own nationals, subject to the provisions of this Treaty relating to capital.

Services: Restrictions on the free supply of services within the Community shall be progressively abolished in the course of the transitional period in respect of nationals of member states who are established in a state of the Community other than that of the person to whom the services are supplied; no new restrictions of a similar character may be introduced. The Council, acting by a unanimous vote on a proposal of the Commission, may extend the benefit of these provisions to cover services supplied by nationals of any third country who are established within the Community.

Particular services involved are activities of an industrial or artisan character and those of the liberal professions.

Capital: Member states shall during the transitional period progressively abolish between themselves restrictions on the movement of capital belonging to persons resident in the member states, and also any discriminatory treatment based on the nationality or place of residence of the parties or on the place in which such capital is invested. Current payments connected with movements of capital between member states shall be freed from all restrictions not later than at the end of the first stage of the transitional period.

Member states shall endeavour to avoid introducing within the Community any new exchange restrictions which affect the movement of capital and current payments connected with such movements, and making existing rules more restrictive.

TRANSPORT

With a view to establishing a common transport policy, the Council of Ministers shall, acting on a proposal of the Commission and after consulting the Economic and Social Committee and the European Parliament, lay down common rules applicable to international transport effected from or to the territory of a member state or crossing the territory of one or more member states, conditions for the admission of non-resident carriers to national transport services within a member state and any other appropriate provisions. Until these have been enacted and unless the Council of Ministers gives its unanimous consent, no member state shall apply the various provisions governing this subject at the date of the entry into force of this Treaty in such a way as to make them less favourable, in their direct or indirect effect, for carriers of other member states by comparison with its own national carriers.

Any discrimination which consists in the application by a carrier, in respect of the same goods conveyed in the same circumstances, of transport rates and conditions which differ on the ground of the country of origin or destination of the goods carried, shall be abolished in the traffic of the Community not later than at the end of the second stage of the transitional period.

A Committee with consultative status, composed of experts appointed by the governments of the member states, shall be established and attached to the Commission, without prejudice to the competence of the transport section of the Economic and Social Committee.

PART III. POLICY OF THE COMMUNITY

COMMON RULES

Enterprises: The following practices by enterprises are prohibited: the direct or indirect fixing of purchase or selling prices or of any other trading conditions; the limitation or control of production, markets, technical development of investment; market-sharing or the sharing of sources of supply; the application to parties to transactions of unequal terms in respect of equivalent supplies, thereby placing them at a competitive disadvantage; the subjection of the conclusion of a contract to the acceptance by a party of additional supplies which, either by their nature or according to commercial usage, have no connection with the subject of such contract. The provisions may be declared inapplicable if the agreements neither impose on the enterprises concerned any restrictions not indispensable to the attainment of improved production, distribution or technical progress, nor enable enterprises to eliminate competition in respect of a substantial proportion of the goods concerned.

Dumping: If, in the course of the transitional period, the Commission, at the request of a member state or of any other interested party, finds that dumping practices exist within the Common Market, it shall issue recommendations to the originator of such practices with a view to bringing them to an end. Where such practices continue, the Commission shall authorise the member state injured to take protective measures of which the Commission shall determine the conditions and particulars.

Re-importation within the Community shall be free of all customs duties, quantitative restrictions or measures with equivalent effect.

Aid granted by States: Any aid granted by a member state or granted by means of state resources which is contrary to the purposes of the treaty is forbidden. The following shall be deemed to be compatible with the Common Market:

- (a) aids of a social character granted without discrimination to individual consumers;
- (b) aids intended to remedy damage caused by natural calamities or other extraordinary events;
- (c) aids granted to the economy of certain regions of the Federal German Republic affected by the division of Germany, to the extent that they are necessary to compensate for the economic disadvantages caused by the division.

The following may be deemed to be compatible with the Common Market:

- (a) aids intended to promote the economic development of regions where the standard of living is abnormally low or where there exists serious under-employment;
- (b) aids intended to promote the execution of important projects of common European interest or to remedy a serious economic disturbance of the economy of a member state;
- (c) aids intended to facilitate the development of certain activities or of certain economic regions, provided that such aids do not change trading conditions to such a degree as would be contrary to the common interest;
- (d) such other categories of aids as may be specified by a decision of the Council of Ministers acting on a proposal of the Commission.

The Commission is charged to examine constantly all systems of aids existing in the member states, and may require any member state to abolish or modify any aid which it finds to be in conflict with the principles of the Common Market.

Fiscal Provisions: A member state shall not impose, directly or indirectly, on the products of other member states, any internal charges of any kind in excess of those applied directly or indirectly to like domestic products. Furthermore, a member state shall not impose on the product of other member states any internal charges of such a nature as to afford indirect protection to other productions. Member states shall, not later than at the beginning of the second stage of the transitional period, abolish or amend any provisions existing at the date of the entry into force of the Treaty which are contrary to these rules. Products exported to any member state may not benefit from any drawback on internal charges in excess of those charges imposed directly or indirectly on them. Subject to these conditions, any member states which levy a turnover tax calculated by a cumulative multi-stage system may, in the case of internal charges imposed by them on imported products or of drawbacks granted by them on exported products, establish average rates for specific products or groups of products.

Approximation of Laws: The Council, acting by means of a unanimous vote on a proposal of the Commission, shall issue directives for the approximation of such legislative and administrative provisions of the member states as have a direct incidence on the establishment or functioning of the Common Market. The European Parliament and the Economic and Social Committee shall be consulted concerning any directives whose implementation in one or more of the member states would involve amendment of legislative provisions.

THE EUROPEAN COMMUNITIES

ECONOMIC POLICY

Balance of Payments: Member states are charged to co-ordinate their economic policies in order that each may ensure the equilibrium of their overall balances of payments and maintain confidence in their currency, together with a high level of employment and stability of prices. In order to promote this co-ordination a Monetary Committee is established (see section on Organization, above).

Each member state engages itself to treat its policy with regard to exchange rates as a matter of common interest. Where a member state is in difficulties or seriously threatened with difficulties as regards its balance of payments as a result either of overall disequilibrium of the balance of payments or of the kinds of currency at its disposal, and where such difficulties are likely, in particular, to prejudice the functioning of the Common Market or the progressive establishment of the common commercial policy, the Commission shall examine the situation and indicate the measures which it recommends to the state concerned to adopt; if this action proves insufficient to overcome the difficulties, the Commission shall, after consulting the Monetary Committee, recommend to the Council of Ministers the granting of mutual assistance. This mutual assistance may take the form of:

- (a) concerted action in regard to any other international organization to which the member states may have recourse;
- (b) any measures necessary to avoid diversions of commercial traffic where the state in difficulty maintains or re-establishes quantitative restrictions with regard to third countries;
- (c) the granting of limited credits by other member states, subject to their agreement.

Furthermore, during the transitional period, mutual assistance may also take the form of special reductions in customs duties or enlargements of quotas. If the mutual assistance recommended by the Commission is not granted by the Council, or if the mutual assistance granted and the measures taken prove insufficient, the Commission shall authorise the state in difficulties to take measures of safeguard, of which the Commission shall determine the conditions and particulars. In the case of a sudden balance-of-payments crisis, any member state may take immediate provisional measures of safeguard, which must be submitted to the consideration of the Commission as soon as possible. On the basis of an opinion of the Commission and after consulting the Monetary Committee, the Council may decide that the state concerned shall amend, suspend or abolish such measures.

Commercial Policy: Member states shall co-ordinate their commercial relations with third countries in such a way as to bring about, not later than at the expiry of the transitional period, the conditions necessary to the implementation of a common policy in the matter of external trade. After the expiry of the transitional period, the common commercial policy shall be based on uniform principles, particularly in regard to tariff amendments, the conclusion of tariff or trade agreements, the alignment of measures of liberalisation, export policy and protective commercial measures, including measures to be taken in cases of dumping or subsidies. The Commission will be authorised to conduct negotiations with third countries. As from the end of the transitional period, member states shall, in respect of all matters of particular interest in regard to the Common Market, within the framework of any international organizations of an economic character, only proceed by way of common action. The Commission shall for this purpose submit to the Council of Ministers proposals concerning the scope and implementation of such common action. During the transitional period, member states shall consult with each other with a view to concerting their action and, as far as possible, adopting a uniform attitude.

SOCIAL POLICY

Social Provisions: Without prejudice to the other provisions of the Treaty and in conformity with its general objectives, it shall be the aim of the Commission to promote close collaboration between member states in the social field, particularly in matters relating to employment, labour legislation and working conditions, occupational and continuation training, social security, protection against occupational accidents and diseases, industrial hygiene, the law as to trade unions and collective bargaining between employers and workers.

Each member state shall in the course of the first stage of the transitional period ensure and subsequently maintain the application of the principle of equal pay for men and women.

The European Social Fund: See the section on Organization above.

The European Investment Bank: See the section on Organization above.

PART IV. OVERSEAS COUNTRIES AND TERRITORIES

The member states agree to bring into association with the Community the non-European countries and territories which have special relations with Belgium, France, Italy and the Netherlands in order to promote the economic and social development of these countries and territories and to establish close economic relations between them and the Community as a whole.

Member states shall, in their commercial exchanges with the countries and territories, apply the same rules which they apply among themselves pursuant to the Treaty. Each country or territory shall apply to its commercial exchanges with member states and with the other countries and territories the same rules which it applied in respect of the European state with which it has special relations. Member states shall contribute to the investments required by the progressive development of these countries and territories.

Customs duties on trade between member states and the countries and territories are to be progressively abolished according to the same timetable as for trade between the member states themselves. The countries and territories may, however, levy customs duties which correspond to the needs of their development and to the requirements of their industrialisation or which, being of a fiscal nature, have the object of contributing to their budgets.

(The Convention implementing these provisions is concluded for a period of five years only from the date of entry into force of the Treaty.)

THE EUROPEAN COMMUNITIES

PART V. INSTITUTIONS OF THE COMMUNITY

PROVISIONS GOVERNING INSTITUTIONS

For accounts of the European Parliament, the Council of Ministers, the Commission, the Court, the Economic and Social Committee, the Monetary Committee, the European Investment Bank, the European Social Fund and the Development Fund, see the section on Organization above.

For the achievement of their aims and under the conditions provided for in the Treaty, the Council and the Commission shall adopt regulations and directives, make decisions and formulate recommendations or opinions. Regulations shall have a general application and shall be binding in every respect and directly applicable in each member state. Directives shall bind any member state to which they are addressed, as to the result to be achieved, while leaving to domestic agencies a competence as to form and means. Decisions shall be binding in every respect for the addressees named therein. Recommendations and opinions shall have no binding force.

FINANCIAL PROVISIONS

Estimates shall be drawn up for each financial year for all revenues and expenditures of the Community, including those relating to the European Social Fund, and shall be shown in the budget.

The revenues of the budget shall comprise (apart from those contributions which are intended to meet the expenses of the European Social Fund, and apart from any other revenues) the financial contributions of member states fixed according to the following scale:

Belgium	7.9
France	28.0
Italy	28.0
German Federal Republic	28.0
Luxembourg	0.2
Netherlands	7.9

The financial contributions of the member states which are intended to meet the expenses of the European Social Fund shall be fixed according to the following scale:

Belgium	8.8
France	32.0
Italy	20.0
German Federal Republic	32.0
Luxembourg	0.2
Netherlands	7.0

The Commission shall implement the budget on its own responsibility and within the limits of the appropriations made. The Council of Ministers shall:

- lay down the financial regulations specifying, in particular, the procedure to be adopted for establishing and implementing the budget, and for rendering and auditing accounts;
- determine the methods and procedure whereby the contributions by member states shall be made available to the Commission; and
- establish rules concerning the responsibility of pay-commissioners and accountants and arrange for the relevant supervision.

PART VI. GENERAL AND FINAL PROVISIONS

Member states shall, in so far as is necessary, engage in negotiations with each other with a view to ensuring for the benefit of their nationals:

- the protection of persons as well as the enjoyment and protections of rights under the conditions granted by each state to its own nationals;
- the elimination of double taxation within the Community;
- the mutual recognition of companies, the maintenance of their legal personality in cases where the registered office is transferred from one country to another, and the possibility for companies subject to the municipal law of different member states to form mergers; and
- the simplification of the formalities governing the reciprocal recognition and execution of judicial decisions and arbitral awards.

Within a period of three years after the date of the entry into force of the Treaty, member states shall treat nationals of other member states in the same manner, as regards financial participation by such nationals in the capital of companies, as they treat their own nationals, without prejudice to the application of the other provisions of the Treaty.

The Treaty shall in no way prejudice the system existing in member states in respect of property.

The provisions of the Treaty shall not detract from the following rules:

- no member state shall be obliged to supply information the disclosure of which it considers contrary to the essential interests of its security;
- any member state may take the measures which it considers necessary for the protection of the essential interests of its security, and which are connected with the production of or the trade in arms, ammunition and war material; such measures shall not, however, prejudice conditions of competition in the Common Market in respect of products not intended for specifically military purposes.

The list of products to which (b) applies shall be determined by the Council in the course of the first year after the date of entry into force of the Treaty. The list may be subsequently amended by the unanimous vote of the Council on a proposal of the Commission.

Member states shall consult one another for the purpose of enacting in common the necessary provisions to prevent the functioning of the Common Market from being affected by measures which a member state may be called upon to take in case of serious internal disturbances affecting public order, in case of war or serious international tension constituting a threat of war or in order to carry out undertakings into which it has entered for the purpose of maintaining peace and international security.

In the course of the transitional period, where there are serious difficulties which are likely to persist in any sector of economic activity or difficulties which may seriously impair the economic situation in any region, any member state may ask for authorisation to take measures of safeguard in order to restore the situation and adapt the sector concerned to the Common Market economy.

THE EUROPEAN COMMUNITIES

The provisions of the Treaty shall not affect those of the Treaty establishing the European Coal and Steel Community, nor those of the Treaty establishing the European Atomic Energy Community; nor shall they be an obstacle to the existence or completion of regional unions between Belgium and Luxembourg, and between Belgium, Luxembourg and the Netherlands, in so far as the objectives of these regional unions are not achieved by the application of this Treaty.

The government of any member state of the Commission may submit to the Council proposals for the revision of the Treaty.

Any European state may apply to become a member of the Community.

The Community may conclude with a third country, a union of states or an international organisation agreements creating an association embodying reciprocal rights and obligations, joint actions and special procedures.

The Treaty is concluded for an unlimited period.

SUMMARY OF ECSC TREATY

THE EUROPEAN COAL AND STEEL COMMUNITY

The European Coal and Steel Community is based on a common market, common objectives and common institutions. The aims of the Community are to contribute to the expansion of the economy, the development of employment and the improvement of the standard of living in the participating countries through the creation, in harmony with the general economy of the member states, of a common market. With these aims in view, the institutions of the Community are to ensure that the common market is regularly supplied, while taking into account the needs of third countries; to assure to all consumers in comparable positions within the common market equal access to the sources of production; to seek the establishment of the lowest possible prices without involving any corresponding rise either in the prices charged by the same enterprise in other transactions or in the price-level as a whole in another period, while at the same time permitting necessary amortisation and providing the possibility of normal returns on invested capital; to ensure that conditions are maintained which will encourage enterprises to expand and improve their ability to produce and to promote a policy of rational development of natural resources, while avoiding undue exhaustion of such resources; to promote the improvement of the living and working conditions of the labour force in each of the industries under its jurisdiction so as to harmonise those conditions in an upward direction; to foster the development of international trade and ensure that equitable limits are observed in prices charged in foreign markets; and to promote the regular expansion and the modernisation of production as well as the improvement of quality, under conditions which preclude any protection against competing industries except where justified by illegitimate action on the part of such industries or in their favour.

The following are considered incompatible with the common market and are therefore abolished and prohibited:

- (a) import and export duties, or taxes with an equivalent effect, and quantitative restrictions upon the movement of coal and steel;
- (b) measures or practices discriminating among producers, buyers or consumers, especially as concerns prices, delivery terms and transport rates, as well as practices or measures which hamper the buyer in the free choice of his supplier;
- (c) subsidies or state assistance, or special charges imposed by the state, in any form whatsoever;

- (d) restrictive practices tending towards the division or the exploitation of the market.

The Community binds itself to assist the interested parties to take action by collecting information, organising consultations and defining general objectives; to place financial means at the disposal of enterprises for their investments and participate in the expenses of readaptation; to assure the establishment, the maintenance and the observance of the normal conditions of competition, and take direct action with respect to production and the co-operation of the market only when circumstances make it absolutely necessary; and to publish the reasons for its action and take the necessary measures to ensure observance of the rules set forth in the Treaty.

THE INSTITUTIONS OF THE COMMUNITY

(The High Authority and the Council of Ministers of ECSC were merged with the Commissions and Councils of Ministers of the Economic Community and Euratom in July 1967.)

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL PROVISIONS

The High Authority is empowered to consult governments and various interested parties such as enterprises, workers, consumers and dealers and their associations, as well as experts, and to gather such information as may be necessary to the accomplishment of its mission. It is not permitted to divulge information which by its nature is considered a trade secret, and in particular information pertaining to the commercial relations or the breakdown of the costs of production of enterprises. With this reservation, it must publish such data as may be useful to governments or to any other interested parties.

The High Authority may impose fines and daily penalty payments upon enterprises which evade their obligations under this title.

Financial Provisions: The High Authority is empowered to procure its funds by imposing a levy on the production of coal and steel, by borrowing, and by receiving grants. The levies are intended to cover administrative expenses, non-repayable assistance relating to readaptation, investments and financial assistance and expenditure devoted to encouraging technical and economic research. Funds obtained by borrowing may only be used to grant loans.

Investments and Financial Assistance: The High Authority may facilitate the carrying out of investment programmes by granting loans to enterprises or by giving its guarantee to other loans which they obtain. With the unanimous agreement of the Council, the High Authority may by the same means assist the financing of works and installations which contribute directly or mainly to an increase of production, to lower production costs, or which facilitate the marketing of products subject to its jurisdiction. The High Authority may require enterprises to submit individual projects in advance, and, having given the interested parties an opportunity to express their views, issue a reasoned opinion on any such projects. If the High Authority finds that the financing of a project or the operation of any proposed installation would require subsidies, assistance, protection or discrimination contrary to the present Treaty, it may issue a binding prohibition to the enterprise in question, forbidding it to use resources other than its own funds to carry out such a project.

The High Authority is obliged to encourage technical and economic research concerning the production and the development of consumption of coal and steel, as well as workers' safety in these industries. If the introduction of technical processes or new equipment, within the framework of the general objectives laid down by the High Authority, should lead to an exceptionally large reduction in labour requirements in the coal or steel industries, making it especially difficult in one or more areas to re-employ the workers discharged, the High Authority, on the request of the interested governments, may facilitate the financing of such programmes as it may approve for the creation, either in the industries subject to its jurisdiction or, with the agreement of the Council, in any other industry, of new and economically sound activities capable of assuring productive employment to the workers thus discharged, and shall grant non-repayable assistance as a contribution to payment of compensation, granting of re-settlement allowances and the financing of technical retraining of workers.

Production: The High Authority is to give preference to the indirect means of action at its disposal, such as co-operation with governments to stabilise or influence general consumption, particularly that of public services, and intervention on prices and commercial policy.

If, in the case of a decline in demand, it considers that the Community is faced with a manifest crisis, it must, after consulting the Consultative Committee and with the agreement of the Council, establish a system of production quotas. Failing this, any member state may bring the matter to the attention of the Council, which, by unanimous vote, may oblige the High Authority to establish a quota system. The High Authority may in particular regulate the rate of operation of enterprises by appropriate levies on tonnages exceeding a reference level defined by a general decision. The sums thus obtained will be earmarked for the support of those enterprises whose rate of production has fallen below the reference level.

If the Community is faced with a serious shortage of certain or of all the products subject to the jurisdiction of the High Authority, the latter must propose appropriate measures to the Council, unless the Council decides to the contrary by unanimous vote. On the basis of these proposals, the Council must establish consumption priorities and determine the allocation of the coal and steel resources of the Community among the industries subject to its jurisdiction, exports and other consumption. On the basis of the consumption priorities thus established, the High Authority is empowered, after consulting the enterprises concerned, to draw up production programmes which the enterprises are obliged to carry out.

Prices: Pricing practices contrary to the provision of Title I are prohibited and in particular unfair competitive practices, especially purely temporary or local price reductions, the purpose of which is to acquire a monopoly within the common market and discriminatory practices involving within the common market the application by a seller of unequal conditions to comparable transactions, especially according to the nationality of the buyer. In certain cases, the High Authority may fix maximum and/or minimum prices for one or more products subject to its jurisdiction, both within the common market and with regard to export.

Agreements and Concentrations: All agreements among enterprises, all decisions of associations of enterprises, and all concerted practices, tending, directly or indirectly, to prevent, restrict or distort the normal operation of competition within the common market are forbidden, and in particular those tending to fix or determine prices, to restrict or control production, technical development or investments, or to allocate markets, products, customers or sources of supply. However, the High Authority may authorise agreements to specialise in the production of, or to engage in the joint buying or selling of specified products, if it finds that this will contribute to a substantial improvement in production or distribution, or that the agreement in question is essential to achieve these results and is not more restrictive than is necessary, or that it is not capable of giving the interested enterprises any discriminatory powers or advantages. Similar regulations apply to concentrations.

Impairment of the Conditions of Competition: If any action of any member state is liable to provoke a serious disequilibrium by substantially increasing differences in costs of production otherwise than through variations in productivity, the High Authority, after consulting the Consultative Committee and the Council, may take the following steps:

If the action of the state produces harmful effects for coal or steel enterprises falling under the jurisdiction of the said state, the High Authority may authorise that state to grant assistance to such enterprises, the amount, conditions and duration of which shall be determined in agreement with the High Authority. The same provisions are to apply in the case of a variation in wages and in working conditions which would have the same effects, even if such variation is not the result of an action by that state.

If the action of that state produces harmful effects for coal and steel enterprises subject to the jurisdiction of other member states, the High Authority may address a recommendation to the said state with a view to remedying these effects by such measures as that state may consider most compatible with its own economic equilibrium.

If the action of the said state reduces differences in costs of production by granting a special advantage to, or by imposing special burdens on, coal or steel enterprises falling under its jurisdiction in comparison with the other industries in the same country, the High Authority is empowered to address the necessary recommendations to the state in question, after consulting the Consultative Committee and the Council.

THE EUROPEAN COMMUNITIES

Wages and Movement of Labour: The methods of fixing wages and social benefits in force in the various member states are not affected by the Treaty, subject to certain provisions.

If the High Authority finds that any wage levels are abnormally low, whether these levels are fixed by enterprises or by government decisions, it may address recommendations to the enterprises concerned or government interested. Similar action may be taken when a lowering of wages entails a drop in the standard of living of the labour force and at the same time is being used as a means of permanent economic adjustment by enterprises or as a means of competition between enterprises. This provision does not apply to:

- (a) overall measures taken by a member state to re-establish its external equilibrium, without prejudice to the possible application of the provisions dealing with the impairment of the conditions of competition;
- (b) wage decreases resulting from the application of a sliding scale established by law or by contract;
- (c) wage decreases resulting from a decrease in the cost of living;
- (d) wage decreases intended to correct abnormal increases previously granted under exceptional circumstances which no longer apply.

With the exception of (a) and (b) above, any wage decrease affecting the whole labour force of an enterprise or a sizeable proportion thereof must be notified to the High Authority.

The member states bind themselves to renounce any restriction, based on nationality, on the employment in the coal and steel industries of workers of recognised qualifications, subject to limitations imposed by the fundamental needs of health and public order. In the case of other (non-qualified) workers and where the expansion of production in the coal and steel industries might be hampered by a shortage of suitable labour, the member states agree to adapt their immigration regulations, and in particular, to facilitate the re-employment of workers from the coal and steel industries of other member states. Any discrimination in payment and working conditions as between national and foreign workers, without prejudice to special measures concerning frontier workers, are prohibited. Social security measures are not to impede the movement of labour.

Transport: In order to implement the application of such transport rates for coal and steel as will make possible comparable price conditions to consumers in comparable positions, discriminations in transport rates and conditions of any kind, which are based on the country of origin or of destination of the products in question are forbidden.

Commercial Policy: Unless otherwise provided in the Treaty, the responsibilities of the governments of the member states for commercial policy are not affected by its application. Minimum rates, below which the member states bind themselves not to lower their customs duties on coal and steel with regard to third countries, and maximum rates, above which they bind themselves not to raise such duties, may be fixed by unanimous decision of the Council upon the proposal of the High Authority, which may act on its own initiative or at the request of a member state. Between these limits, each government is to set its tariffs according to its own national procedure, upon the modification of which the High Authority may issue opinions. The High Authority is empowered to supervise the administration of import and export licences with regard to third countries in the cases of coal and steel. The member states bind themselves to keep the High Authority informed of proposed commercial agreements or similar arrangements as far as they relate to coal, steel or the importation of the other raw materials and of specialised equipment necessary for the production of coal and steel in the member states.

GENERAL PROVISIONS

Among the numerous provisions of this title, the following are significant:

The establishment of the Community does not in any way prejudice the system of ownership of the enterprises subject to the provisions of this Treaty.

As far as they are competent to do so, the member states shall take any appropriate measures to guarantee the settling of international accounts arising out of trade in coal and steel within the common market; they will lend each other assistance to facilitate such settlements.

If the High Authority considers that a state has failed in any of the obligations incumbent upon it by virtue of the Treaty, it shall, after permitting the state in question to present its views, take note of the failure in a reasoned decision accompanied by a justification. It shall allow the state in question a period of time within which to provide for the execution of its obligation. Such a state may appeal to the Court's general jurisdiction within a period of two months from the notification of the decision. If the state has not taken steps to fulfil its obligations within the period fixed by the High Authority, or if its appeal has been rejected, the High Authority may, with the agreement of the Council acting by a two-thirds majority:

- (a) suspend the payment of sums which the High Authority may owe to the state in question under the Treaty;
- (b) adopt measures or authorise the other member states to adopt measures which would otherwise be contrary to certain provisions of Title I, so as to correct the effects of the failure in question.

An appeal to the Court's general jurisdiction may be lodged against these decisions within two months following their notification. Should these measures prove ineffective, the High Authority shall refer the matter to the Council.

The decisions of the High Authority imposing financial obligations on enterprises shall have executive force.

After the period of transition, the government of any member state and the High Authority may propose amendments to the Treaty. Such proposals shall be submitted to the Council. If the Council, acting by a two-thirds majority, approves a conference of the representatives of the governments of the member states, such a conference shall be immediately called by the President of the Council, with a view to agreeing on any modifications to be made to the provisions of the Treaty. Such amendments shall come into force after ratification by all the member states.

The Treaty is concluded for a period of fifty years from the date of its entry into force.

Any European state may request to accede to this

THE EUROPEAN COMMUNITIES

Treaty. It shall address its request to the Council, which shall act by unanimous vote after obtaining the opinion of the High Authority. Also by unanimous vote, the Council shall fix the terms of accession, which shall become effective on the day the instrument of accession is received by the government acting as depositary of the Treaty.

SUMMARY OF EURATOM TREATY

The preamble to the Treaty states that the signatory powers:

"Realising that nuclear energy constitutes the essential resource for ensuring the expansion and invigoration of production and for effecting progress in peaceful achievement,

"Convinced that only a common effort undertaken without delay can lead to achievements commensurate with the creative capacities of their countries,

"Resolved to create the conditions required for the development of a powerful nuclear industry which will provide extensive supplies of energy, lead to the modernization of technical processes and in addition have many other applications contributing to the well-being of their peoples,

"Anxious to establish conditions of safety which will eliminate danger to the life and health of the people,

"Desirous of associating with international organizations concerned with the peaceful development of atomic energy,

"Have decided to establish a European Atomic Energy Community (EURATOM)."

AIMS OF THE COMMUNITY

ARTICLE 1. It shall be the aim of the Community to contribute to the raising of the standard of living in member states and to the development of commercial exchanges with other countries by the creation of conditions necessary for the speedy establishment and growth of nuclear industries.

ARTICLE 2. For the attainment of its aims the Community shall:

- (a) develop research and ensure the dissemination of technical knowledge;
- (b) establish, and ensure the application of, uniform safety standards to protect the health of workers and of the general public;
- (c) facilitate investment and ensure, particularly by encouraging business enterprise, the construction of the basic facilities required for the development of nuclear energy within the Community;
- (d) ensure a regular and equitable supply of ores and nuclear fuels to all users in the Community;
- (e) guarantee, by appropriate measures of control, that nuclear materials are not diverted for purposes other than those for which they are intended;
- (f) exercise the property rights conferred upon it in respect of special fissionable materials;
- (g) ensure extensive markets and access to the best technical means by the creation of a common market for specialized materials and equipment, by the free movement of capital for nuclear investment, and by freedom of employment for specialists within the Community;

(h) establish with other countries and with international organizations any contacts likely to promote progress in the peaceful uses of nuclear energy.

ARTICLE 3. The achievement of the tasks entrusted to the Community shall be ensured by:

- an Assembly
- a Council
- a Commission
- a Court of Justice

The Council and the Commission shall be assisted by an Economic and Social Committee acting in a consultative capacity.

PROVISIONS FOR NUCLEAR ENERGY

Articles 4-11: deal with development of research.

Article 8 provides for the establishment of a Joint Nuclear Research Centre.

Articles 12-29: the dissemination of information, including (Articles 24-27) provisions concerning security.

GENERAL PROVISIONS

Articles 184-208: cover certain legal aspects of the Community's status and define certain technical terms.

Article 205 allows for the application of any European state to membership of the Community.

Article 208 states that the Treaty is concluded for an unlimited period.

PROVISIONS FOR THE INITIAL PERIOD

Articles 209-224.

OTHER TREATIES

The following additional treaties have been signed by the members of the European Communities:

Treaty Instituting a Single Council and a Single Commission of the European Communities: signed in Brussels on April 8th, 1965, by the six original members.

Treaty Modifying Certain Budgetary Arrangements of the European Communities and of the Treaty Instituting a Single Council and a Single Commission of the European Communities: signed in Luxembourg on April 22nd, 1970, by the six original members.

Treaty Concerning the Accession of the Kingdom of Denmark, Ireland, the Kingdom of Norway and the United Kingdom of Great Britain to the European Economic Community and the European Atomic Energy Community: signed in Brussels on January 22nd, 1972, by the six original members of the European Communities and the four (then) acceding states.

The Accession of the new members to the European Coal and Steel Community was enacted, in accordance with the treaty of that Community, by a Decision of the Council of the European Communities.

Annexed to the Treaty of Accession and the Decision of the Council was an Act Concerning the Conditions of Accession and the Adjustments to the Treaties, consisting of 161 articles and dealing mainly with the transitional measures to be adopted.

Amendments necessitated by the non-accession of Norway were made on January 1st, 1973, when the Treaty of Accession, the Decision of the Council and the annexed Act took effect.

QUOTAS

IMPORTS

Restrictions were eliminated by December 31st, 1966.

EXPORTS

Restrictions were eliminated by December 31st, 1961.

FINLAND-EFTA ASSOCIATION AGREEMENT

Entered into force June 1961. First tariff reductions and relaxation of quotas took place on July 1st, 1961. The main principle of the Agreement is to establish a new free trade area where Finland will have the same rights and obligations towards EFTA members as they have among themselves.

OTHER EFTA ACTIVITIES

In recent years EFTA's work has been increasingly devoted to the problems of non-tariff barriers to trade. Part of this work has been based explicitly on particular articles in the Convention, especially those relating to the conditions of competition, as mentioned below.

Work is also being done on non-tariff barriers which are not specifically mentioned in the Convention. On these, EFTA's aim is to contribute to international agreements covering a wider area than that of the Association and, in the meantime, to seek in EFTA solutions to non-tariff barrier problems which will facilitate trade without limiting possibilities of finding wider agreements. Examples of the barriers being dealt with are differences in compulsory technical requirements for electrical and other products, and in rules for obtaining patent protection for new products.

BUDGET

Net expenditure in 1972-73: Swiss francs 7,350,125.

CONVENTION

EFTA's objectives are:

- (a) to promote in the Area of the Association and in each Member State a sustained expansion of economic activity, full employment, increased productivity and the rational use of resources, financial stability and continuous improvement in living standards;
- (b) to secure that trade between Member States takes place in conditions of fair competition;
- (c) to avoid significant disparity between Member States in the conditions of supply of raw materials produced within the Area of the Association; and
- (d) to contribute to the harmonious development and expansion of world trade and to the progressive removal of barriers to it.

The main provisions of the Convention are:

Tariffs. Elimination of tariffs on industrial goods was originally to be achieved at the latest by January 1970, but this date was brought forward to December 31st, 1966.

Quotas. The Convention provides for the progressive reduction of quantitative restrictions on all imports from Member States and their complete elimination by January 1st, 1970. This date also was brought forward to December 31st, 1966.

Origin Rules. Member States do not have a common external tariff in relation to countries outside the area.

"Origin" rules have therefore been worked out to identify the products of member countries to which the tariff reductions will apply.

Safeguards. Member countries will be free to take action which they consider necessary for the protection of their essential security interests and, consistently with their other international obligations, their balance of payments. In certain circumstances a Member State may also take special safeguarding action where the application of the Convention leads to serious difficulties in a particular sector of industry.

Competition. The Convention contains provisions to ensure that the benefits which are expected from the removal of tariffs and quotas are not nullified through the use of other measures by Governments, public undertakings or private industries. These include provisions about subsidies, restrictive business practices and discriminatory restrictions against nationals of Member States wishing to establish business anywhere in the area.

Agriculture and Fish. Special arrangements have been made for agricultural goods and fish and other marine products. The objective is to facilitate reasonable reciprocity to those member states whose economies depend to a great extent on agricultural or fish exports. Arrangements have also been concluded between several member countries in respect of trade in agricultural goods.

EUROPEAN ORGANIZATION FOR NUCLEAR RESEARCH—CERN

1211 Geneva 23, Switzerland

Telephone: (022) 41 98 11.

The Conseil Européen pour la Recherche Nucléaire (CERN) was established in 1952 following intergovernmental meetings called by UNESCO. It was formally superseded by the Organization in 1954. The essential aim was to establish at Geneva a fundamental research laboratory centred on two particle accelerators with which European scientists could continue their studies into the structure of matter at the nuclear and sub-nuclear levels. Following decisions taken in 1965 storage rings were added on adjacent land in France, and in 1971 the decision was taken to build a much larger accelerator alongside the existing laboratory straddling the Franco-Swiss frontier. The research is primarily undertaken by teams of visiting scientists from member states. Work of a military nature is excluded, and the results of experimental and theoretical work are published, principally in the traditional scientific literature.

ACTIVITIES

The Convention defining the objectives of CERN provides "for collaboration among European States in nuclear research" and the "organization and sponsoring of international co-operation...including co-operation outside the laboratory". Of the two accelerators foreseen in the beginning, the 600 MeV Synchro-Cyclotron began operation in August 1957 and the 25-28 GeV Proton Synchrotron in November 1959. The second machine was not only the largest in the world at the time but the first to use the now established strong-focusing principle.

Both machines have been continually improved as regards performance and utilization. The current programme involves an increase by a factor 10 in the beam current of the cyclotron and a rise in output of the synchrotron of approximately 5 times. In 1965 the Council of CERN authorized the construction of Intersecting Storage Rings to be built alongside the synchrotron for research on colliding beams. Protons accelerated in the synchrotron are fed into the two intersecting rings in opposite senses and stored for up to a day. The beams can be made to collide in the intersecting sections. Construction was finished in March 1971.

In 1971 it was decided to build a new particle accelerator adjacent to the existing laboratory, now termed Laboratory I. Each laboratory is under the charge of its own Director-General but a fusion of the two will take place some time in the future. All members except Greece participate in the programme for Laboratory II.

The ISR as well as additional experimental and computing facilities have been built on 39.5 ha. of land in France, the rest of Laboratory I occupying 40.5 ha. in the Commune of Meyrin in Switzerland. The seat of the Organization is officially in Switzerland whilst the laboratory physically straddles the frontier.

Laboratory II also straddles the frontier, the area of land reserved being 412 ha. in France and 68 ha. in Switzerland. Building restrictions have been imposed on a further 509 ha. in France and 63 ha. in Switzerland to allow for a possible subsequent expansion. The accelerator—the Super Proton Synchrotron—is being built deep underground in a ring tunnel 2.2 km. diameter. The energy the accelerator will be able to reach is 400 GeV and the provision of research for the highest energies occupies the later part of the 8-year programme. It is foreseen that research at an intermediate energy, e.g. 200 GeV, can begin in the sixth year of the programme using the experimental facilities of Laboratory I.

The injector for the SPS is to be the existing proton synchrotron which will be then fulfilling the triple role of SPS injector, feed for the ISR and source of beams of particles for experiments at energies up to 28 GeV.

The majority of the research undertaken at CERN is carried out by mixed teams of physicists principally from the Universities and Research Centres of Europe. The scientists may be attached to CERN for a period of weeks only, or become temporary members of the staff for a year or so. Only a small proportion remain as permanent staff members. The majority of the CERN complement are concerned with machine design, development and operation.

To cater for a wide range of potential users the techniques of beam sharing have become highly developed. Major detection installations include a 2-metre liquid hydrogen bubble chamber and Gargamelle, a 12,000-litre heavy liquid bubble chamber. Coming into operation in 1973 and built under a tripartite agreement between CERN, the Commissariat à l'Energie Atomique of France, and the German Government, is a 3.7-m liquid hydrogen bubble chamber incorporating a superconducting magnet. A very large spark chamber within a superconducting magnet came into operation in 1972.

To provide the large computing capacity needed for the analysis of bubble chamber film and electronics experiments data, as well as scientific computation, CERN has built up an extensive network of computers, a number of which are working on-line. In the central facility a CDC 7600 is headed by a CDC 6500 and a CDC 6400 and they, in turn, are connected to a number of remote input/output stations. Most electronics experiments have computers built into the data-taking system; equipment for the automatic measurement and analysis of bubble chamber film also incorporates on-line computers.

Close collaboration has always been sought with the high energy physics laboratories of non-member States, and relations with comparable centres in the U.S. have from the beginning been very close. A system of exchange of scientists with the Joint Nuclear Research Centre of Dubna (U.S.S.R.) was initiated in 1960. This exchange has been developed and an agreement was signed with the U.S.S.R. State Committee for the Application of Atomic Energy in July 1967 for collaboration in research on the 70 GeV accelerator at Serpukhov, which began operation in November of the same year.

Under this agreement CERN has supplied certain equipment for beam extraction and separation while the Soviet authorities are making it possible for joint electronics experiments to be conducted on their machine and will make available bubble chamber pictures for analysis by CERN scientists.

FINANCE CONTRIBUTIONS

All twelve member states of CERN now participate in both the Basic and the ISR Programmes, and their budgets can, as a result, be considered together. Eleven member states currently participate in the 300 GeV Programme, the non-participant being Greece. The proportional contributions of member states for 1972, 1973 and 1974 are based on their average national revenues over the years 1968, 1969 and 1970, as calculated by the UN Statistical Office.

United Kingdom

Associate State: Spain.

ORGANIZATION

PERMANENT COMMISSION

The governing body of EUROCONTROL; consists of two representatives from each member state, who are the Ministers responsible for respectively civil and military aviation.

President: PETER SHORE (United Kingdom).

Vice-President: M. MART (Luxembourg).

AIR TRAFFIC SERVICES AGENCY

Administered by a Committee of Management and a Director-General.

COMMITTEE OF MANAGEMENT

Composed of two representatives of each National Administration. One of the two representatives is a highly placed official exercising in his country responsibilities in matters of air navigation.

President: N. A. O'BRIEN (Ireland).

Vice-President: A. A. de Roode (Netherlands).

DIRECTOR-GENERAL

Heads the General Directorate with five Directorates (Operations, Engineering, Personnel and Administration, Finance, General Secretariat) and the EUROCONTROL External Services.

Director-General: R. BULIN (France).

EUROCONTROL EXTERNAL SERVICES

Eurocontrol Experimental Centre: B.P. 15, F-91220 Brétigny, France; provides the planning staff at headquarters with technical operational aid of a practical nature, in particular by undertaking experiments to improve or to develop control methods and procedures and to evaluate air traffic control and air navigation equipment and systems. Also undertakes experimental work requested by National Administrations of Member and Non-Member States.

Eurocontrol Institute for Air Navigation Services: Luxembourg; a school for the advanced training of ATC personnel (controllers, programmers and engineers) and an air navigation documentation centre.

Central Route Charges Office: Brussels; collects charges on behalf of the EUROCONTROL member states, as well as for Austria, Portugal, Spain and Switzerland, for the use of route facilities and services.

Upper Area Control Centre: Postbus 78, NL-Beek (L) (Netherlands); responsible for providing progressive air traffic control services in the upper air space over Belgium, Luxembourg, Netherlands and the northern part of the Federal Republic of Germany. The centre began operations in 1972, and is already providing air traffic control services in the upper airspace of Belgium and Luxembourg.

Upper Area Control Centre: Karlsruhe; to be responsible for providing air traffic control services in the upper air space over the southern part of the Federal Republic of Germany. The centre is due to begin operations in 1975.

Upper Area Control Centre: Shannon; to be responsible for providing air traffic control services in the upper air space over Ireland. The centre is due to begin operations in 1974.

The following services are concerned with co-ordination with National Air Traffic Services of France, and of the United Kingdom and Ireland respectively.

Regional Service—France: CEDEX A No. 181, F-94-396 Orly Aerogare, France.

Regional Service—Ireland/United Kingdom: Heathrow House, Bath Road, Hounslow TW5 9QQ, England.

EUROPEAN ORGANIZATION FOR THE SAFETY OF AIR NAVIGATION

AIMS

To strengthen the co-operation between member states in matters of air navigation and in particular to provide for the common organization of the air traffic services in the upper airspace, including:

The promotion, in co-operation with the national military authorities, of the adoption of measures and of the installation and operation of facilities designed to ensure the safety of air navigation and ensure an orderly and rapid flow of air traffic, within defined air space under the sovereignty of the Contracting Parties or in respect of which the air traffic services have been entrusted to those Parties under international agreements.

Standardization of national regulations governing air traffic and standardization of the operation of the services responsible for ensuring the safety and regulation of air traffic, on the basis of the Standards and Recommended Practices of ICAO and having regard to the requirements of national defence.

Promotion of a common policy to be followed in respect of radio aids, telecommunications and corresponding airborne equipment.

Promotion and co-ordination of studies relating to air navigation services and installations in order to take account of technical developments.

Determination of policy in respect of remuneration for services rendered to users.

ACTIVITIES

Responsibility for Air Traffic Control: exercising operational, legal and financial responsibilities for air traffic control services in the upper air space of the member states.

Establishing of New Facilities: necessary for the performance of the following tasks: to prevent collisions between aircraft, to ensure the orderly and rapid flow of air traffic, to provide advice and information useful for the safe and efficient conduct of flights, to notify appropriate organizations regarding aircraft in need of search and rescue aid, and assist such organizations as required. These installations are, inter alia, air traffic control centres, air traffic research and experimental centres and schools for advanced and specialized training of personnel of air navigation services.

Studies and Plans: elaboration, in conjunction with the National Administrations of member states, of operational plans for air traffic services in the upper air space of the Benelux/Federal Republic of Germany, Ireland and United Kingdom and France regions. Fundamental study of a common system of air traffic control over Europe after 1980. Linked to this study a five-year programme of operational research is under way with a view to applying scientific methods to the choice of a future optimal system. Study of the impact of supersonic aircraft on control requirements and procedures. Study of the application of modern technology to the requirements of air traffic control. General operational studies of airspace organization, route networks and of the management of traffic flows, of future navigation systems and ATC methods and procedures, including the use of primary and especially secondary radar. Development of automated ATC systems including the exchange of data between adjacent centres.

Tests and Trials: real and fast time simulations of air traffic situations to test and evaluate existing and future proposed systems. Tests and trials of navigational aids and evaluation of navigational accuracy. Operational evaluation of the radar coverage of the EUROCONTROL area. Calibration of new radars.

Traffic Statistics and Forecasting: processing of traffic data for use in the planning of operational requirements and the calculation of route charges. Preparation of forecasts of future air traffic and development of improved forecasting methods.

Training: theoretical and practical training of operational and technical ATC staff and of computer programmers for both member and non-member states.

Association: an association agreement between the Spanish Government and EUROCONTROL was signed in Brussels on December 17th, 1971. The purpose of this agreement, with an effective date of January 1st, 1972, has been to establish an association in order to improve the safety and regularity of air traffic, the specific aims being to study the standardization of national regulations governing air traffic, harmonize the training of staff, standardize equipment, carry out studies in connection with scientific research and experiments and prepare operational plans for the control of Spanish upper airspace.

Co-operation: agreements for co-operation, aiming mainly at an exchange of technical information, have been concluded with Denmark, Norway, Sweden, Federal Aviation Administration of the U.S.A., Switzerland, Italy, Portugal and Austria as well as with the ICAO.

FINANCE

Budget (1974: Investment and Operating): 3,664 million Belgian francs.

Scale of members' contributions based mainly on their Gross National Product.

Included in this budget is an amount of 1,404 million Belgian francs for the joint financing of the operating costs of air traffic control services for the upper air space of the Benelux/Federal Republic of Germany region.

EUROPEAN SPACE AGENCY—ESA

114 ave. Charles de Gaulle, 92522 Neuilly-sur-Seine, France

Established on April 1st, 1974, by a final agreement signed at a meeting of the European Space Conference on July 31st, 1973, to incorporate ELDO, ESRO and other European and also national space programmes.

MEMBERS

Belgium	Italy	Sweden
Denmark	Netherlands	Switzerland
France	Norway	United Kingdom
Federal Republic of Germany	Spain

ORGANIZATION

A Restricted Committee was nominated, composed of one member from each member state, with the task of defining the structure of the new Agency. The staff of ESRO and ELDO (see below) are being absorbed into the new Agency.

FUNCTIONS

Besides including in its framework the Ariane Launcher, Marots and Spacelab projects allocated to ESRO, the ESA is to act as a point of co-ordination for future space research of member countries, excluding space research for military purposes, INTELSAT and the British Skynet programme. Any new ventures envisaged by member countries will be initially included in ESA planning until other arrangements are made.

Post-Apollo Programme: the agreement establishing ESA also provided for co-operation with the United States NASA in the Post-Apollo programme. A Spacelab Memorandum of Understanding (MOU) was signed between ESRO and NASA in Washington on September 24th, 1973, setting out the terms and conditions of the construction of the European Spacelab; a further agreement completed the arrangements for European participation in the Space Shuttle programme.

BUDGET

The eventual annual income of ESA is expected to be about £200 million.

EUROPEAN SPACE CONFERENCE

114 ave. Charles de Gaulle, Neuilly-sur-Seine, 92522 France

Founded 1966 to formulate a co-ordinated European space policy and ensure its execution.

MEMBERS

Australia	Federal Republic of Germany	Spain
Belgium	Italy	Sweden
Denmark	Netherlands	Switzerland
France	Norway	United Kingdom

Eight other countries, the Council of Europe and the Commission of the European Communities have observer status.

ORGANIZATION

The European Space Conference is a standing body which meets at ministerial level, usually once a year. Its work is prepared by a Committee of Alternates, composed of ministerial deputies. Its secretariat is provided by the secretariats of ESRO (see p. 266) and ELDO (see p. 269), whose member countries the Conference groups together.

MINISTERIAL MEETINGS

Dec. 1966	Paris	July and	Brussels
July 1967	Rome	Nov. 1970	(two sessions)
Nov. 1968	Bad Godesberg	Dec. 1972	Brussels
		July 1973	Brussels (two sessions)

At the last ministerial meeting on July 31st, 1973, it was decided to create a single European space agency, grouping together ESRO and ELDO; to internationalize national space programmes; and to proceed with the Spacelab, the French L III-S rocket and with a maritime satellite programme (Marots), and to participate in the post-Apollo programme.

EUROPEAN SPACE RESEARCH ORGANISATION— ESRO

114 ave. Charles de Gaulle, 92522 Neuilly sur Seine, France

Founded 1962 and formally established in 1964 to provide for, and to promote, collaboration among European states in space research and technology, exclusively for peaceful purposes. Following the ministerial meeting of the European Space Conference (q.v.) in December 1972 ESRO will in due course merge with ELDO (European Launcher Development Organization, q.v.) to form a single European space agency (European Space Agency, q.v.).

COUNCIL

Chairman: Prof. M. LEVY (France).

Vice-Chairmen: J. VAN ELSBEEK (Belgium); Gen. L. DE AZCÀRRAGA (Spain), Prof. TRELLA (Italy).

Lays down scientific and technical policy and takes major financial and administrative decisions. Consists of two delegates from each member state. Meets at least twice a year. It is assisted by the following committees and boards:

Administrative and Finance Committee.
Joint Programmes and Policy Committee.
Communications Satellite Programme Board.
Aeronautical Satellite Programme Board.
Meteorological Satellite Programme Board.
Scientific Programme Board.
Ariane Programme Board
Marots Programme Board.

DIRECTOR-GENERAL

The Director-General is advised by a Directorate, and assisted by a Secretariat staffed from member countries.

Director-General: Dr. A. HOCKER (German Federal Republic).

Director of Programmes and Planning: J. DINKESPIER (France).

Director of Administration: R. GIBSON (United Kingdom).

Director of the European Space Research and Space Technology Centre (Noordwijk): O. HANMARSTRÖM (Sweden).

Director of European Space Operations Centre (Darmstadt): Prof. G. FORMICA.

ESTABLISHMENTS

European Space Research and Technology Centre (ESTEC): Noordwijk, Netherlands. Responsible for studying and developing spacecraft, for liaison with scientific groups and for applied research work on space technology. It comprises the following Departments:

Satellites and System Studies
Space Science
Development and Technology
Administration
Air Traffic Control Programme Office
Telecom Programme Office

European Space Operations Centre (ESOC): Darmstadt,

Federal Republic of Germany. Responsible for satellite launching operations, tracking, data acquisition and processing. It comprises the following Departments:

Administration
Satellite Data Acquisition
Information Handling (formerly ESDAC)
Computer
Programme and Mission Management

European Space Research Institute (ESRIN): Frascati, Italy. Previously responsible for laboratory and theoretical research, it now houses the Space Documentation Service.

ACTIVITIES

SCIENTIFIC PROGRAMME

1. The Organization provides scientific agencies of the member countries with the necessary technical facilities for the carrying out of space experiments ranging from the study of the near-terrestrial environment to that of stellar astronomy.

Seven satellites have so far been developed by the Organization:

IRIS (formerly ESRO-II), designed to carry out solar astronomy and cosmic ray studies, was successfully launched in May 1968 from the Western Test Range (California) by a Scout rocket. This satellite functioned perfectly during its planned operational life of six months, and the seven scientific experiments continued to provide data and information of great scientific value for almost three years. This first ESRO satellite re-entered the atmosphere in May 1971. Prime contractor was Hawker Siddeley Dynamics (U.K.).

AURORAE (formerly ESRO-I), an 80-kg. satellite designed for the study of auroral and associated ionospheric phenomena, was successfully launched in October 1968 from the Western Test Range by a Scout rocket. The eight scientific experiments on board operated satisfactorily. The satellite, having long outlasted the design goal of six months' lifetime, re-entered the atmosphere in June 1970. Prime contractor was the Laboratoire Central de Télécommunications (France).

HEOS-I, a Highly Eccentric Orbit Satellite weighing 108 kg., and carrying eight experiments designed for the study of interplanetary physics and cosmic rays, was launched in December 1968 from the Eastern Test Range, by a Delta rocket. Prime contractor was Junkers Flugzeug- und Motorenwerke (Germany).

ESRO-Ib, designed to study ionospheric phenomena and aurorae, was launched on October 1st, 1969, and renamed BOREAS. This second flight model of ESRO-I, carrying eight experiments, was placed in a relatively low orbit and re-entered the atmosphere on November 23rd, 1969, after having completed its mission.

HEOS-2, a Highly Eccentric Orbit Satellite weighing 117 kg. and carrying seven experiments designed to investigate interplanetary space and the high-latitude magnetosphere near the northern neutral space, was launched in January 1972 from the Western Test Range aboard a three-stage DSV-3L Delta rocket. Its orbit was unique in that no satellite had hitherto flown in this region of space. Prime contractor was Messerschmitt-Bölkow-Blohm (Germany).

TD-1A, the largest and most advanced satellite ever built in Europe, was successfully launched in March 1972 from the Western Test Range by a thrust-augmented, two-stage Delta rocket. This satellite, weighing nearly half a ton, carries seven scientific experiments aimed at astronomical, solar and cosmic ray research. Prime contractor was Engins Matra (France).

ESRO-IV, designed to investigate the ionosphere, the near magnetosphere and auroral and solar particles, was successfully launched in November 1972 from the Western Test Range. The launcher was a Scout "D" four-stage, solid-fuel vehicle. Prime contractor was Hawker Siddeley Dynamics (United Kingdom).

2. The current scientific programmes includes another two research satellites:

COS-B, intended to study extraterrestrial gamma radiation in greater depth and detail than has yet been done, will carry a single large experiment consisting of a number of units provided by different European Laboratories and integrated by ESTEC into a single instrument. The satellite is due to be launched in 1975.

GEOS will be ESRO's first geostationary satellite and the world's first geostationary satellite devoted exclusively to scientific research. It is due to be launched in 1976 to study particle fluxes and measure the electric and magnetic fields.

3. ESRO has built and launched more than 170 sounding rocket payloads, but in July 1972 the Organization's Kiruna range (ESRANGE) was taken over by the Swedish authorities and sounding rockets no longer form part of ESRO's ordinary activities. This is because priorities had to be chosen within the Organization's enlarged programme, which places increasing emphasis on application satellites.

APPLICATIONS PROGRAMME

When in December 1971 the member states decided that ESRO should develop application as well as scientific satellites, the Organization undertook three major application satellite programmes:

- (i) an Aeronautical Satellite (AEROSAT) Programme which it is envisaged will be executed jointly by Europe (i.e. ESRO) and the United States for the development and utilization of an air traffic control satellite capability, initially over the Atlantic Ocean;
- (ii) a Meteorological Satellite (METEOSAT) Programme aimed at placing a satellite of approximately 270 kg. in geostationary orbit towards the end of 1976, to provide and disseminate images and data for improved weather forecasting;
- (iii) a Communication Satellite Programme intended to provide early in 1980 the means of routing via space intra-European long-distance telephone, telegraph and telex traffic.

In July 1973 a new application programme was approved: MAROTS, a maritime satellite which will be an adaptation of the Orbital Test Satellite (OTS) in the Communications Satellite Programme. ESRO is also carrying out studies in other space application fields such as earth resources survey and semi-direct and direct television broadcasting.

SPACELAB

One of ESRO's major projects is Spacelab, an orbiting, pressurized laboratory in which non-astronaut experimenters will be able to carry out space research and applications in comfort for periods of a week to a month. This new, re-usable manned laboratory is due to be operational from 1979 and will be launched by NASA's Space Shuttle, the orbiter element of which will resemble an aircraft and carry Spacelab in its "cargo bay".

EUROPEAN SPACE RESEARCH ORGANISATION

ARIANE LAUNCHER

This launcher (formerly the French L III S) became an ESRO project following a decision taken by the European Space Conference in July 1973. Ariane is a three-stage vehicle designed to launch satellites of up to 1500 kg. in transfer orbit and of up to 750 kg. in geostationary orbit by the end of 1980.

EUROPEAN SPACE CONFERENCE

ESRO participates in the European Space Conference together with ELDO member countries. At the Conference held in Brussels in July 1973 it was decided that the proposed European Space Agency into which ESRO is being integrated should come into being on April 1st, 1974.

EUROPEAN SPACE VEHICLE LAUNCHER DEVELOPMENT ORGANISATION—ELDO

114 ave. Charles de Gaulle, 92522 Neuilly, France

Founded 1962 and formally established 1964 to provide Europe with an independent satellite launching capability for peaceful applications. Following the ministerial meeting of the European Space Conference (q.v.) in December 1972 ELDO is merging with ESRO (European Space Research Organization, q.v.) to form the European Space Agency.

COUNCIL

President (1973): E. A. PLATE (Netherlands).

Approved research, development and construction programmes and decided on their distribution between members. Composed of two representatives from each member country. Assisted by a Scientific and Technical Committee and a Finance Committee.

SECRETARIAT

Responsible for formulation and execution of programmes, administration, finance and external relations.

In view of the termination of the ELDO programmes, most of the 330 staff members who made up the Secretariat at the end of 1972 have been given notice in 1973.

The remaining staff have either been formed into a "technical group" and transferred to ESRO, or else have been given the task of winding up the programmes, which should go on until 1974.

Secretary-General: Gén. R. AUBINIÈRE (France).

Deputy Secretary-General: J.-P. CAUSSE (France).

Administrative Director: G. VAN REETH (Belgium).

Technical Director: H. HOFFMANN (German Federal Republic).

PROGRAMMES

Initial Programme covers the development and construction of the first European three-stage satellite-launching vehicle, EUROPA I, with an overall height of 32 metres, and a launch weight of 111 tons, which is capable of placing a payload of one tonne into low circular orbit. This programme comprised ten flight tests over the years 1964–70 from the ELDO facilities on the Woomera base in Australia. The last test firing took place on June 12th, 1970, with a vehicle of three live stages. This launch marked an important milestone in the progress of the programme, practically all objectives being achieved, notably the functioning of all the stages, and of the separation (interstage and between third stage and satellite) and guidance systems. Two minor failures, which have been clearly localised—non-jettisoning of the nose cone, an operation which had always been successful in the past, and a slight loss of thrust at the end of the third stage flight—prevented injection of the satellite into orbit.

Supplementary Programme: development of the EUROPA II, a launcher derived from EUROPA I, with various added improvements, mainly a perigee stage and an inertial guidance system. By incorporating in the satellite an apogee motor—supplied like the satellite by the user—EUROPA II could be rendered capable of injecting into geostationary orbit a payload of about 200 kg., suitable for certain telecommunications applications among other purposes. The Supplementary Programme also includes the installation of the ELDO Equatorial Base at Kourou in French Guiana where the first trial firing of EUROPA II took place at the end of 1971. Two subsequent development launches that had been planned from this base were not made, as a result of the Council's decision (at its 64th session) to terminate the programme on May 1st, 1973.

Europa II construction programme: provided for the construction of operational launchers for users. This programme was also terminated on May 1st, 1973.

Europa III programme: a programme for a new launcher, EUROPA III, was terminated, upon completion of the study and development phase, on January 1st, 1973. EUROPA III's first operational firing was to have taken place in 1980, with a 750-kg. payload being placed in geostationary orbit.

Proposed participation in the post-Apollo programme: a study was made for the development of an unmanned space tug for this programme, but was abandoned on the recommendation of the United States.

EUROPEAN SPACE CONFERENCE

ELDO participates in the Conference together with ESRO member countries. It was decided at the last Conference that ELDO and ESRO should merge to form the European Space Agency (see p. 264).

BUDGET

1972: $79.3 million.

FEDERATION OF ARAB REPUBLICS

The establishment of the Federation of Arab Republics was approved by the electorates of Egypt, Libya and Syria in referenda on September 1st, 1971. Of the total electorate in all three countries, 98.1 per cent voted in favour of the Federation.

PRESIDENTIAL COUNCIL

ANWAR SADAT (Egypt) (Chair.), Col. MUAMMAR AL GADDAFI (Libya), Lt.-Gen. HAFEZ ASSAD (Syria).

FEDERAL MINISTERIAL COUNCIL (formed December 24th, 1971)

Chairman, Federal Ministerial Council: AHMED EL KHATIB (Syria).

Speaker, Federal National Assembly: Dr. KHAIRY AL SOUGHAYAR (Libya).

Secretary-General, Presidential Council: MOHAMED AHMED (Egypt).

Minister of State, Chairman, Council of Scientific Research Affairs: SALAH HEDAYAT (Egypt).

Minister of State, Chairman, Council of Economic and Planning Affairs: SAMY SOUFAN (Syria).

Minister of State, Chairman, Council of Information Affairs: ABDULLA QUWAIRI.

Minister of State, Chairman, Council of Educational and Cultural Affairs: Dr. ALI FAHMY KHSHIM (Libya).

FEDERAL NATIONAL ASSEMBLY

Twenty members elected from each Republic by its People's Assembly. The Federal Assembly has a four-year term, with two ordinary sessions a year, and met for the first time in March 1972.

THE FRANC ZONE

MEMBERS

French Republic (Metropolitan France and the Overseas Departments and Territories, except the French Territory of the Afars and the Issas).

Cameroon, Central African Republic, Chad, Congo (Brazzaville), Dahomey, Gabon, Ivory Coast, Mali, Niger, Senegal, Togo, Upper Volta.

The Franc Zone embraces all those countries and groups of countries whose currencies are linked with the French franc at a fixed rate of exchange and who agree to hold their reserves in the form of French francs and to effect their exchange on the Paris market. Each of these countries or groups of countries has its own central issuing Bank and its currency is freely convertible into French francs. This monetary union is based on individual agreements concluded between France and the various States who, after attaining independence, opted for independent sovereignty either within or outside the French Community.

Mali withdrew from the Franc Zone in 1962, setting up her own currency, the Malian franc, and her own issuing Bank. However, in February 1967 she ratified a currency agreement with France covering her gradual return to the West African monetary zone, and France's guarantee of the convertibility of the Mali franc. Under the terms of the agreement, Mali was to reorganize her economy, and in May 1967 she devalued her franc by 50 per cent. The Mali franc returned to full convertibility with the French franc in March 1968, and agreement was reached on the establishment of a central issuing bank, to be jointly administered by France and Mali.

A number of states left the Franc Zone during the period 1958-73: Guinea, Tunisia, Morocco, Algeria, Mauritania and Madagascar.

CURRENCIES OF THE FRANC ZONE

French franc (=100 centimes): used in Metropolitan France and the Overseas Departments of Guadeloupe, French Guiana and Martinique.

1 CFA (Communauté financière africaine) franc=2 French centimes. Used in the monetary areas of West Africa and also in the Overseas Department of Réunion and the Overseas Territories of the Comoro Islands and St. Pierre and Miquelon.

1 Mali franc=1 French centime. Used in Mali, where it replaced the CFA franc in 1962.

1 CFP (Communauté française du Pacifique) franc=5.5 French centimes. Used in New Caledonia, French Polynesia and the Wallis and Futuna Islands.

1 New Hebrides franc (franc néo-hébridaïs)=6.1875 French centimes. Used in the Anglo-French Condominium of the New Hebrides.

CENTRAL ISSUING BANKS

Banque des États de l'Afrique Centrale: 29 rue du Colisée, 75008 Paris; f. 1955 as the Institut d'émission de l'A.E.F. et du Cameroun; name changed in 1960 to Banque centrale des États de l'Afrique Equatoriale et du Cameroun; reconstituted under present title in 1973; issuing house for the five states of central Africa; Gen. Manager CHRISTIAN JOUDIOU (France); Asst. Gen. Manager JEAN-EDOUARD SATHOUD.

Banque Centrale des États de l'Afrique de l'Ouest: 29 rue du Colisée, 75008 Paris; f. 1955 under the title "Institut d'émission de l'AOF et du Togo" and re-created under present title by a treaty between the West African states and a convention with France in 1962; central issuing bank for the members of the West African Monetary Union; Pres. EDOUARD KODJO; Dir.-Gen. ROBERT JULIENNE (France).

Banque Centrale du Mali: B. P. 206, Bamako, Mali; f. 1968; Chair. SEKOU SANGARE (Mali); Dir.-Gen. GEORGES DUSSINE (France).

Institut d'Émission des Départements d'Outre-Mer: 233 boulevard Saint-Germain, 75007 Paris; issuing house for the French Overseas Departments; Dir.-Gen. CLAUDE PANOUILLOT.

Institut d'Émission d'Outre-Mer: 233 boulevard Saint-Germain, 75007 Paris; issuing house for the French Overseas Territories; Dir.-Gen. CLAUDE PANOUILLOC.

Banque de France: 1 rue de la Vrillière, Paris; f. 1800; issuing house for Metropolitan France; Governor OLIVIER WORMSER.

THE FRANC ZONE

AFRICAN FRANC ZONE COUNTRIES

These countries are all the states, except Guinea and Mauritania, which were part of French West and Equatorial Africa, and Cameroon and Togo. These full members of the Franc Zone are still grouped within the currency areas that existed before independence, each group having its own currency issued by a central Bank.

West African Monetary Union (Union monétaire ouest-africaine): Dahomey, Ivory Coast, Niger, Senegal, Upper Volta (all parts of former French West Africa) and Togo, which joined in 1963. Established by Treaty of May 1962; agreements on Co-operation were signed with France in 1963; two-thirds of the members of the Board of Directors of its central issuing Bank are provided by the member states and one-third by the French Government.

Central African Countries: Central African Republic, Chad, Congo, Gabon (countries of the former French Equatorial Africa) and Cameroon. A Convention of Monetary Co-operation was signed with France in 1972; the French Government nominates one-third of the members of the Administrative Council of the zone's issuing bank, one-third is nominated by Cameroon and the remaining third by the other countries.

EXCHANGE REGULATIONS

The CFA franc is freely convertible into the French franc at a fixed rate, through "Operations Accounts" established by agreements concluded between the French Treasury and the individual issuing Banks. The notes are backed fully by the resources of the French Treasury, which also provides the Banks with overdraft facilities.

The monetary reserves of the CFA countries are held in French francs in the French treasury. Exchange is effected on the Paris market and foreign assets earned by member countries are pooled in a Fonds de Stabilisation des changes (Exchange Stabilization Fund) which is managed by the Bank of France. Part of the reserves earned by richer members can be used to offset the deficits incurred by poorer countries. Member countries negotiate each year their import programme with the French authorities.

New regulations drawn up in 1967 provided for the free convertibility of currency with that of countries outside the Franc Zone. Restrictions are to be removed on the import and export of CFA banknotes, although some capital transfers will still be subject to approval by the governments concerned.

When the French Government instituted exchange control to protect the French franc following the May 1968 crisis, other Franc Zone countries were obliged to take similar action in order to maintain free convertibility within the Franc Zone. The CFA franc was devalued following devaluation of the French franc in August 1969. In January 1974 the CFA and Mali francs were floated on the foreign exchange simultaneously with the French franc to maintain their fixed parities.

ECONOMIC AID

France's ties with the African Franc Zone countries involve not only monetary arrangements, but also include comprehensive French assistance in the forms of budget support, foreign aid, technical assistance and subsidies on commodity exports.

Official French financial aid and technical assistance to developing countries is administered by the following agencies:

Fonds d'Aide et de Co-opération—FAC: 20 rue Monsieur, 75700 Paris. In 1959 FAC took over from FIDES (Fonds d'Investissement pour le Développement Economique et Social) the administration of subsidies and loans from the French Government to the former French African States. FAC is administered by the Secretariat of State for Co-operation, which allocates budgetary funds to it.

Caisse Centrale de Co-opération Economique—CCCE: 233 boulevard Saint-Germain, 75007 Paris. Founded in 1941, and given present name in 1958. French Development Bank which executes the financial operations of FAC. Lends money to member States of the Franc Zone. Dir.-Gen. CLAUDE PANOUILLOT.

Bureau de Liaison des Agents de Coopération Technique: 66ter rue Saint-Didier, 75016 Paris.

FRENCH COMMUNITY

The Community was created by the 1958 Constitution, adopted by referendum by the countries of French West Africa (with the exception of Guinea, which opted for total and immediate independence), French Equatorial Africa and Madagascar, which all chose to become member states of the Community. The field of the Community's competence included foreign policy, defence, currency, economic and financial policy, strategic materials and higher education. Between October and December 1958 all the States of the Community were granted internal autonomy.

A Constitutional Act of June 1960 introduced the possibility of concluding agreements whereby a member state could become independent without ceasing to belong to the Community. Six states—Central African Republic, Chad, Congo (Brazzaville), Gabon, Madagascar and Senegal—decided to become independent within the Community which was then called the "renewed Community", while all the other states preferred total independence. France has concluded co-operation agreements in international law with all these states (including Togo and Cameroon which included territories entrusted to France by international mandate and therefore could not be members of the Community).

THE FRANC ZONE

The Articles of the Constitution dealing with the Community have not been expressly abolished but are no longer applied today and the various organs of the Community have fallen into abeyance. The two main organizations now responsible for liaison between France and African states are:

Secretariat-General for the Community and African and Malagasy Affairs, 138 rue de Grenelle, Paris 7c; Sec.-Gen. JACQUES FOCCART.

Secretariat of State for Foreign Affairs, 20 rue Monsieur, 75700 Paris; Sec. of State JEAN DE LIPKOWSKI.

CUSTOMS UNIONS

Under the terms of the first Yaoundé Convention, July 1963, all CFA countries and Madagascar became associate members of the European Economic Community. This Convention of Association stipulates the gradual abolition of tariff and quota restrictions for the whole Common Market, and therefore the guaranteed markets and prices for African produce in France are now being phased out.

The revision of the terms of the Yaoundé Convention was the subject of extensive negotiations with the European Economic Community, beginning in Brussels on October 17th, 1973. The new arrangements are due to take effect in 1975.

The following regional common markets within the Franc Zone have been formed:

Communauté Économique de l'Afrique de l'Ouest (CEAO) (see chapter).

Union douanière et économique de l'Afrique centrale (UDEAC) (see chapter).

Organisation Commune Africaine, Malgache et Mauricienne (OCAM): a common market in sugar has been established (see chapter).

INDUS WATERS TREATY

A Treaty governing the use of the Indus Basin waters, signed September 1960.

SIGNATORIES

India

Pakistan

International Bank for Reconstruction and Development (World Bank)

THE INDUS BASIN

Some 50 million people depend for their livelihood upon the six rivers of the Indus Basin flowing from the Himalayas to Pakistan and the Arabian Sea. These rivers are the Indus itself, the Jhelum, the Chenab, the Ravi, the Sutlej and the Beas. Before 1947, the rivers fed the irrigation canals of the Punjab in undivided India. At the transfer of power in 1947, most of the irrigated area became part of Pakistan although some canals and head-works went to India. Since 1951 the World Bank had been trying to settle differences between India and Pakistan over the division of river water and these attempts came to fruition in the Indus Waters Treaty 1960. Under the Treaty the waters of the three eastern rivers, the Ravi, Beas and Sutlej were allocated to India and the waters of the three western rivers, the Indus, the Jhelum and the Chenab to Pakistan. Storage and irrigation works to the value of over U.S. $1,200 million have been constructed.

INDUS COMMISSION

Indian Commissioner: B. S. BANSAL.

Pakistan Commissioner: S. HABIB-UR-RAHMAN.

The two-man Commission is responsible for establishing and maintaining co-operative arrangements for the implementation of the Indus Water Treaty, and for promoting co-operation between the parties in the development of the waters of the rivers. The Commission reports at least once a year to member governments. First Meeting March 1961.

DEVELOPMENT FUNDS

Simultaneously with the signing of the Treaty, an international financial agreement was executed by the Governments of Australia, Canada, Federal Republic of Germany, New Zealand, Pakistan, United Kingdom, United States and by the IBRD. This agreement created the Indus Basin Development Fund to finance the construction of irrigation and other works in Pakistan.

In April 1964 a Supplemental Agreement came into force, providing for a further $315 million in foreign exchange. The aggregate resources of the Fund in foreign exchange and in Pakistani rupees amount to the equivalent of $1,600 million.

The Indus Basin Development Fund also financed a study, completed in 1967, of the water and power resources of West Pakistan to provide the Pakistan Government with a basis for development planning.

In May 1968, an agreement was executed by the Governments of Canada, France, Italy, Pakistan, the United Kingdom, the United States and the IBRD creating the Tarbela Development Fund to finance the construction of a dam on the Indus River at Tarbela.

ADMINISTRATION

The Indus Basin and Tarbela Development Funds are administered by the IBRD.

INDUS BASIN DEVELOPMENT FUND

SYSTEM OF WORKS

The following major operations are to be undertaken by Pakistan and financed from the Indus Basin Development Fund:

1. Construction of the Mangla Dam on the Jhelum River. This Dam was inaugurated in November 1967.
2. Development of 3 million kW. of hydroelectric potential in West Pakistan.
3. Construction of six new barrages.
4. Construction or re-modelling of eight link canals. The first link canal system, joining the Chenab and Sutlej Rivers, was completed in March 1965.

The Indus Basin Development Fund Agreement, as supplemented in 1964, provides for the following contributions:

GRANTS

Australia	£A11,634,643
Canada	Canadian $38,910,794
German Federal Republic	DM206,400,000
India*	£62,060,000
New Zealand	£NZ1,503,434
United Kingdom	£34,838,571
United States of America	U.S. $295,590,000

* See also Article 5 of Indus Water Treaty.

LOANS

IBRD (World Bank)	U.S. $ 80,000,000
IDA (International Development Association)	U.S. $ 58,540,000
United States	U.S. $121,220,000

The United States has also contributed U.S. $235,000,000 in Pakistan rupees. Pakistan is providing £440,000 and the remainder of the local currency required.

INDUS WATERS TREATY

TARBELA DEVELOPMENT FUND

The construction of the Tarbela Dam is to be undertaken by Pakistan and financed by the Tarbela Development Fund which will receive the balance of the Indus Basin Development Fund available after the other works have been completed and the following contributions by the parties to the Tarbela Development Fund Agreement:

Canada	Canadian $5,000,000
France	150,000,000 francs

Italy	25,000,000,000 Lire
United Kingdom	£10,000,000
United States	U.S. $50,000,000
IBRD	U.S. $25,000,000

Pakistan will provide the Tarbela Development Fund with rupees for the required local expenditure. The Canadian, U.K. and U.S. contributions can be used only for expenditures in those countries. The contributions of the U.S. and the IBRD are residual.

INDUS WATERS TREATY

1. The Preamble recognizes the need to fix and delimit the rights and obligations of the Governments of India and of Pakistan concerning the use of the waters of the Indus river system.
2. Allots the waters of the three eastern rivers to India with certain minor exceptions. The transition period will be 10 years.
3. The waters of the three western rivers are allotted to Pakistan with certain stated exceptions.
4. Pakistan undertakes to construct a system of works.
5. India is to contribute to the Indus Basin Development Fund £62.06 million in 10 equal yearly instalments.
6. Both countries recognize their "Common interest in the optimum development of the rivers, and, to that end, they declare their intention to co-operate, by mutual agreement, to the fullest possible extent".
7. The Treaty sets up a permanent Indus Commission consisting of two persons, one appointed by each of the two Governments. The functions of the Commission will be "to establish and maintain co-operative arrangements between the parties in the development of the waters of the rivers".
8. Where differences cannot be settled by agreement between the Commissioners the Treaty establishes machinery for resort to a Neutral Expert (who is to be a highly qualified engineer) for a final decision on technical questions.
9. Differences which cannot be settled by the Neutral Expert will be treated as disputes, and failing resolution by agreement between the two Governments will be referred to a Court of Arbitration.
10. The Treaty has eight annexures. The principal matters covered in these annexures are:
 - (a) Agricultural use by Pakistan of water from the tributaries of the Ravi river.
 - (b) Agricultural use by India of water from the western rivers.
 - (c) The use of the water of the western rivers by India for the generation of hydroelectric power.
 - (d) The storage of water by India on the western rivers.
 - (e) The questions which may be referred to a Neutral Expert.
 - (f) The appointment and procedure of a Court of Arbitration.
 - (g) Transitional arrangements relating to the supply of water to Pakistan during the transition period.
11. The Treaty came into force on January 12th, 1961, on the exchange of ratification.

BOARD OF GOVERNORS

All the powers of the Bank are vested in a Board of Governors, consisting of one Governor and one alternate appointed by each member country.

EXECUTIVE BOARD

Consists of nine Directors responsible for the conduct of operations and answerable to the Board of Governors. Seven are elected by Latin American countries, one by Canada and one is designated by the U.S.A.

FINANCIAL STRUCTURE

ORDINARY CAPITAL RESOURCES

Loans are made to governments, and to public and private bodies for specific economic projects. They are repayable in the currencies lent and their terms range from 10 to 25 years.

Authorized capital $5,591 million, of which $950 million is paid-in and $4,641 million is callable. The callable portion constitutes, in effect, a guarantee of the securities which the Bank issues in the capital markets in order to increase its resources available for lending.

FUND FOR SPECIAL OPERATIONS

The Fund enables the Bank to make loans for economic and social projects where circumstances call for special treatment, such as lower interest rates and longer repayment terms than those applied to loans from the ordinary resources, and possibility of repayments in whole or in part in local currency.

Authorized subscribed resources: $4,096,772,154.

SOCIAL PROGRESS TRUST FUND

The Social Progress Trust Fund was set up in 1961 by the United States to promote social development in Latin America under the Alliance for Progress programme. It has a total capital of $525,000,000 and is administered by IDB under an agreement with the United States. Resources have been used to grant loans in four fields: housing for low income groups; water supply and sanitation installations; land settlement and rural development; and higher education and training related to economic development.

The Fund is now totally committed and its fields of action transferred to the Fund for Special Operations.

OTHER FUNDS

The Bank in 1964 began administering a Canadian Fund created by the Government of Canada within its external aid programme to finance economic, technical and educational assistance projects in Latin America. Upon becoming a member of the Bank on May 3rd, 1972, Canada agreed to contribute to the Fund for Special Operations all repayments made on the loans which the Bank has made with the resources administered for the Canadian Government, which amount to 74 million Canadian dollars.

Through a 1961 agreement, supplemented by protocols, the Government of Federal Germany placed under Bank administration a fund which currently amounts to 32,920,000 Deutschmarks, specifically to finance the rehabilitation of Bolivia's national tin mines.

In 1966, the Government of the United Kingdom established under Bank administration a fund now amounting to £4,035,000 for development projects in Latin America. An additional $4 million was entrusted to the Bank in 1971 and 1972.

INTER-AMERICAN DEVELOPMENT BANK

In 1966, the Government of Sweden placed a similar fund under Bank administration totalling $5 million.

In 1969, the Bank entered into an agreement to administer the Populorum Progressio Fund established by the Holy See with an initial contribution of $1 million to benefit low-income sectors in Latin America, especially in the field of land reform.

In 1970 the government of Norway placed under Bank administration a fund amounting to $2 million. In 1973 the government of Switzerland established under Bank administration a fund totalling Sw. Fr. 30 million. The Bank also administers loan resources made available by Argentina for its neighbouring countries.

BOND ISSUES AND LOANS

To increase its lendable ordinary resources, the Bank has issued long-term bonds in the markets of Austria, Belgium, France, Italy, the Netherlands, Switzerland, the United States, the United Kingdom and the German Federal Republic and a short-term issue purchased by Central Banks in Latin America, and by Israel. It has also entered into loan agreements with Finland, the German Federal Republic, Sweden, the United Kingdom, Japan, Norway, Switzerland and Spain. These operations, as of September 30th, 1973, are as follows:

TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE

The Bank provides technical assistance for Latin American development, often together with its loans and frequently independently of them. This assistance is given for the preparation, financing and execution of development plans and projects, the formulation of loan proposals and the development and advanced training, through seminars and other forms of instruction, of personnel specializing in the formulation and implementation of development plans and projects.

A total of $232.7 million has been authorized up to September 1973 for technical assistance, of which $180.3 million is on a reimbursable and $52.4 million on a non-reimbursable basis. The greatest part of the reimbursable assistance consists of loans for the creation of pre-investment funds in various national development institutions to help identify and formulate development projects.

INSTITUTE FOR LATIN AMERICAN INTEGRATION—INSTITUTO PARA LA INTEGRACIÓN DE AMÉRICA LATINA (INTAL)

Cerrito 264, 2° piso (Casilla de Correo 39, Sucursal 1), Buenos Aires, Argentina

The Institute was established in 1965 as a permanent department of the Inter-American Development Bank. Its functions are: to study the regional integration process; carry out research into problems which the integration movement poses for individual countries; organize training courses and seminars; conduct, at the request of member countries, preliminary studies on joint development schemes and on economic integration alternatives available to individual countries; to provide advisory services to the Bank and to other public and private institutions; to disseminate knowledge about the various economic, political, social, institutional, legal, scientific and technological aspects of regional integration.

Director: RAUL ALBERTO CALVO.

INTERGOVERNMENTAL COMMITTEE FOR EUROPEAN MIGRATION—ICEM

9 rue du Valais, Geneva, Switzerland

ICEM was established in 1951 to achieve the orderly migration of those Europeans who could not migrate without international assistance, to help resettlement of refugees in countries of permanent asylum to sponsor immigration into the less developed countries in accordance with their economic needs. World membership: 31 nations and 8 observer nations.

COUNCIL

In the Council each member country has one representative and one vote. Meetings are normally held once a year at Geneva. Membership is open to any country subscribing to the principle of free movement of peoples and prepared to contribute to the Committee's administrative budget. The Council determines policy, reviews the activities of the Executive Committee, and approves the budget. A chairman is elected at each session.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE

Composed of representatives of nine member governments, elected annually, and eligible for re-election. The Committee meets twice a year, in spring and before the autumn Council session. Special sessions may be called if necessary.

SUB-COMMITTEE ON BUDGET AND FINANCE

Composed of representatives of five member governments elected annually by the Council. It is responsible for studying financial questions and making appropriate recommendations to the Executive Committee and Council.

SUB-COMMITTEE ON CO-ORDINATION OF TRANSPORT

Membership is open to any member government. It meets once a year, studies matters concerning transport and makes recommendations to the Council.

SECRETARIAT

Director: JOHN F. THOMAS (U.S.A.).

Deputy-Director: G. MASELLI (Italy).

ACTIVITIES

ICEM's objectives are threefold: to effect the movement of refugees to countries offering final resettlement; to meet the specific needs of overseas countries by providing migration from Europe in the sectors of their economies where government-sponsored migration is required; and to promote, through selective migration, the socio-economic advancement of Latin American countries as a vital form of development aid.

The tasks of ICEM range from helping an individual refugee or a national migrant to assisting member governments in the development of their migration programmes.

ICEM helps to select migrants and refugees for emigration to receiving countries, such as Australia, Latin America, South Africa and the United States of America. Upon request from member governments, ICEM also provides essential services such as counselling, orientation, medical examination, vocational and language training, placement and the organization of adaptation courses. Furthermore, ICEM arranges transport at a moderate cost, finances the movement of those refugees and migrants who are unable to meet their own expenses.

The movement of refugees to countries offering them opportunity and security is a major function of ICEM. To assure the efficient resettlement of 50,000 to 60,000 uprooted people each year ICEM closely co-ordinates its refugee activities with the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, the United States Refugee Program and with other governmental and non-governmental organizations. ICEM implemented the processing and movements of 1,044,661 refugees from 1952 until the end of 1973.

ICEM's programmes for Latin America aim at making a contribution to the solution of development problems by providing skilled workers and technicians through immigration.

Immigrants with experience and professional knowledge of modern techniques form an important stepping-stone in the process of speeding up economic and social development. Through its selective migration programme ICEM is transferring qualified Europeans to vital sectors of industry, agriculture and education for which sufficient man-power cannot be found on the national labour markets. Training centres and demonstration projects have been established with immigrant instructors to teach local labourers and farmers improved methods.

TRAFFIC CONFERENCES

Negotiation of fares and rates is carried out through the IATA Traffic Conferences, with separate meetings considering passenger and cargo matters. Decisions are unanimous and cannot become effective without the approval of interested governments. The conferences are held in various world cities, usually at two year intervals, in the autumn for passenger operations and the following spring for matters involving cargo. The three IATA Traffic Conferences have their office in Geneva, with two Traffic Service Offices located in New York and Singapore.

SECRETARIAT

Carries out the day-to-day administration of IATA.

INTERNATIONAL AIR TRANSPORT ASSOCIATION

PRINCIPAL ACTIVITIES

Finance: Member airlines may settle their international accounts through the IATA Clearing House in Geneva, enabling a single cash settlement of all debts in dollars or convertible sterling.

Technical Problems. There is a full and free exchange of experience and information between airlines, and experts study such problems as minimum noise procedures for take-off and landing, linking of airline telecommunications systems and the application of production planning and control techniques to maintenance. Other groups are concerned with problems of navigation aids, turbine fuels, helicopter operations and supersonic transport.

Air Traffic: Subject to the approval of governments, agreements are reached on international fares and rates through the Traffic Conferences. IATA also furthers the standardization of documentation and all phases of passenger, baggage and cargo handling.

International Law: IATA formulates and represents airlines' views on international conventions affecting the legal position of air carriers in various fields including liability and armed aggression. Standardized Conditions of Contract governing carriage of passengers and cargo have been drawn up, and Conditions of Carriage for all aspects of transport are in preparation.

Information and Documentation: IATA acts as a documentation centre, collecting and issuing statistics, internal manuals, technical surveys, reports and publicity material.

International Co-operation: IATA works closely with the International Civil Aviation Organization (ICAO) and also co-operates with other bodies such as the International Telecommunication Union (ITU), The World Meteorological Organization (WMO) and the International Standards Organization.

BUDGET

Financed from dues paid by member airlines in proportion to the amount of international air traffic carried.

PUBLICATIONS

IATA Annual Report (English, French and Spanish)

IATA News Review (eight times a year, in English).

INTERNATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF UNIVERSITIES—IAU

1 rue Miollis, 75015 Paris, France

Founded 1950 to promote practical academic co-operation and to assist university institutions throughout the world. Members: 531 universities and institutions of higher learning in 102 countries; 8 associate members (international university organizations).

ORGANIZATION

GENERAL CONFERENCE

Composed of the full and associate members and meets at least every five years. Discusses topics of special importance for the future of university education, determines general policy and elects the President and members of the Administrative Board.

MEETINGS

Nice	1950
Istanbul	1955
Mexico City	1960
Tokyo	1965
Montreal	1970

Sixth General Conference to meet in Moscow 1975.

ADMINISTRATIVE BOARD

Composed of the President and fourteen other members, including the Vice-President. Meets annually. Gives effect to decisions of the General Conference and directs the work of the secretariat.

President (1970-75): VELI MERIKOSKI, Professor of Law, University of Helsinki, Finland.

Vice-President (1970-75): A. E. SLOMAN, Vice-Chancellor, University of Essex, U.K.

SECRETARIAT

The permanent secretariat of the Association, the International Universities Bureau, is responsible for the execution of its working programme and the administration of its affairs.

Secretary-General: H. M. R. KEYES (U.K.).

PRINCIPAL ACTIVITIES

Documentation and Information: The secretariat is a source of information on higher education throughout the world. Its reference library of published and unpublished material in many languages is probably unique of its kind. An extensive network of contacts with national and international bodies, academic and governmental, facilitates the international exchange of information.

Research and Studies: These activities are most closely related to the themes of the General Conferences in an attempt to contribute in an international setting to the classification and resolution of major problems of higher educational policy. Since 1960 special efforts in this field have been concentrated in the Joint UNESCO-IAU Research Programme in Higher Education. This is carried out with the support of major private foundations. In 1970 a new series of international seminars was inaugurated to promote the study of selected problems connected with the role of universities in the modern world.

Publications Programme: A quarterly Bulletin provides a chronicle of university affairs in all parts of the world. A series of reference works published at regular intervals gives detailed information about university institutions and organizations concerned with higher education. Special reports and issues in the series of "Papers" of the Association are devoted to selected research themes and studies.

BUDGET

Annual expenditure amounts to approximately $250,000, excluding expenditure from special grants for the Joint UNESCO-IAU research programme.

SELECTED PUBLICATIONS

Bulletin of the International Association of Universities (English and French; quarterly).

International Handbook of Universities (English; every three years—6th edition, 1974).

ings and the running of the Secretariat. He is assisted by the heads of departments for Administration, Education, Agriculture, Press and Public Relations, Research and Statistics, and Women and Youth Activities.

REGIONAL OFFICE

43 Friends' Colony (East), Mathura Rd.,
New Delhi, India

Founded 1960 to develop ICA activity in South-East Asia, to act as a link with affiliated national movements, and to represent ICA at international organizations in the region.

The Regional Office includes the Education Centre, which facilitates the interchange of knowledge and experience between Co-operative organizations in the region. It arranges courses, seminars and conferences, undertakes surveys, and supports and supplements the educational activities of national Co-operative Movements.

Regional Director: P. E. WEERAMAN.

OFFICE FOR EAST AND CENTRAL AFRICA

P.O.B. 788, Moshi, Tanzania

The Office of the ICA for East and Central Africa was founded in 1968 to develop ICA activity in East Africa and to carry out a similar programme of work as the Regional Office in South-East Asia.

Regional Director: D. NYANJOM.

FINANCE

The ICA works on an annual budget of slightly over £100,000. Its income is obtained almost entirely from the annual subscriptions paid by its members. Costs of about £80,000 per annum for the work of the Education Centre in South East Asia are borne by the members of the Swedish co-operatives. Technical Assistance expenditure is met from the ICA Development Fund to which contributions are made by member organizations on a voluntary basis.

U.S.S.R.

* Romania became a member of the Bank on January 12th, 1971.

COUNCIL

The Council of the Bank is the highest authority and consists of 31 members representing all member countries. Each member country, irrespective of the amount of its quota, has one vote in the Council. Major decisions require a unanimous vote. The Council meets as often as necessary but not less than twice a year.

BOARD

The Board is the executive body of the Bank and consists of a Chairman and three Deputies appointed by the Council. Its task is to supervise the Bank's activities in accordance with the Agreement, the Statutes of the Bank and the decisions of the Council.

Chairman: V. VOROBIEV (U.S.S.R.).

FUNCTIONS

1. Under Article II of the Agreement on the Establishment of the International Investment Bank the fundamental task of the Bank is to grant long-term and medium-term credits for projects connected with the international socialist division of labour, specialization and co-operation of production, for expenditure on raw materials and fuels in the members' collective interest, for the construction of enterprises of mutual concern to member countries in other branches of the economy, for the construction of projects for the development of the national economies of member countries and for other purposes established by the Council.

2. Credits may be granted to:

- (a) banks, economic organizations and enterprises of member countries;
- (b) international economic organizations and enterprises of member countries;
- (c) banks and economic organizations of other countries.

3. The Bank may:

- (i) form reserve capital and create its own special funds;
- (ii) attract funds in collective currency (transferable roubles), in national currencies of interested countries and in convertible currency;

- (iii) issue interest-bearing bond loans placed on international money markets;
- (iv) place surplus funds with other banks, buy and sell currency, gold and securities, grant guarantees and conduct other banking operations;
- (v) co-operate with bodies of the Council for Mutual Economic Assistance, the International Bank for Economic Cooperation and other economic organizations of the member countries of the Bank;
- (vi) make contact and establish business relations with international financial and credit institutions as well as with other banks.

Lending to members in 1972. During 1972 the Council and the Board of the Bank approved for crediting 10 projects to the amount of 97 million transferable roubles including 57 million transferable roubles in convertible currency.

Since the beginning of the Bank's activities—in 1971, 1972 and 1973—the Bank has approved for crediting 33 projects, involving a total of 588 million transferable roubles including 408 million transferable in convertible currency.

MEMBERSHIP AND ADMINISTRATION

ARTICLES 3–5. Any central employers' federation with the aims given above may become a member, provided that it does not include any workers' organization, that it defends the principles of free enterprise, and that it is a free and independent voluntary organization outside governmental or other control. All applications are considered by the General Council. If there is no such central federation, individual federations may be admitted with the permission of the General Council. The administration is to consist of the General Council, the Executive Committee and the Secretary-General.

GENERAL COUNCIL

ARTICLES 6–13. The General Council shall be composed of two delegates from each central federation, accompanied by any technical advisers. Other members are represented according to the conditions of their admission. The General Council shall elect a President and two Vice-Presidents. The President shall serve for one year, to be succeeded in turn by the senior and junior Vice-Presidents. The General Council shall pass the annual budget and completed accounts at its annual meeting. Special meetings may be held. Voting shall only be held on administrative questions, and shall be done by a simple majority. Each delegation shall have two votes.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE

ARTICLES 14–18. The Executive Committee shall be elected at the annual meeting of the General Council, and the General Council shall fix the number of members. The Executive Committee shall appoint the Secretary-General and decide on proposals made by the Secretariat. The Committee shall hold regular meetings.

INTERNATIONAL PRESS INSTITUTE—IPI

Münstergasse 9, 8001 Zürich, Switzerland

Telephone: (or) 34 48 38.

Founded in 1951. A non-governmental association of editors, publishers and news broadcasters independent of governments who support the principles of a free and responsible Press. Membership: 1,800 (publishers and journalists of press, radio and TV systems) from 62 countries spread over five continents.

ORGANIZATION

ANNUAL ASSEMBLY

EXECUTIVE BOARD

The governing body of the Institute. The Board consists of editors from 24 countries, who are elected by the Annual Assembly. It meets when necessary, but must do so at least once a year.

Chairman: L. K. JAKANDE (Nigeria).

Vice-Chairmen: ABDI IPEKCI (Turkey), RANALD MACDONALD (Australia), PAUL RINGLER (U.S.A.).

SECRETARIAT

Director: ERNEST MEYER (France).

NATIONAL COMMITTEES

Established in every country where the press is free. Composed of the leading editors of these countries, the Committees recruit the membership, report to the Secretariat on developments affecting the press and conduct the business of the Institute in their countries.

MEMBERSHIP

Comprises three categories: full members, associate members and institutional members.

Full membership is open to persons who have responsibility for the editorial and news policies of newspapers, weekly and monthly journals or news agencies and of radio and television systems, and who are dedicated to the principles of freedom of the press.

Associate membership is open to persons whose work is associated with journalism in its editorial aspects but who cannot qualify for full membership because they are not executives of newspapers or agencies, for example newspaper correspondents and commentators, members of journalism faculties, etc.

Institutional membership is open under the same conditions as for full and associate membership to communications departments of universities and colleges, schools and centres of journalism, press institutes and journalists' organizations in the press and broadcasting fields.

AIMS

The International Press Institute was founded in 1951 by 34 newspaper publishers and editors from North America, Western Europe, Latin America and Asia, who met in New York to study the role of the press in the post-war world. They believed that if journalists from different countries and different parts of the world were brought together to discuss current problems and the improvement of professional journalism, they would at the same time learn to understand each other's individual problems better. Free access to information and free transmission and dissemination of news are the guarantee for a truthful picture given of the problems of other people.

The Preamble of the Constitution of the International Press Institute, defining the essential aims of the Institute, states:

"World peace depends upon understanding between peoples and peoples. If peoples are to understand one another, it is essential that they have good information. Therefore, a fundamental step towards understanding among peoples is to bring about understanding among the journalists of the world. In accordance with this belief there is established an organization to work toward the following objectives:

1. The furtherance and safeguarding of freedom of the press, by which is meant: free access to the news, free transmission of news, free publication of newspapers, free expression of views.
2. The achievement of understanding among journalists and so among peoples.
3. The promotion of the free exchange of accurate and balanced news among nations.
4. The improvement of the practices of journalism."

ACTIVITIES

Defence of Press Freedom

IPI takes the following action: publication of the facts in the monthly IPI Report; protests to governments; public protests spread over the world through news agencies, newspapers, radio and television; direct pressure on governments and direct intervention.

Meetings

Regional meetings have been a regular feature of the Institute's programme. These are held between newspapermen from pairs of countries to discuss mutual problems and misunderstandings and ways to improve relations through the press. Since the initial Franco-German meetings which began in 1954, meetings have been organized between British and American journalists, British and German, Greek and Turkish, American and Canadian and Korean and Japanese as well as meetings between British, French and American editors and British, French, German, American and Canadian. Articles and newspapermen have been exchanged and newspaper columns thrown open for frank discussion of controversial topics.

Seminars are arranged with the aim of improving the practices of journalism. The first journalism seminar, held in Zurich in 1954, grouped German and Austrian journalists for a ten-day course in relations between the press and government in a democratic country. Other seminars have been for United Nations correspondents, on Science Writing, Security in the Sixties, Medical Reporting, The Woman's Page, Problems of Disarmament, Crime Reporting, Agriculture in Today's Press, Reporting the Air, New Perspectives on Strategy, The Press and the International Economic Challenge, the Atlantic Seminar in Brussels and Paris, and the Libel Symposium. Give-away papers symposium, Bi-lateral Austro-Italian meeting on South Tyrol, Bi-lateral American-Japanese meetings.

Economic and foreign editors have been brought together for seminars on the European Economic Communities and the Free Trade Area, and on European Economic Integration.

Improvement of the Practices of Journalism

A programme to train staff of Asian newspapers was launched in 1960 and a number of workshop seminars have been held with the aim of improving newspaper techniques. IPI Consultants have visited newspapers, particularly those published in Asian languages, to give advice and training to editorial and management staffs. The Institute's active work in Asia began with two plenary Asian meetings held in Tokyo in 1956 and in Kandy, Ceylon, in 1957. Since then, the Press Institute of India has been launched as a result of collaboration between IPI and a group of leading Indian newspaper publishers and editors. Other institutes followed in South Korea, the Philippines, Hong Kong and Malaysia, providing newspapers with their own bodies to study professional problems and train journalists.

In March 1963, the first IPI training course for African journalists opened in Nairobi, Kenya. Since then over 200 journalists from a dozen African countries, who have studied at IPI residential courses in Nairobi and in Lagos, Nigeria, have moved on to responsible posts and the IPI certificate of training has become recognized as the mark of a qualified journalist. Instruction has also been given to African newspaper cameramen and IPI has given the first course for African women journalists.

Research

A Research Section prepares studies on problems of international journalism. Information is frequently supplied on such questions as legislation affecting the press, professional standards and training in journalism.

Library and Press Centre

This Centre is maintained at the headquarters of IPI in Zurich. Material on a wide range of press subjects, including news coverage, legislation and freedom of the press, is at the disposal of members.

INTERNATIONAL PRESS INSTITUTE

BUDGET

The Institute is supported by members' subscriptions and donations from publishers. It began with the aid of the United States Carnegie and Rockefeller Foundations. The current African training scheme is financed by a $300,000 grant from the Ford Foundation which was made in 1965 at the termination of the previous two-year scheme backed by the Foundation. A grant of $813,700 was made by the Rockefeller Foundation in March 1965 to support the Asian Programme up to May 1968. In 1967 the Ford Foundation made a grant of $150,000 for a programme of activities to improve objective news coverage between countries.

THE INTERNATIONAL RED CROSS

THE INTERNATIONAL COMMITTEE OF THE RED CROSS—ICRC*

THE LEAGUE OF RED CROSS SOCIETIES—LORCS*

THE NATIONAL RED CROSS SOCIETIES

COMMON ORGANS

INTERNATIONAL CONFERENCE OF THE RED CROSS

The supreme deliberative body of the International Red Cross. Composed of delegations of National Red Cross, Red Crescent and Red Lion and Sun Societies, of the States parties to the Geneva Conventions and of the International Committee of the Red Cross and of the League of Red Cross Societies. Conference's function is to secure unity of effort between the National Societies, the International Committee and the League. It usually meets every four years. (Last Conference: Teheran, November 1973.)

STANDING COMMISSION

President: The COUNTESS OF LIMERICK (United Kingdom).

The Commission meets twice a year in ordinary session. Its functions are to prepare the International Conference and to settle any differences that may arise between the International Committee and the League. It consists of two members each from the ICRC and the League, and five members elected by the Conference.

MEETINGS OF THE THREE PRESIDENTS

The Chairman of the Standing Commission, the President of the International Committee of the Red Cross and the Chairman of the Board of Governors of the League meet once between Standing Commission meetings and whenever one of them shall so request. They present a report at the following session of the Standing Commission.

THE INTERNATIONAL COMMITTEE OF THE RED CROSS—ICRC

7 avenue de la Paix, 1211 Geneva, Switzerland

Founded in 1863 and assumed present title in 1876. The ICRC is the guardian of the Principles of the Red Cross and the Geneva Conventions.

PRINCIPLES OF THE RED CROSS

Humanity.

Impartiality.

Neutrality.

Independence.

Voluntary Service. The Red Cross is a voluntary organization not prompted in any way by desire for gain.

Unity. There can be only one Red Cross Society in any one country. It must be open to all. It must carry out its work throughout the whole territory.

Universality.

GENEVA CONVENTIONS

The first Geneva Convention (Geneva Convention for the Amelioration of the Condition of the Wounded in Armies in the field) was signed in 1864 by twelve countries. In 1929 a Convention concerning the treatment of prisoners of war was approved.

Under the following 4 Conventions agreed in 1949 protection is bestowed upon:

1. The wounded and sick in the armed forces, doctors and medical personnel, chaplains.
2. The wounded and sick and medical personnel at sea; the shipwrecked.
3. Prisoners of war.
4. Civilians.

* ICRC and LORCS were jointly awarded the Nobel Peace Prize in 1963.

THE INTERNATIONAL RED CROSS

ORGANIZATION

INTERNATIONAL COMMITTEE

President: ERIC MARTIN.

Vice-Presidents: JEAN PICTET, HARALD HUBER.

Members: HANS BACHMANN, DENISE BINDSCHIEDLER-ROBERT, PIERRE BOISSIER, GILBERT ETIENNE, ROGER GALLOPIN, ADOLPHE GRAEDEL, HENRY HUGUENIN, WALDEMAR JUCKER, PIERRE MICHELI, ULRICH MIDDENDORF, MARCEL A. NAVILLE, MAX PETITPIERRE, MARION ROTHENBACH, JACQUES F. DE ROUEMONT, PETER TSCHUDI, GOTTFRIED DE SMIT, VICTOR H. UMBRICH.

The ICRC is an independent institution of a private character, neutral as regards politics, ideology and religion. It is exclusively composed of Swiss nationals. Members are co-opted, and their total number may not exceed 25. The international character of the ICRC is based on its mission and not on its composition.

EXECUTIVE BOARD

President: ROGER GALLOPIN.

Vice-President: VICTOR H. UMBRICH.

Members: DENISE BINDSCHIEDLER-ROBERT, ULRICH MIDDENDORF, GOTTFRIED DE SMIT.

FINANCE

The ICRC's work is financed by a voluntary annual grant from governments parties to the Geneva Conventions, voluntary contributors from National Red Cross Societies and by public collectors in Switzerland.

PERIODICALS AND PUBLICATIONS

International Review of the Red Cross (monthly): French and English editions.

ICRC in Action (information bulletin, about 20 issues a year).

Annual Reports.

The Geneva Conventions: texts and commentaries.

SECRETARIAT

Secretary-General: HENRIK BEER (Sweden).

Deputy Secretary-General: BERTIL PETTERSON (Mexico).

Under Secretaries-General: BENGT BERGMAN (Sweden),
Administration and Control Sector; ROBERT M. PIER-

PONT (U.S.A.), Relief Sector; Dr. VLADIMIR I. SEMUKHA (U.S.S.R.), Technical Services Section.

Treasurer-General: EUSTASIO VILLANUEVA VADILLO (Spain).

The Secretariat has a staff of 105 and several volunteers, from some 23 countries.

STRUCTURE

Relief Sector: Assumes the statutory responsibilities of the League in the field of relief to victims of natural disasters, refugees and civilian populations who may be displaced or exposed to abnormal hardship. This activity has three main aspects under the responsibility of three Bureaux:

- (i) Relief Operations: for the co-ordination of relief operations on the international level and execution by the National Society of the stricken country or by the League itself;
- (ii) Supply, Logistics and Warehouses: for the co-ordination and purchase, transport and warehousing of relief supplies;
- (iii) Relief Preparedness: for co-ordination of assistance to National Societies situated in disaster-prone areas in the study and execution of practical measures calculated to prevent disasters and diminish their effects.

Services to National Societies Sector: Promotes and co-ordinates assistance to National Societies in developing their basic structure and their services to the community. Three Bureaux are included in this sector:

- (i) Regional Services: for the implementation of the League's Red Cross Development Programme aiming at co-ordinating assistance to National Societies, with the advice and co-operation of the Technical Services Section, in the fields of health, welfare, nursing, first aid and training;
- (ii) Youth: Promotes the establishment and development of educational and service programmes for children and youth;
- (iii) Public Information: Promotes the creation and development of Information Services within National Societies, and the knowledge and understanding of the Red Cross throughout the world, through contacts with mass media, production of films, tape recordings, audio-visual and other information material, including Panorama, published eight times a year and the League's Annual Report. All publications appear in English, French and Spanish.

The League is recognized by the United Nations as the main co-ordinating agency in emergency stages of international disaster relief and maintains close relations with many inter-governmental organizations, the United Nations and Specialized Agencies, as well as with non-governmental organizations.

INTERNATIONAL SECRETARIAT FOR VOLUNTEER SERVICE—ISVS

10-12 Chemin de Surville, Petit Lancy, 1213 Geneva, Switzerland

Established 1962 to support and assist national volunteer service programmes. Members: 61 governments.

ORGANIZATION

ASSEMBLY

The ultimate authority on the policies, objectives and scope of the organization. The Assembly now numbers 61 governments interested in furthering volunteer service as a means of meeting the world's critical need for trained manpower. Membership is open to all member governments of the United Nations or its Specialized Agencies and imposes no financial obligations.

COUNCIL

Composed of 22 governments which contribute support to ISVS, either in the form of cash or in the assignment of personnel, or both, on a voluntary basis. It determines questions of policy, programme and budget.

SECRETARIAT

Responsible for the executive functions of the organization.

Secretary-General: MAXIME-LEOPOLD ZOLLNER (Dahomey).

REGIONAL OFFICES

Asia: ISVS Asian Office, 503 Jalandoni Bldg., 1444 A. Mabini St., Ermita, Manila, Philippines.

Latin America: Secretaría Internacional para el Servicio Voluntario, Oficina de Latinoamérica, Cangallo 524, 1 Piso, Buenos Aires, Argentina.

ISVS Representative in Chile, Casilla 21.101, Santiago 21, Chile.

AIMS

1. To support and assist national volunteer programmes by serving as an information and experience exchange clearing house.
2. To encourage the formation of new national volunteer service programmes.
3. To provide technical assistance where requested in the setting up and support of national volunteer service organizations, both those for service overseas and those within their own borders.

4. To co-operate with other organizations, international, governmental and private, in working to increase and improve volunteer service, and to increase the supply of skilled manpower in the developing countries.

ACTIVITIES

1. Collection and dissemination of publications on volunteer service and on technical questions related to it. Maintains an information and technical services centre.
2. Sponsorship of international and regional conferences and seminars about volunteer service and related subjects.
3. Technical assistance, in the form of experts and advisers, for the improvement or establishment of national volunteer organizations.

4. To co-ordinate the setting up of Multinational Volunteer Teams (MVTs).
5. Recruitment and pre-selection of UN Volunteers, for projects financed by the UN.

FINANCE

The Secretariat is financed by contributions of member governments, principally those of the Council.

INTERNATIONAL TELECOMMUNICATIONS SATELLITE ORGANIZATION—INTELSAT

950 L'Enfant Plaza South, S.W., Washington, D.C. 20024, U.S.A.

Founded in August 1964 by agreements which provided interim arrangements for the establishment of a global commercial communications satellite system. These and subsequent agreements remained in force until February 12th, 1973, when they were superseded by Definitive Agreements, opened for signature on August 20th, 1971.

MEMBERSHIP

Under the Definitive Agreements all states members of the International Telecommunications Union (ITU) and all states which were members of INTELSAT under the Interim Agreement may join the Organization. As of November 26th, 1973, there were 83 members of INTELSAT.

AIMS

The prime objective of INTELSAT is to provide the satellite facilities required for an international public telecommunications system, operating on commercial principles and available, on a non-discriminatory basis, to all areas of the world.

ORGANIZATION

INTERIM ARRANGEMENTS

Under the interim arrangements the governing body was the Interim Communications Satellite Committee (ICSC). It was responsible for the development and operation of the "space segment" of the global system of INTELSAT. (The "space segment" means the communications satellites and the ground equipment required for their tracking and control.) Members of INTELSAT were represented in ICSC on an investment quota basis.

Pursuant to the interim arrangements and under the authority of the ICSC, the Communications Satellite Corporation (COMSAT), a private corporation set up by an Act of the U.S. Congress, acted as the Manager for INTELSAT in the development and operation of the space segment.

DEFINITIVE ARRANGEMENTS

The INTELSAT definitive arrangements, like the INTELSAT interim arrangements, consist of two separate but related international agreements: the Agreement Relating to the International Telecommunications Satellite Organization "INTELSAT" (the Agreement) signed by governments (the parties) and the Operating Agreement Relating to the International Telecommunications Satellite Organization "INTELSAT" (Operating Agreement) signed by either governments parties to the Agreement or their designated telecommunications entities, public or private (the Signatories).

Under the Definitive Agreements INTELSAT possesses juridical personality and has a structure consisting of the following organs:

Assembly of Parties

The Assembly of Parties is composed of governments which are parties to the Agreement. The Assembly has the power to consider "general policy and long-term objectives of INTELSAT consistent with the principles, purposes and scope of activities of INTELSAT"

The Assembly may, inter alia, formulate views or make recommendations to the other organs in its consideration of general policy and long-term objectives; authorize the use of the INTELSAT space segment, or the provision of separate satellites by INTELSAT for specialized telecommunications services; take decisions on proposed amendments to the Intergovernmental Agreement and propose amendments to the Operating Agreement; consider complaints from the governments party to the Intergovernmental Agreement; select legal experts for arbitration tribunals; and confirm the appointment of the Director-General.

Each party in the Assembly has one vote. Decisions on substantive matters require the affirmative vote of two-thirds of those present and voting while decisions on procedural matters require the affirmative vote of a simple majority of those present and voting.

Ordinary meetings will be scheduled biennially.

Meeting of Signatories

The Meeting of Signatories is composed of all Signatories to the Operating Agreement.

INTERNATIONAL TELECOMMUNICATIONS SATELLITE ORGANIZATION

The functions of the Meeting of Signatories include, inter alia, the consideration and expression of views to the Board of Governors on the Board's annual report and financial statements; consideration of Board reports on future programmes, decisions on proposed amendments to the Operating Agreement and expression of views and recommendations on amendments to the Agreement; consideration of and decisions on the Board's recommendations to increase the capital ceiling; the establishment of general rules, upon the Board's recommendations and for its guidance, concerning the approval of earth stations to access the INTELSAT space segment; allotment of capacity in the space segment and the establishment and adjustment of satellite utilization charges; consideration and expression of views on complaints of users.

The voting procedure is the same as in the Assembly of Parties.

Meetings will be held annually.

Board of Governors

The Board of Governors is composed of representatives of Signatories to the Operating Agreement. While continuing the concept of the interim arrangements that representation on the governing body be based upon investment shares, the definitive arrangements do not specify the minimum investment share required for membership on the Board of Governors. Instead, the new Agreement specifies that the Meeting of Signatories will establish this minimum investment share.

The Agreement also provides that any five or more signatories, from the same ITU administrative region, who would not otherwise be represented on the Board of Governors, regardless of their total investment shares, may together select a single representative (Governor) on the Board of Governors. However, no more than two such groups from any one ITU region nor more than a total of five from all ITU regions are permitted to be so represented. In the event that two or more groups seek the same seat, the Meeting of Signatories is to determine which group is to be represented.

Each Governor on the Board of Governors has a vote equal to that part of the investment share of a signatory or group of signatories which he represents, which is based upon utilizations of the INTELSAT system for international public telecommunications services and for certain domestic public telecommunications services. These provisions notwithstanding, no governor may cast more than 40 per cent of the total votes represented on the Board of Governors and the difference between the investment shares which he represents and the 40 per cent limit will be distributed equally to the other Governors. Decisions on substantive matters require either (1) the support of at least four Governors representing at least two-thirds of the investment shares, or (2) the support of all but three of the Governors, regardless of the total investment share which this large numerical majority may represent. A simple majority of the Governors, with each Governor possessing one vote, is all that is required for action on procedural matters. On November 26th, 1973, the membership of the Board consisted of 21 Governors representing, either singly or in combination, a total of 60 signatories.

Meetings of the Board of Governors will be held as often as is necessary but at least four times a year.

Executive Organ

The development of the Executive Organ will be in two stages.

The first stage commences upon entry into force of the Definitive Agreements, and continues until December 31st, 1976. During this first stage the Executive Organ will be headed by a Secretary-General appointed by the Board of Governors and responsible to the Board of Governors for management services other than those which will be provided by COMSAT under a contract with INTELSAT. His tenure will expire on December 31st, 1976, at which time the second stage will commence. Immediately following the entry into force of the definitive arrangements and until the Board of Governors determines that the Secretary-General is prepared to assume his responsibilities, COMSAT will carry out his functions under the same terms and conditions as it did under the interim arrangements.

Management services of a technical and operational nature are to be provided by COMSAT under a contract with INTELSAT which is to terminate on February 12th, 1979, six years from the date of entry into force of the definitive arrangements. Prior to the effective date of the contract, COMSAT will provide such services under the same terms and conditions as it did under the interim arrangements. During the first stage, COMSAT, as contract manager, is to report directly to the Board of Governors.

By December 31st, 1976, a Director-General, responsible to and acting in accordance with the policies and directives of the Board of Governors for all management services, is to be appointed by the Board of Governors and confirmed by the Assembly of Parties to head the executive organ. (He may be dismissed by the Board on its own authority.) Until the expiration of its contract, COMSAT shall continue to provide management services of a technical and operational nature, though it will now report to the Director-General and not the Board of Governors.

Secretary-General (until end of 1976): SANTIAGO ASTRAIN.

ACTIVITIES

SATELLITES

Four INTELSAT IV satellites, in synchronous orbit, were in operation as of November 1973 providing a full global commercial communications service. Two of these satellites are over the Atlantic, one over the Pacific and one over the Indian Ocean. An additional INTELSAT IV satellite, serving as a spare, is in orbit at present in the Atlantic Ocean Region.

The INTELSAT IV satellite has a design life of 7 years and a capacity of from 3,000 to 9,000 telephone circuits, depending upon the operational arrangements adopted, or of 12 TV channels, or certain combinations thereof. A total of eight INTELSAT IV satellites have been ordered, to provide for possible launch or in-orbit failures and to enable spare satellites to be placed in orbit as reserves. The current operational plan within the INTELSAT system to provide service when the INTELSAT IV satellites approach saturation in the Atlantic in 1975 is to employ modified INTELSAT IV satellites known as the INTELSAT IV-A to provide service until 1978. INTELSAT has contracted for three INTELSAT IV-A satellites.

INTELSAT is currently studying possible types of still more advanced satellites to be used in the future.

EARTH STATIONS

Earth stations which work with the INTELSAT satellites are the property of organizations in the countries in which they are located. INTELSAT establishes performance characteristics for these stations and approves their operation with the space segment.

As of November 26th, 1973, 86 standard earth station antennae carried commercial traffic via the INTELSAT system. These are distributed as follows:

Africa (9): Cameroon, Gabon, Ivory Coast, Kenya, Madagascar, Morocco, Nigeria, Senegal, Zaire.

Asia (19): People's Republic of China (3), Taiwan, Hong Kong (2), India, Indonesia, Japan (3), Korea, Malaysia, Pakistan, Philippines (2), Singapore, Thailand (2).

Australia and Oceania (5): Australia (3), Guam (U.S.A.), New Zealand.

Central and South America (11): Argentina (2), Brazil, Chile, Colombia, Ecuador, Mexico, Nicaragua, Panama, Peru, Venezuela.

Caribbean (5): Barbados, Jamaica, Martinique, Puerto Rico (U.S.A.), Trinidad.

Europe and Middle East (26): Ascension Is., Bahrain, Belgium, France (2), Federal Republic of Germany (3), Greece (2), Iran, Israel, Italy (2), Jordan, Kuwait, Lebanon, Netherlands, Spain/Canary Is. (4), Sweden, United Kingdom (3).

North America and Hawaii/Alaska/Kwajalein Is. (11): Canada (3), U.S.A. (8).

TRACKING, TELEMETRY, COMMAND AND MONITORING FACILITIES

Four stations are in operation: Fucino, Italy; Carnarvon, Australia; Paumotu, Hawaii; Andover, Maine, U.S.A.

SATELLITE UTILIZATION

INTELSAT establishes the charges for use of the space segment to cover estimated operating, maintenance and administrative costs and a return (currently 14 per cent) on capital.

The INTELSAT space segment charge was initially set in 1965 at $32,000 per year per unit of utilization. (A unit of utilization is defined as the measure of entitlement, established by the ICSC, to the use of an INTELSAT satellite for the creation via two standard earth stations of one end of a two-way telephone circuit. The growth in capacity, lifetime, and use of the INTELSAT satellites has allowed this charge to be reduced progressively and, from January 1st, 1974, it has been set at $9,000 per year per unit of utilization.

As of November 23rd, 1973, a total of 9,254.5 units were in full-time service in the INTELSAT system, and the continuity of service from January to September 1973 is indicated by the following figures: 99.87 per cent for the total global satellite system, and 99.94 per cent for the average INTELSAT earth station.

INTER-PARLIAMENTARY UNION

Place du Petit-Saconnex, 1211 Geneva 28, Switzerland

Founded in 1889 to promote personal contacts among the members of the world's Parliaments.
World membership: 72 Inter-Parliamentary Groups.

ORGANIZATION

INTER-PARLIAMENTARY CONFERENCE

Meets once a year. National Groups are represented by Delegations consisting of Members of Parliament. Conference adopts resolutions on subjects referred to it by the Inter-Parliamentary Council.

RECENT CONFERENCES

1953	Washington	1963	Belgrade
1954	Vienna	1964	Copenhagen
1955	Helsinki	1965	Ottawa
1956	Bangkok	1966	Teheran
1957	London	1968	Lima
1958	Rio de Janeiro	1969	New Delhi
1959	Warsaw	1970	The Hague
1960	Tokyo	1971	Paris
1961	Brussels	1972	Rome
1962	Brasilia

Forthcoming Conferences will be held in 1974 in Tokyo and in 1975 in London.

INTER-PARLIAMENTARY COUNCIL

The directing organ of the Union. Composed of two members from each affiliated National Group. The Council convenes Inter-Parliamentary Conferences, fixes their agenda, approves the annual budget of the Union and appoints the Secretary General.

President (ad interim): G. S. DHILLON (India).

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE

The administrative organ of the Union. It supervises the work of the Inter-Parliamentary Bureau. The President of the Council is ex officio a member and President of the Committee.

Vice-President: E. J. DERWINSKI (U.S.A.).

Members: A. CARILLO (Mexico), A. P. CHITIKOV (U.S.S.R.), F. COLLARD (Australia), A. DUA (Belgium), K. FUKUNAGA (Japan), W. HOFER (Switzerland), M. LEVENTE (Romania), R. SAID (Egypt), G. VEDOVATO (Italy).

INTER-PARLIAMENTARY BUREAU

The Secretariat of the Union. It maintains contacts with the National Inter-Parliamentary Groups, organizes meetings held under the auspices of the Union, carries out study programmes and issues publications.

Secretary-General: PIO-CARLO TEREZIO.

Assistant Secretary-General: PIERRE CORNILLON.

AIMS AND ACTIVITIES

The Union promotes personal contacts among members of all Parliaments constituted into National Groups with a view to establishing and developing firm democratic institutions and to advancing international peace and co-operation.

The Union organizes conferences bringing together parliamentarians of different nationalities and ideologies to study objectively political, economic, social and cultural problems of international significance.

The Union operates an International Centre for Parliamentary Documentation (CIPD) which collects and circulates material on the structure and functioning of legislative assemblies throughout the world, and also organizes symposia on questions of parliamentary interest.

The Union has general consultative status, Category 1, with the Economic and Social Council of the United Nations (ECOSOC). It has entered into consultative arrangements with UNESCO and also maintains regular contacts with other UN specialized agencies. Co-operation also exists with various regional organizations of a parliamentary nature.

BUDGET

Contributions from National Groups are the main source of revenue. These are paid annually on a scale fixed by the Council. The Union's budget for 1974 is about 1,700,000 Swiss francs.

June 1971	Conference on Islamic Cultural Centres, Rabat.
June 1971	Conference on the Charter, Jeddah.

AIMS

1. To promote Islamic solidarity among member states;
2. To consolidate co-operation among member states in the economic, social, cultural, scientific and other vital fields, and to arrange consultations among member states belonging to international organizations;
3. To endeavour to eliminate racial segregation and discrimination and to eradicate colonialism in all its forms;
4. To take necessary measures to support international peace and security founded on justice.
5. To co-ordinate all efforts for the safeguard of the Holy Places and support of the struggle of the people of Palestine, and help them to regain their rights and liberate their land;
6. To strengthen the struggle of all Muslim people with a view to safeguarding their dignity, independence and national rights; and
7. To create a suitable atmosphere for the promotion of co-operation and understanding among member states and other countries.

ACTIVITIES

1. The establishment of the International Islamic News Agency (IINA).
2. Studies on the possibility of establishing an Islamic Development Bank in Jeddah, Saudi Arabia.
3. Efforts to consolidate the activities of the Islamic Cultural Centres in non-Muslim countries.

FINANCES

The Conference is financed by contributions and donations from member states.

PUBLICATIONS

JOINT INSTITUTE FOR NUCLEAR RESEARCH

(OBEDINENNYI INSTITUT YADERNYCH ISSLEDOVANIY)

Dubna, near Moscow, U.S.S.R.

Postal Address: Head Post Office P.O.B. 79, Moscow, U.S.S.R.

The Joint Institute at Dubna was founded at an international conference in Moscow in March 1956, its purpose being the furthering of collaboration in nuclear research between the member countries.

MEMBERS

Bulgaria	Mongolian People's Republic
Czechoslovakia	Poland
German Democratic Republic	Romania
Hungary	U.S.S.R.

ORGANIZATION

COMMITTEE OF GOVERNMENT PLENIPOTENTIARIES

The Committee is the supreme authority of the Joint Institute. It is composed of the chairmen or heads of the atomic energy authorities of member countries. The Committee meets about once a year, and makes decisions about future policy, and finance.

SCIENTIFIC COUNCIL

Chairman: Academician N. N. BOGOLUBOV (U.S.S.R.).

Plans the programme of work. Composed of senior scientists from the member countries.

MANAGEMENT

Director: Academician N. N. BOGOLUBOV (U.S.S.R.).

Vice-Directors: Academician K. LANIUS (G.D.R.), Prof. CH. SHIMANE (Czechoslovakia).

Administrative Manager: V. L. KARPOVSKY.

Broad executive powers are vested in the Director. The Management carries out all practical work of the Institute between meetings of the Committee. The Director and Vice-Directors are elected by the Committee.

RESEARCH LABORATORIES

LABORATORY OF NUCLEAR PROBLEMS

Director: Prof. V. P. DZHELEPOV.

This laboratory has a synchrocyclotron that accelerates protons to 680 MeV, deuterons to 420 MeV, and alpha-particles to 840 MeV and is a powerful source of 600 MeV neutrons and charged and neutral mesons. This accelerator started operating in 1949. The main directions of research at this laboratory are the investigation of nucleon-nucleon scattering, the processes of pion production and their interaction with nucleons, the investigation of μ -meson properties and weak interaction processes, and the interaction of nucleons and mesons with complex nuclei.

The Laboratory also has a Radio-chemical Laboratory.

LABORATORY OF HIGH ENERGIES

Director: Prof. A. M. BALDIN.

The Laboratory has a 10 BeV synchrophasotron that has been operating since 1957.

Experimental investigations are carried out with protons and secondary particles. The experiments are devoted to the study of nucleon structure problems, strong interactions of strange particles and weak interaction processes. In 1960 the laboratory discovered the anti-sigma minus hyperon.

JOINT INSTITUTE FOR NUCLEAR RESEARCH

LABORATORY OF THEORETICAL PHYSICS

Director: Prof. D. I. BLOKHINTSEV.

This Laboratory works on the problems of field theory, the theory of elementary particles, nucleon structure, the phenomenological theory of scattering, and the use of superconductivity methods to the atomic nucleus.

LABORATORY OF NEUTRON PHYSICS

Director: Prof. I. M. FRANK.

An experimental fast neutron pulse reactor came into operation in 1960. It is being used for research in low-energy physics and neutron spectrometry, and for studying the structure of matter. Nuclear reactions induced by light nuclei are studied with the aid of the laboratory electrostatic generator.

LABORATORY OF NUCLEAR REACTIONS

Director: Prof. G. N. FLEROV.

In 1960 a cyclotron of multiple-charged ions came into operation. It is used to produce powerful beams of various ions up to the light-charged 320 MeV ion Ar. In 1962 a new type of nuclear radioactivity—proton radioactivity was discovered, in 1963 a new isotope of the 102 element with a mass number of 256 was synthesized, in 1964 the 104 element was synthesized. In 1970 the 105 element was synthesized. The chemical properties of transuranium elements are studied at the laboratory.

LABORATORY OF COMPUTING AND AUTOMATION

Director: Prof. M. G. MESCHERYAKOV.

This Laboratory was founded in 1966, its purpose being the centralization of computing and data handling facilities at JINR.

The main directions of the laboratory activities are the creation and operation of systems for analysis of data collected on film, development of automatic flying spot devices for scanning and measuring chamber films, organization of measuring centres at other Laboratories of the Institute and development of mathematical methods and programmes for data processing as supplied to problems of elementary particle physics.

SPECIAL DEPARTMENTS

Two special departments have been established at the Institute, one of them performing research in the field of collective ion acceleration and the other operating the large experimental programme of JINR at the Soviet GeV accelerator in Serpukhov.

HISTORY

In 1946 work was begun on the 680 MeV synchrocyclotron at Dubna. In 1949, when it was put into operation, the Institute of Nuclear Problems of the U.S.S.R. Academy of Sciences was set up. In 1957 the 10 GeV synchrophasotron of the Electrophysical Laboratory of the U.S.S.R. Academy of Sciences was completed and the two installations formed the centre of a new town named Dubna, 80 miles from Moscow. In 1956 these two large research institutes were handed over to the Joint Institute for Nuclear Research and Dubna became an international centre. During the following years the Joint Institute for Nuclear Research founded four new Laboratories: the Laboratory of Theoretical Physics, the Laboratory of Nuclear Problems, the Laboratory of Neutron Physics and the Laboratory of Computing and Automation.

There are over 4,000 staff at the Institute. Scientists of other member states make liaison visits and work at the Joint Institute for Nuclear Research laboratories for short and long periods of time.

BUDGET

Contributions by all member states are approximately proportional to their national incomes.

ORGANIZATION

COUNCIL OF MINISTERS

Established in 1965 as the supreme organ of LAFTA, the Council is composed of the Foreign Ministers of all member countries and makes important policy decisions relating to regional integration.

CONFERENCE OF CONTRACTING PARTIES

The Conference of Contracting Parties is composed of delegations from each member country and makes decisions on matters that require a joint resolution of the Contracting Parties. Its functions are to take steps towards the implementation of the Treaty, to approve the annual Budget, to fix contributions, to elect a President and two Vice-Presidents and to appoint the Executive Secretary of the Permanent Executive Committee. It meets in regular session once a year, when trade negotiations are carried out, and in extraordinary session when convened by the Permanent Executive Committee.

PERMANENT EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE

The Committee, consisting of one representative of each contracting party, is the Permanent body of the Association and is responsible for supervising the implementation of the provisions of the Treaty. Its regular duties are to convene the Conference of Contracting Parties, to submit to the Conference an annual progress report and budget, to represent the Association, to carry out studies, suggest measures and submit recommendations to the Conference and to apply for technical assistance and collaboration. The Committee operates at the headquarters of the Association in Montevideo.

President (1973): JULIO ZAMORA BATIZ (Mexico).

SECRETARIAT

The technical and administrative functions of LAFTA are carried out by the Secretariat, which is directed by an Executive Secretary elected by the Conference for a term of three years. The appointment is renewable. The Executive Secretary participates in the work of the Council of Ministers, the Conference and the Committee.

The Secretariat is composed of the Departments of Trade Policy, Industrial Affairs, Economic Affairs, Agricultural Affairs, and Administration, and a number of specialized services.

Acting Executive Secretary: JUAN PASCAL MARTÍNEZ (Argentina).

FUNCTIONS

The Latin American Free Trade Association is an inter-governmental organization, created by the Treaty of Montevideo in February 1960 with the object of increasing trade between the Contracting Parties and of promoting regional integration, thus contributing to the economic and social development of the member countries.

System of Tariff Reductions. The Treaty of Montevideo provides for the gradual establishment of a free trade area, which would form the basis for a Latin American Common Market. Reduction of tariff and other trade barriers is to be carried out gradually up to 1980 by two means, the National Lists and a Common List.

The National Lists form the basis for reductions of tariff and trade barriers between the member countries. Each country presents annually a list of those commodities on which it is prepared to grant reductions and agreement between the members shall be reached by negotiation. Reductions agreed in National Lists come into force on January 1st of the year following agreement.

The Common List includes those products on which complete exemption from all duties and charges shall obtain within the Free Trade Zone. The products represented on this list shall represent at least 25 per cent of the total trade of the area during the first three years, 50 per cent during the second three-year period, 75 per cent during the third three-year period, and the greater part of the intrazonal trade during the final three-year period.

The Treaty includes provisions for Special Lists for more favourable terms for less developed countries. Bolivia, Ecuador, Paraguay and Uruguay have obtained benefits under this clause.

Subregional Agreements. The Association approves in principle the drawing up of subregional agreements between its members, in accordance with the Declaration of the Presidents of America, signed at Punta del Este in April 1967, as being a means of encouraging the realization of a Latin American Common Market.

The Andean group of countries (Bolivia, Colombia, Chile, Ecuador and Peru) signed the Cartagena Agreement in May 1969 and in July 1969 the Permanent Executive Committee of LAFTA unanimously approved the establishment of an Andean Common Market. Venezuela joined the Cartagena Agreement in 1972.

A River Plate Basin Treaty (Tratado de la Cuenca de la Plata) was signed in Brasilia in April 1969, by Argentina, Bolivia, Brazil, Paraguay and Uruguay, to co-operate in joint development schemes in the area irrigated by the rivers which flow into the Plate estuary.

ACTIVITIES

Trade Liberalization Programme. The annual rounds of negotiations have given rise to approximately 11,000 tariff reductions incorporated in the National Lists. More than 7,000 preferential tariff reductions in favour of less developed member countries have been included in Special Lists. These concessions cover almost 80 per cent of trade between countries of the region.

Negotiations for a second Common List were begun in December 1967 and continued July–November 1968, but no agreement was reached. In October 1969, when negotiations for the Common List were resumed, the Contracting Parties adopted a protocol, drawn up in June 1969 by the Permanent Executive Committee, modifying the Treaty of Montevideo. The amendments provide for prolongation of the strict time limits set for the introduction of free trade in the area, and the transition period is to terminate in 1980 instead of in 1973.

Growth of Trade. Provisional statistics show that in 1972 intraregional trade of the eleven countries—including Bolivia and Venezuela which joined LAFTA in 1968—increased 208 per cent since the Treaty of Montevideo came into effect in 1961. Intraregional exports went up from $488 million in 1961 to $1,634 million in 1972, while intrazonal imports rose from $588 million in 1961 to $1,666 million in 1972. During the same period, regional trade (exports plus imports) with the rest of the world grew by 96 per cent.

Co-operation and Development. A number of industrial agreements have been completed in relation to electronics, chemicals, petro-chemicals, electrical appliances, pharmaceuticals, dyes and pigments, glass, electric generation, office equipment, photographic and phonographic supplies. The Permanent Executive Committee agreed in September 1969 on proposals for a regional policy for industrial development, integration of industry by sector, widening of markets, investment policy, and measures to be taken to assist the less developed countries of the region.

LAFTA has established a System of Payments and Credits to facilitate commercial operations between member countries. The system functions by means of a network of credit agreements between central banks, and a procedure of multilateral compensation, which is administered by the Central Reserve Bank of Peru. Operations channelled through this system have increased from $100 million in 1966, the first year of functioning, to almost $980 million in 1972.

LAFTA has adopted a policy of co-ordination and harmonization of legislation, principally through special intergovernmental agreements, such as the Agreement on Maritime Transport, the Protocol on Transit of Persons, and the Protocol on the Settlement of Disputes. A number of studies have been carried out on matters relating to integration, such as industrial property, harmonization of fiscal laws, customs legislation and the adoption by Contracting Parties of common positions with regard to third parties.

THE MAGHREB PERMANENT CONSULTATIVE COMMITTEE

(COMITÉ PERMANENT CONSULTATIF DU MAGHREB)

Rue Oued Hitti à Mutuelleville, Tunis, Tunisia

A permanent committee for economic co-ordination, established in 1964 by the Economic Ministers of the member countries.

MEMBERS *

Algeria Morocco Tunisia

* Libya withdrew from all Maghreb institutions in 1970.

FUNCTIONS

The Maghreb Permanent Consultative Committee has the general aim of studying the whole network of problems bearing on economic co-operation in the Maghreb, and of proposing to the Conference of Economic Ministers, either upon the demand of the latter or in the context of the programme outlined by it, all measures designed to strengthen such co-operation and realize the construction of a Maghreb Economic Community.

The Conference of Economic Ministers is the supreme embodiment of the Maghreb economic organization. It comprises the Economic Ministers of the Maghreb countries and is assisted by delegations of senior officials.

The Maghreb Permanent Consultative Committee exercises tutelar authority over the commissions and specialized organs of which it co-ordinates and directs the activities. The President and Vice-President are both from the same country and come from each of the member countries in turn.

Languages: Arabic and French.

ORGANIZATION

(For the composition of the Maghreb Permanent Consultative Committee and the rules governing its conduct see the Statutes below.)

Secretariat: f. 1965; each member country is represented by one delegate who exercises his functions permanently at the Headquarters of the Committee; Sec. MUSTAPHA EL KASRI; budget provided by equal donations from the member states.

DEPENDENT BODIES

Maghreb Centre for Industrial Studies: Tangier, Morocco; originally f. 1968 in Tripoli, but transferred to Tangier in 1971, following the withdrawal of Libya; Dir. MOHAMED DAYA (Tunisia).

Maghreb Alfa Bureau: Algiers, Algeria; f. 1965; Dir. LABOUT BELABBES (Algeria).

Maghreb Committee on Tourism: Tunis, Tunisia; f. 1966.

Maghreb Committee on Postal and Telecommunications Co-ordination: seat rotates; f. 1964.

Maghreb Commission for Transport and Communications: Tunis, Tunisia; f. 1965; has four subsidiary committees:

Maghreb Committee for Air Transport, Rabat.

Committee for Maghreb Railways, Algiers.

Maghreb Committee on Shipping.

Maghreb Committee on Road Transport.

Maghreb Committee on Employment and Labour: Rabat; f. 1970.

Maghreb Committee on Normalisation: Algiers; f. 1970.

Maghreb Committee on Insurance and Re-insurance: Rabat; f. 1970.

Maghreb Committee for Pharmaceutical Products: f. 1970.

Maghreb Committee for Electric Energy: f. 1973.

RECORD OF EVENTS

1964
October

First meeting of the Economic Ministers of the four Maghreb countries, Tunis. The creation of the permanent consultative committee was decided upon.

It was recommended that the four countries should work towards the establishment of a tariff union and the principle of co-ordinating export and industrial policies was affirmed.

November

Second Conference of Ministers, Tangier. The decision was taken to establish a centre for industrial studies and it was recommended that Maghreb co-ordination on tourism, transport, posts and telecommunications, manpower and development finance should be developed.

March	First meeting of the Permanent Consultative Committee, Algiers. Inner organization and operation of the Committee: three commissions appointed: one to draw up a schedule of the economies of the four countries, in order to be able eventually to establish relations with the important economic communities; a foreign trade commission to consider means of co-ordinating the export of citrus fruits, wines, esparto and olive oil, and to study the problems of duty-free trade within the Maghreb; and a commission to study the co-ordination of industry and energy, and to seek markets for Maghrebi industrial products.	March	Indefinite postponement of Maghreb Economics Ministers meeting originally planned for May 1966.
May	Third meeting of the Maghreb Economic Ministers, Tripoli. Plans agreed for the co-ordination of exports of citrus fruits, wines, esparto and olive oil. An esparto bureau established in Algiers to handle the exports of all four countries. Special commissions set up for statistics, accounting, and the steel industry, and it was agreed to study improvement of telecommunication links. Secretariat for the Consultative Committee established.	July	Meeting of the Advisory Committee on Education, Algiers.
October	Meeting of Maghreb Committee on Tourism, Algiers. Meeting of Commission on Transport and Communications, Tunis.	October	Agreement between presidents of National Airlines to form a single company, to be called "Air Maghreb".
November	Signing of convention setting up Committee on Railways.	November	Fifth meeting of Economic Ministers in Tunis. Decision to draft a new five-year agreement on general economic co-operation. The agreement to be based on the reduction of exchange barriers, the harmonization of customs policies towards third countries and an agreed list of industries whose products would benefit from freedom of movement and from a common external tariff.
December	Meeting of Consultative Committee, Algiers. Studied reports on co-ordination of transport and tourism in the Maghreb, and on industry and postal and telecommunications agreements.	1968
1966		January	Meeting of Maghreb Air Transport Committee, Rabat. Agreement on the creation of "Air Maghreb" and on other co-operation projects concerning air transport. First meeting of the Administrative Council of the Centre for Industrial Studies, Tripoli. Approval of study programmes on fertilizers, desalinization of seawater and training of skilled manpower.
February	Fourth annual meeting of the Maghreb Economic Ministers, Algiers. Plans agreed for establishment of a permanent secretariat in Tunis. The Ministers charged the Committee with the examination of the obstacles hindering the development of inter-Maghreb trade. Reports drawn up by the Committee on tourism, national accounts and statistics, and transport and communications were adopted.	April	Meeting of Commission on Transport and Communications, Tunis. Recommendation for a master plan to be drawn up of transport in the Maghreb region.
July	Meeting of Commission on Trading Relations, Tunis. Discussion of liberalisation of Maghreb reciprocal trade relations.	May	Meeting in Algiers of Mixed Commission on Frontier Formalities. Recommendations were made on facilitating the movement of travellers between Maghreb countries by road and rail.

1967		1969
January	Meeting of Permanent Consultative Committee, Rabat; discussion of possible negotiations with EEC and inter-Maghreb trade relations.	March	Meeting of experts in Algiers to examine study on industry.
		May	Second extraordinary session of Centre for Industrial Studies. Meeting of government delegates to study synthesis report on economic co-operation.
		1970
		March	Sixth meeting of Economic Ministers postponed because of absence of Libya.

THE MAGHREB PERMANENT CONSULTATIVE COMMITTEE

1970
July

Sixth Conference of Economic Ministers held in Rabat. Meeting held without participation of Libya, who later in summer announced withdrawal from the organization. The Ministers agreed to readjust and strengthen the whole Maghreb project. Programme for 1970-71 drawn up: studies on co-operation in tourism, national infrastructures, transport, export policies, etc. The Conference decided to create specialized committees on normalization, insurance and reinsurance, employment and labour, and compensation. Mauritania attended the meeting as an observer.

(No meetings have been reported since July 1970.)

STATUTES

Signed at Tunis, October 1st, 1964, by the Economic Ministers of the four member-states.

Article 1. The Permanent Consultative Committee is an organism in which representatives of the four countries of the Maghreb are brought together. It is composed of a President and eight members, of whom four are titular representatives and four are deputies.

Article 2. The President of the Permanent Consultative Committee must have the rank of Minister. The Presidency is entrusted to each of the member states in turn for the duration of one year.

Article 3. The President may arrange to be assisted by a Vice-President who will be the titular representative of the country which is holding the Presidency.

Article 4. The Government of each of the countries of the Maghreb will appoint a deputy titular member with the rank of Director of Central Administration.

The representatives of each country will be able to command the help of these experts in case of need.

Article 5. The Permanent Consultative Committee is provided with a Permanent Secretariat headed by an Administrative Secretary appointed by the President.

The location of the Secretariat will vary according to the location of the Presidency.

Article 6. The Permanent Consultative Committee will have correspondents in each member state appointed by the government concerned. These correspondents must establish a Central Administration, and preferably some organizations and services with the object of planning economic programmes.

Article 7. Meetings of the Permanent Consultative Committee will be held at least once every three months when called by the President. At the same time as the President calls members of the Committee to meetings, he will present them with a programme embodying the proposals which he has received from the member countries.

Article 8. The proceedings of every session of the Permanent Consultative Committee must be recorded in Minutes drawn up by the President in office. These minutes must receive the unanimous approbation of the members of the Committee.

Article 9. The President will supply each of the members of the Committee with a copy of all documents brought to his attention, as well as any document likely to be of value to the Committee.

Article 10. The President will submit the budget planned to cover the expenses of the Permanent Consultative Committee for the approbation of the Maghreb Council of Economic Ministers.

ADMINISTRATION

CO-ORDINATION COMMITTEE

Committee for Co-ordination of Investigations of the Lower Mekong Basin: c/o ECAFE, Sala Santitham, Bangkok, Thailand; founded in 1957 to administer the overall Mekong Project; meets three or more times annually, chairmanship rotating between the four member (riparian) states (Chair. 1972, Thailand); Mems.: H.E. KHY TAINGLIM (Khmer Republic), H.E. HOUMPHANH SAIGNASITH (Laos), H.E. Dr. BOONROD BINSON (Thailand), BUI HUU TUAN (Republic of Viet-Nam); publ. Annual Report (issued Jan.-Feb.).

ADVISORY BOARD

Composed of six members of outstanding international reputation to advise the Committee on technical, financial, economic and other matters; Mems.: Dr. M. BOUVARD, Dr. R. F. CHANDLER, Sir ROBERT JACKSON, F. RODRIGUEZ, GENGU SUZUKI, Dr. V. H. UMBRIGHT.

EXECUTIVE AGENT

Responsible for day-to-day management and co-ordination between sessions of the Committee. Assisted by a staff provided by the riparian member countries and the United Nations (ECAFE and UNDP).

Executive Agent: W. J. VAN DER OORD.

THE LOWER MEKONG BASIN

The 2,620 mile long Mekong is the tenth largest river in the world. The Lower Mekong, which extends from the Burma-Laos border to the South China Sea, has a drainage area of some 236,000 square miles, i.e. as large as France and twice as large as Japan. Some 30 million people live in this area, which lies within the Khmer Republic, Laos, Thailand and the Republic of Viet-Nam. Investigations of the river's potential were carried out in 1951, 1956 and 1957 with a view to developing hydroelectric power, navigation, irrigation and flood control; and in 1958 a UN Survey Mission under Lt.-Gen. Raymond Wheeler reported favourable prospects for comprehensive development. In 1959, an FAO Mission, organized at the request of the Committee, completed a report which amplified the recommendations of the Wheeler Mission in the fields of agriculture, forestry and fisheries. In 1961, similarly at the request of the Committee, the Ford Foundation financed a team of experts headed by Professor Gilbert White to examine the social, economic and administrative implications of the Mekong Development Project.

MEKONG RIVER DEVELOPMENT PROJECT

MAIN ACTIVITIES

Data Collection

A continuing programme of basic data collection in such fields as hydrology, meteorology, topographic mapping and levelling, agriculture and industry, in addition to technical and engineering investigations of multi-purpose projects. An indicative development plan for the water resources of the Basin was published in 1972.

Mainstream and Tributary Projects

Of the 10 mainstream and 16 tributary projects identified in early surveys, priority has been given to the feasibility investigation of mainstream projects at Pa Mong, Sambor and Tonle Sap. In 1972, after nine years of investigation, the Pa Mong (Phase II) mainstream project feasibility report was completed by the U.S. Bureau of Reclamation. The Sambor mainstream project feasibility report was completed by the Overseas Technical Co-operation Agency of Japan, in 1970.

So far twelve dams have been completed on tributaries of the Lower Mekong and a further two are under construction (see Table). Of those completed, all were funded by the government of the country concerned either unilaterally or bilaterally with assistance from a cooperating donor country. Two of the twelve were built some years ago without Mekong Committee participation, but the Committee played a part, major in some cases, minor in others, in planning and fund-seeking for the other ten. One of the latest to be completed—that on the Nam Ngum in Laos—was a direct Committee accomplishment and the first such construction in the Mekong basin to be financed multilaterally. A similar multilateral undertaking on behalf of the Committee, the Prek Thnot dam in the Khmer Republic, is now under construction and work on a $22 million extension of the Nam Ngum project is to start early in 1974.

In addition, two bridges across the mainstream Mekong are planned: at My Thuan in the Viet-Nam Delta and between Laos and Thailand in the Vientiane-Nong Khai area.

In 1971, arrangements were made by the Mekong Committee for the pre-investment preparation of up to fifteen pioneer agricultural projects in the four riparian countries. This programme is being executed by the World Bank, in collaboration with the FAO and Asian Development Bank, with funds provided by Japan, the Netherlands, the United Kingdom, the United States, and the UNDP.

Navigation Improvement

Hydrographic surveys of important reaches of the Mekong river have been in progress for several years. Rock-blasting, channel marking and dredging operations have been organized, as well as provision for improvement in cargo-handling facilities and craft construction.

Other Projects

Experimental farms, mineral surveys, fisheries and forestry development, power market surveys, power market and electro-processing industry studies, and training of administrative and technical personnel from the four riparian states.

The will of ALFRED NOBEL bequeathed the whole of his fortune (more than 30 million kronor) to a fund, the interest of which would be paid out annually to those who during the preceding year "have conferred the greatest benefit on mankind". The interest is divided into five equal parts, to be allotted as follows: "One part to the person who shall have made the most important discovery or invention within the field of physics; one part to the person who shall have made the most important chemical discovery or improvement; one part to the person who shall have made the most important discovery within the domain of physiology or medicine; one part to the person who shall have produced in the field of literature the most outstanding work of an idealistic tendency; and one part to the person who shall have done the most or the best work for fraternity between nations, for the abolition or reduction of standing armies, and for the holding and promotion of peace congresses".

Prizes have been distributed annually on the festival day of the Foundation, December 10th, since 1901 (except during the two world wars).

(1973)

President: KÅRE WILLOCH (Norway).

Vice-Presidents: JOHANNES ANTONSSON (Sweden), JON SKAFTASON (Iceland), V. J. SUKSELAINEN (Finland), IB STETTER (Denmark).

The Council meets annually in one of the Nordic capitals. At each session a Presidium is elected to take charge of the Council's work until the next session. Each delegation elects its own President, the Council President being the one from the country which is host that year. The other four are Vice-Presidents.

The Council consists of 78 delegates elected annually from the Parliament of each country (18 from Denmark, Finland, Norway and Sweden and 6 from Iceland) and of non-voting Government Representatives. Resolutions are passed in the form of recommendations sent to the Nordic Council of Ministers which must submit progress reports to the Council annually.

The Council members are distributed on five standing committees. The Economic Committee numbers 22 members, the Cultural Committee 17, the Legal Committee 13, the Committee on Social and Environment Policies 13 and the Communications Committee 13. The Committees meet during and between the sessions preparing the items to be put before the Plenary session. The proposals dealt with by the Council are either raised by the members, by the national governments or by the Nordic Council of Ministers, the main co-operation body at government level. The parliamentarians may also submit questions to governments or ministers for oral answers during the sessions.

SECRETARIATS

A secretariat for the Presidium was established in 1971 in Stockholm. This secretariat is responsible for the Nordic Council's tasks of a common Nordic character and for contacts with the Council of Ministers (see below). Besides this, the Nordic Council has a national secretariat in each capital. The heads of the secretariats form a collegium that prepares the Nordic Council's work.

REVISION OF THE HELSINKI TREATY

In November 1970 agreement was reached on revising the Helsinki Treaty of 1962 and thereby establishing a Nordic Council of Ministers, a Committee of Experts and an Arbitration Tribunal. The revision came into force on July 1st, 1971.

THE NORDIC COUNCIL

COUNCIL OF MINISTERS

Under this revision a Nordic Council of Ministers with jurisdiction over the whole field of Nordic co-operation was established. An important part of Nordic co-operation at governmental level takes place within the framework of this Council or at informal meetings of Nordic Ministers. The Council of Ministers has established a secretariat in Oslo, functioning from July 1973. In January 1972 a secretariat for cultural co-operation was set up in Copenhagen.

The composition of the Council of Ministers varies according to the kind of questions to be dealt with. When dealing with specialized questions the Council of Ministers includes the specialist Ministers concerned. A government member has been appointed by each country with general co-ordinating tasks relating to the work of the Council of Ministers and to Nordic governmental co-operation in general, as well as to contacts with the Nordic Council. The Council of Ministers may not take formal decisions without the explicit support of the countries concerned. The Council of Ministers is not a supra-national organization. Except in questions of procedure, unanimity is required; each country has one vote.

The Council of Ministers presents an annual report to the Nordic Council on the past year's achievements and on plans for continued co-operation. Recommendations and other representations from the Nordic Council are submitted by the latter or by the governments. The Council of Ministers can also make proposals to the Nordic Council.

Among important tasks for the Council of Ministers are economic co-operation, cultural co-operation within the framework of the Nordic Cultural Treaty (see above), transport co-operation and major policy questions in the legal and security fields.

ACTIVITIES

ECONOMIC CO-OPERATION

The Nordic Council of Ministers' report 1973 included a programme of action with specific plans in the fields of industry and energy policy such as the establishment of a Nordic Fund for Technology and Industrial Development. The Fund started with a capital of 10 million Swedish kroner, which will be raised gradually up to an amount of 50 million Swedish kroner. The Fund operates through grants or loans for technical research and development projects of joint interest to two or more Nordic countries.

The programme also envisaged a joint Nordic agency for the testing and control of materials, with the objective, besides co-ordination of work, to promote internationally a Nordic line in testing methods. The NORDTEST was established in late 1973. According to the programme the building industries are to be integrated to create a common Nordic market in this field. A first survey was carried out in 1973.

A recommendation passed during the 1973 session of the Nordic Council calls upon the ministers to report on the possibilities of establishing a common Nordic energy policy or an organized co-ordination of action to solve the problems in this field. Co-operation as regards electricity supply has taken place through the Nordel since 1963.

From the beginning of the 1960s the Nordic Council has encouraged joint action regarding aid to the developing countries. Several projects of this kind have been carried through. Co-ordination of other projects and frequent consultations between the national administrative agencies dealing with foreign aid programmes have occurred.

From the beginning of 1973 Denmark has been a member of the EEC, the other countries having their separate treaties on free trade with the Community.

The four non-members of the EEC have remained in EFTA, which also forms a basis for economic co-operation between the countries.

In August 1973 the Nordic Council arranged its fifth conference for international organizations, in Reykjavik. These conferences are an important part of the exchange of experiences in international co-operation.

CULTURAL CO-OPERATION

Increased Nordic cultural co-operation is the aim of the Nordic Cultural Treaty, which entered into force on January 1st, 1972. Developing the Nordic cultural community and increasing the joint impact of the Nordic countries' achievements in education, research and other cultural fields by common planning, co-ordination and division of work, are agreed goals of cultural policies. Under the Nordic Council of Ministers (composed of Ministers for Culture and Education) a Committee of Officials is directly responsible for the progress of cultural co-operation, assisted by special reference groups consisting of cultural workers and field experts.

The Nordic Council has recommended among other things that Scandinavia should be an educational unit. Many university examinations are valid throughout Scandinavia. Further, the Council has encouraged the teaching of other Nordic languages in the schools of the member countries and translation of literature for the benefit of other Nordic citizens.

Institutions created on the recommendation of the Nordic Council are valuable in combining efforts in specific fields, including the Nordic Institute of Theoretical Physics (Copenhagen), Institute of Maritime Law (Oslo), Institute of African Studies (Uppsala), Institute of Asiatic Studies (Copenhagen), Institute for Social Planning (Stockholm), Scandinavian Institute of Public Health (Gothenburg),

THE NORDIC COUNCIL

Nordic Institute for Folklore (Åbo), Nordic College for Training of Journalists (Århus). Two new institutions were created in 1973: the Institute of Vulcanology (Reykjavík) and the Nordic Samic Institute (Kautokeino).

In 1967 a Nordic Cultural Fund was created with an annual budget of 5 million Danish crowns. The Fund is directed by a common authority and administered by the Secretariat for cultural co-operation in Copenhagen. Every year during the session a Literature Prize is given to an outstanding author from one of the Nordic countries. A similar Prize in Music is given every two years to an outstanding composer.

A recommendation from the 1973 session of the Nordic Council calls for considerable increases of the joint Nordic budget as well as the budget of the Cultural Fund.

Both the Nordic Council and the Nordic Council of Ministers have given high priority to continued expansion of co-operation regarding transmission of the countries' radio and television programmes. In addition to NORDVISION, a joint co-operation body between the national radio and TV corporation, a working group is dealing with the expansion programme and has submitted its first report.

Other current items are increased support for Nordic youth co-operation, harmonization of curricula, expanded co-operation regarding information and documentation in research as well as adult education.

LEGAL CO-OPERATION

The Nordic Council works towards uniformity of legislation and interpretation of the law. A large proportion of private law is already uniform throughout the Nordic countries.

There are special extradition facilities between the Nordic countries, and the Council has recommended further stages towards co-operation between the police and the courts of the Nordic countries.

In addition to the previously mentioned permanent Institute of Maritime Law a permanent Council for Criminology has come into being on the recommendation of the Council, with a secretariat in Helsinki.

Citizens of one country working in other Nordic countries are in many respects given the legal status of nationals. New rules have also been introduced making it easier to change citizenship of Nordic countries. At the autumn session in 1973 the Council recommended the governments to study the matter of giving all Nordic citizens living in a local area the right to vote in local elections and to be elected member of the local representation at their place of residence.

The Legal Committee of the Nordic Council has emphasized the need for a long-term Nordic legislative co-operation plan in view of increasing mobility of labour, extended tourism, etc. This question has been discussed in consultations between the Committee and the Ministers and is being dealt with at the 22nd session.

SOCIO-POLITICAL CO-OPERATION AND ENVIRONMENT POLICIES

On the Council's recommendation a Convention came into force in 1954 abolishing work permits for wage earners in all the Nordic countries except Iceland, and creating a common labour market. A free labour market exists. For certain professions, such as physicians, dentists and nurses, there are specific rules.

Reciprocity in social security legislation was largely achieved before the Nordic Council came into being, but the Nordic Convention of Social Security is a result of the work of the Council. It came into force in 1956 and has been revised several times. There is also a special Convention from 1967 regarding transfer of social insurance.

Joint research takes place in many branches of health care. The situation of the disabled has been brought up and dealt with in the Nordic Council.

With reference to the common labour market the Nordic Council, in September 1973, arranged a conference in Stavanger in co-operation with trade unions and organizations of employers.

Nordic collaboration in environmental matters is to be intensified. Pollution of the Baltic, the Gulf of Bothnia, the Öresund (the Sound), the Skagerack and the Kattegatt is to be prevented. A special contact organ, in collaboration with Nordforsk (a special joint body for applied research), is studying matters including destruction and handling of waste matter, noise, air pollution, training in environmental protection care and research. Both the Nordic Council of Ministers and the Nordic Council see the environment policy as a matter of extreme urgency, and a draft for a Nordic environmental protection agreement has been drawn up to be signed during the 22nd session of the Council.

TRANSPORT AND COMMUNICATIONS

The use of passports by Nordic citizens when travelling in other Nordic countries was abolished in 1952. An agreement from 1958 provides for a common "passport border" also for non-Nordic nationals. A special Treaty on Transport co-operation was signed in 1973, the implementation being seen to by the Nordic Council of Ministers.

Two special projects have been started by the Nordic Council of Ministers. These projects refer to future transport systems for various built-up areas and to the effect on the roads of the volume of the traffic and of the axle load.

With special reference to the northern regions of Finland, Norway and Sweden the Council has recommended considerable improvements in land and air communications as well as telecommunications. The need for communications systems, especially across the North Calott area, has been notified, including several inter-nation highways.

Regarding postal communications there exists a Nordic postal union and uniform rules facilitate communications. The same applies to the telegraphic communications. The railroad as well as customs administrations have special bodies for permanent co-operation. A bank book from any Nordic Postal bank or Savings bank is accepted in any of the Nordic countries.

A question of long-term interest in the Nordic countries has been the building of a bridge across the Öresund (the Sound), and in 1973 an agreement was signed by the Governments of Denmark and Sweden about this.

In order to encourage tourism the Council has arranged for a special investigation to be started under the auspices of the Nordic Council of Ministers.

NORDIC CO-OPERATION

Many committees are today organized under the Nordic Council of Ministers, but extensive co-operation is going on in various permanent committees and other permanent bodies outside the Council.

TREATY OF CO-OPERATION BETWEEN DENMARK, FINLAND, ICELAND, NORWAY AND SWEDEN

Signed in Helsinki, March 23rd, 1962; amended February 13th, 1971.

Preamble (1962): The Governments of Denmark, Finland, Iceland, Norway and Sweden:

Desirous of furthering the close connections between the Nordic nations in culture and in juridical and social conceptions and of developing co-operation between the Nordic countries;

Endeavouring to create uniform rules in the Nordic countries in as many respects as possible;

Hoping to achieve in all fields where prerequisites exist an appropriate division of labour between these countries;

Desirous of continuing the co-operation, important to these countries, in the Nordic Council and other agencies of co-operation;

Preamble (1971): The Governments of Denmark, Finland, Iceland, Norway and Sweden:

Desirous of strengthening and further enlarging the institutional foundations of the co-operation between the Nordic countries;

Considering it appropriate for this purpose to amend the Treaty of Co-operation of March 23rd, 1962, between the Nordic countries;

Having therefore decided to include in the Treaty of Co-operation the fundamental provisions regarding the Nordic Council;

Having also decided to include in the Treaty of Co-operation provisions regarding a Nordic Council of Ministers, with competence in the whole field of Nordic co-operation, have agreed as follows:

ARTICLE 1. The Contracting Parties shall endeavour to maintain and further develop co-operation between the countries in the juridical, cultural, social and economic fields and in questions of transport and communications.

THE NORDIC COUNCIL

ARTICLES 2-7. Juridical Co-operation.
ARTICLES 8-13. Cultural Co-operation.
ARTICLES 14-17. Social Co-operation.
ARTICLES 18-25. Economic Co-operation.
ARTICLES 26-29. Co-operation in Communications.
ARTICLES 30-34. Other Co-operation.

ARTICLES 35-38. Agreements for Nordic Co-operation.
ARTICLES 39-54. The Nordic Council.
ARTICLES 55-62. The Nordic Council of Ministers.
ARTICLE 63. Amendments to the Agreement.
ARTICLES 64-65. Final Provisions.

TREATY BETWEEN DENMARK, FINLAND, ICELAND, NORWAY AND SWEDEN CONCERNING CULTURAL CO-OPERATION

Signed on March 15th, 1971.

Preamble: The Governments of Denmark, Finland, Iceland, Norway and Sweden:

Having regard to the close cultural ties in the Nordic region;

Attaching great importance to the varied and comprehensive co-operation which is taking place in collaboration with the Nordic Council and other organs of co-operation;

Referring to the Co-operation Agreement between Denmark, Finland, Iceland, Norway and Sweden of 1962, have agreed as follows:

ARTICLE 1. This Treaty aims:

At strengthening and intensifying cultural co-operation in a wide sense between the Contracting Parties in order to develop further the Nordic cultural community and to increase the combined effect of the countries' investments in education, research and other cultural activities through common planning, co-ordination, co-operation and distribution of work;

At creating the practical preconditions for efficient co-operation.

ARTICLE 2. The Treaty also has the aim of creating a basis for a co-ordinated contribution in international cultural co-operation.

Articles 3-5 deal with co-operation in the fields of education and research and other cultural activities.

TREATY BETWEEN DENMARK, FINLAND, ICELAND, NORWAY AND SWEDEN CONCERNING CO-OPERATION IN TRANSPORT AND COMMUNICATIONS

Signed in Stockholm, November 6th, 1972.

Preamble: The Governments of Denmark, Finland, Iceland, Norway and Sweden:

Being aware of the significance of rationally organized and efficient transport for the economic life of the Nordic countries and for Nordic production co-operation and exchange of goods;

Recalling the co-operation which has long existed between the Nordic countries in the field of transport and communications, inter alia through the Nordic Council;

Being aware of the importance of the co-operation in the field of transport and communications being extended and intensified with the aim of bringing about optimum utilization of the collective resources of the Nordic countries;

Being in agreement that extended co-operation must take place with due consideration of the economic interests of each Nordic country;

Being at the same time in agreement that an extension of the co-operation should take place in a manner which is in accordance with participation of Nordic countries in, or their co-operation with, an extended European economic market, and with the economic relations which Nordic countries have with countries outside that market;

Considering it important that a Nordic country which participates in international co-operation in the field of transport and communications in connections where not all the countries are represented, bears in mind the interests of the other countries;

Referring to the Treaty of Co-operation of 1962 between Denmark, Finland, Iceland, Norway and Sweden, as amended in 1971, have agreed the following provisions:

ARTICLE 1. In the field of transport and communications, this Treaty comprises transport on land and sea and in the air and also postal and telecommunications services. The treaty does not, however, cover such matters of road traffic safety which are considered to come within the ambit of the Nordic Traffic Safety Council, nor does it cover matters concerning the international sea transport and air transport policy relations of the Nordic countries.

ARTICLE 2. The object of this Treaty is:

To strengthen and develop co-operation with the aim of establishing rationally organized and efficient systems of transport and communications;

To bring about, by means of co-ordination, co-operation and division of work, better utilization and a greater collective effect of the work in the field of transport and communications.

It is not the aim of this Treaty that current co-operation between different Nordic authorities, organizations or companies should be replaced, nor that matters arising in the future which are suitable for such direct co-operation should be dealt with in new forms. The intention is rather to promote and support co-operation which has been established in this way and to bring about such supplementary, overriding or long-term efforts as are otherwise found suitable.

THE NORDIC COUNCIL

PUBLICATIONS

The Nordic Council publishes a periodical called Nordisk Kontakt, which gives an outline of the parliamentary work in the Nordic countries. A series of reports covering joint research projects and conferences as well as a Nordic Statistical Yearbook are also produced.

NORTH ATLANTIC TREATY ORGANIZATION— NATO

Brussels 1110, Belgium

Founded in 1949 as an international collective defence organization linking a group of European states with the U.S.A. and Canada. NATO members declare that they will regard an attack on one of them as an attack on all, and will assist any attacked country "by such action as it deems necessary". Greece and Turkey joined in 1952, and the Federal Republic of Germany in 1955. France withdrew from the military side of NATO in 1966.

Between Ministerial Sessions, the Council functions through the Permanent Representatives, who meet at least once a week.

SECRETARIAT

Secretary-General, and Chairman of North Atlantic Council: JOSEPH LUNS (Netherlands).

Deputy Secretary-General: P. PANSA CEDRONIO (Italy).

The Secretary-General is empowered to offer his help in cases of disputes between member countries and to initiate and facilitate procedures for settlement.

Director of Information: CLAUS G. M. KOREN (Norway).

THE DIVISIONS

Division of Political Affairs

Assistant Secretary-General: JÖRG KASTL (Federal Republic of Germany).

Keeps in contact with delegations and international organizations, and prepares reports for the Secretary-General and the Council. Maintains political liaison with national delegations and international organizations. Prepares reports on political subjects for the Secretary-General and the Council.

Division of Defence Planning and Policy

Assistant Secretary-General: DAVID C. HUMPHREYS (U.K.).

The Division studies all matters concerning the defence of the Alliance, especially any with political or economic effect on defence problems, and also the overall financial aspects of defence by country. It analyses Services of national defence programmes.

Division of Defence Support

Assistant Secretary-General: Dr. GARDINER L. TUCKER (U.S.A.).

The Division promotes the most efficient use of the Allies' resources in the production of military equipment and studies its standardization. It exercises technical and financial supervision over the infrastructure programme.

Division of Scientific Affairs

Assistant Secretary-General: Prof. NIMET OZDAZ (Turkey).

Advises the Secretary-General on scientific matters of interest to NATO. Effects liaison in the scientific field with civil and military authorities of NATO and with international organizations.

MILITARY ORGANIZATION

THE MILITARY COMMITTEE

President: Field-Marshal Sir MICHAEL CARVER (U.K.).

Chairman designate: Admiral of the Fleet Sir PETER HILL-NORTON (U.K.).

Deputy Chairman: Vice-Admiral CHARLES S. MINTER (U.S.A.).

The Military Committee is composed of one of the Chiefs-of-Staff, or their representative, of each member country except France, and is the highest military authority in NATO. It meets at least once a year and also whenever important decisions affecting policy have to be taken.

THE DEFENCE PLANNING REVIEW

As NATO is an international, not a supra-national organization, its member countries decide themselves the amount to be devoted to their defence effort and the form which the latter will assume. Thus, the aim of NATO's defence planning is to develop realistic military plans for the defence of the alliance at reasonable cost.

Under the annual Defence Planning Review, the political, military and economic factors are considered in relation to strategy, force requirements and available resources. The procedure for the co-ordination of military plans and defence expenditures rests on the detailed and comparative analysis of the capabilities of member countries.

INFRASTRUCTURE

Infrastructure is a term covering fixed installations such as airfields, telecommunications networks, fuel pipelines, etc., which modern armies need to operate efficiently. All those installations which are for the use of international forces are financed in common.

An infrastructure programme was first approved in 1952, and £231 million allotted. Since 1966 programmes have been planned on a five-year basis, the current period being 1970-74. The total cost of NATO common infrastructure since 1951 (including current five-year plan) is approximately £1,900 million.

NORTH ATLANTIC TREATY ORGANIZATION

NORTH ATLANTIC TREATY

(April 1949)

The Parties to this Treaty reaffirm their faith in the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations and their desire to live in peace with all peoples and all Governments.

They are determined to safeguard the freedom, common heritage and civilization of their peoples, founded on the principles of democracy, individual liberty and the rule of law.

They seek to promote stability and well-being in the North Atlantic area.

They are resolved to unite their efforts for collective defence and for the preservation of peace and security.

They therefore agree to this North Atlantic Treaty:

ARTICLE 1

The Parties undertake, as set forth in the Charter of the United Nations, to settle any international dispute in which they may be involved by peaceful means in such a manner that international peace and security and justice are not endangered, and to refrain in their international relations from the threat or use of force in any manner inconsistent with the purposes of the United Nations.

ARTICLE 2

The Parties will contribute toward the further development of peaceful and friendly international relations by strengthening their free institutions, by bringing about a better understanding of the principles upon which these institutions are founded, and by promoting conditions of stability and well-being. They will seek to eliminate conflict in their international economic policies and will encourage economic collaboration between any or all of them.

ARTICLE 3

In order more effectively to achieve the objectives of this Treaty, the Parties, separately and jointly, by means of continuous and effective self-help and mutual aid, will maintain and develop their individual and collective capacity to resist armed attack.

ARTICLE 4

The Parties will consult together whenever, in the opinion of any of them, the territorial integrity, political independence or security of any of the Parties is threatened.

ARTICLE 5

The Parties agree that an armed attack against one or more of them in Europe or North America shall be considered an attack against them all; and consequently they agree that, if such an armed attack occurs, each of them, in exercise of the right of individual or collective self-defence recognised by Article 51 of the Charter of the United Nations, will assist the Party or Parties so attacked by taking forthwith, individually and in concert with the other Parties, such action as it deems necessary, including the use of armed force, to restore and maintain the security of the North Atlantic area.

Any such armed attack and all measures taken as a result thereof shall immediately be reported to the Security Council. Such measures shall be terminated when the Security Council has taken the measures necessary to restore and maintain international peace and security.

ARTICLE 6

For the purpose of Article 5 an armed attack on one or more of the Parties is deemed to include an armed attack on the territory of any of the Parties in Europe or North America, on the Algerian Departments of France (inapplicable since July 1962), on the occupation forces of any Party in Europe, on the islands under the jurisdiction of any Party in the North Atlantic area north of the Tropic of Cancer or on the vessels or aircraft in this area of any of the Parties. (Amended on the accession of Greece and Turkey.)

ARTICLE 7

This Treaty does not affect, and shall not be interpreted as affecting, in any way the rights and obligations under the Charter of the Parties which are members of the United Nations, or the primary responsibility of the Security Council for the maintenance of international peace and security.

ARTICLE 8

Each Party declares that none of the international engagements now in force between it and any other of the Parties or any third State is in conflict with the provisions of this Treaty, and undertakes not to enter into any international engagement in conflict with this Treaty.

ARTICLE 9

The Parties hereby establish a council, on which each of them shall be represented, to consider matters concerning the implementation of this Treaty. The Council shall be so organized as to be able to meet promptly at any time. The Council shall set up such subsidiary bodies as may be necessary; in particular it shall establish immediately a defence committee which shall recommend measures for the implementation of Articles 3 and 5.

ARTICLE 10

The Parties may, by unanimous agreement, invite any other European State in a position to further the principles of this Treaty and to contribute to the security of the North Atlantic area to accede to this Treaty. Any State so invited may become a party to the Treaty by depositing its instrument of accession with the Government of the United States of America. The Government of the United States of America will inform each of the Parties of the deposit of each such instrument of accession.

ARTICLE 11

This Treaty shall be ratified and its provisions carried out by the Parties in accordance with their respective constitutional processes. The instruments of ratification shall be deposited as soon as possible with the Government of the United States of America, which will notify all the other signatories of each deposit. The Treaty shall enter into force between the States which have ratified it as soon as the ratifications of the majority of the signatories, including the ratifications of Belgium, Canada, France, Luxembourg, the Netherlands, the United Kingdom and the United States, have been deposited and shall come into effect with respect to other States on the date of the deposit of their ratifications.

ARTICLE 12

After the Treaty has been in force for ten years, or at any time thereafter, the Parties shall, if any of them so requests, consult together for the purpose of reviewing the Treaty, having regard for the factors then affecting peace and security in the North Atlantic area, including the development of universal as well as regional arrangements under the Charter of the United Nations for the maintenance of international peace and security.

NORTH ATLANTIC TREATY ORGANIZATION

ARTICLE 13

After the Treaty has been in force for twenty years, any Party may cease to be a party one year after its notice of denunciation has been given to the Government of the United States of America, which will inform the Governments of the other Parties of the deposit of each notice of denunciation.

ARTICLE 14

This Treaty, of which the English and French texts are equally authentic, shall be deposited in the archives of the Government of the United States of America. Duly certified copies will be transmitted by that Government to the Governments of the other signatories.

THE OLYMPIC GAMES

Château de Vidy, 1007 Lausanne, Switzerland

The International Olympic Committee was founded in 1894 to ensure the regular celebration of the Olympic Games. The Games are restricted to amateurs.

INTERNATIONAL OLYMPIC COMMITTEE

The International Olympic Committee unites 131 national Olympic committees. The 178 members of the International Olympic Committee are chosen as individuals, not as national representatives.

EXECUTIVE BOARD

The Executive Board takes decisions affecting the management of the International Olympic Committee, and assigns duties connected with its current affairs to the Secretariat-General in Lausanne.

Honorary President: AVERY BRUNDAGE (U.S.A.)

President: LORD KILLANIN (Ireland) 1972-.

Vice-Presidents: Le Comte J. DE BEAUMONT (France), Jonkheer H. A. VAN KARNEBEEK (Netherlands), WILLI DAUME (Federal Republic of Germany).

Members of the Board: CONSTANTIN ANDRIANOV (U.S.S.R.), JUAN A. SAMARANCH (Spain), Major S. DE MAGALHAES PADILHA (Brazil), Prince TSUNEYOSHI TAKEDA (Japan), MOHAMMED MZALI (Tunisia).

Director: MONIQUE BERLIOUX.

Chief of Protocol: JUAN ANTONIO SAMARANCH (Spain).

Past Presidents: DIMETRIUS BIKELAS (Greece) 1894-96, Baron PIERRE DE COUBERTIN (France) 1896-1925, Count DE BAILLET-LATOUR (Belgium) 1925-42, J. SIGFRID EDSTRÖM (Sweden) 1946-52, AVERY BRUNDAGE (U.S.A.) 1952-72.

OBJECTIVES

(as stated by Baron Pierre de Coubertin)

1. To bring to the attention of the world the fact that a national programme of physical training and competitive sport will not only develop stronger and healthier boys and girls but also, and perhaps more important, will make better and happier citizens through the character building that follows participation in properly administrated amateur sport.
2. To demonstrate the principles of fair play and good sportsmanship, which could be adopted with great advantage in many other spheres of activity.
3. To stimulate interest in the fine arts through exhibitions and demonstrations, and thus contribute to a broader and more well rounded life.
4. To teach that sport is play for fun and enjoyment and not to make money and that with devotion to the task at hand, the reward will take care of itself—the philosophy of the amateur as contrasted to that of materialism.

5. To create international amity and good will, thus leading to a happier and more peaceful world.

The Winter Games may include:

Ski-ing, Skating, Ice Hockey, Bobsleighing, Luge and Biathlon.

FLAG, MOTTO AND FLAME

Flag: White, with five interlaced rings in the centre. The rings are blue, yellow, black, green and red, with the blue ring high on the left nearest the flag pole.

Motto: The Olympic motto is Citius, Altius, Fortius, which means Faster, Higher, Braver.

Flame: In ancient Greece, during the Olympic Games, a sacred flame burned at the Altar of Zeus, in whose honour the Games were held. At the opening ceremony of the modern Olympic Games, the Olympic Flame is lighted. It burns in a conspicuous place in the main stadium throughout the Games. The Torch to light the Flame is lit by the sun at Olympia and carried by runners from a distant point to the Olympic Stadium.

ORGANISATION COMMUNE AFRICAINE, MALGACHE ET MAURICIENNE—OCAM

B.P. 437, Yaoundé, Cameroon

Founded February 1965 in succession to the Union africaine et malgache de coopération économique (UAMCE), to accelerate the political, economic, social, technical and cultural development of member states within the framework of the OAU.

MEMBERS

Cameroon*	Ivory Coast	Rwanda
Central African Republic	Madagascar*	Senegal
Chad*	Mauritius	Togo
Dahomey	Niger	Upper Volta
Gabon

Mauritania left the organization in July 1965 and the People's Republic of the Congo left in September 1973, but both remain members of the Technical Committees of OCAM. Zaïre left in April 1973.

* Under OCAM rules any country withdrawing from the organization must give one year's notice. Cameroon and Chad announced their withdrawals in July 1973, and Madagascar announced its withdrawal in August 1973.

ORGANIZATION

CONFERENCE OF HEADS OF STATE AND OF GOVERNMENT

Chairman: LÉOPOLD SÉDAR SENGHOR (Senegal).

The supreme authority of OCAM meets once a year in ordinary session. The following meetings have been held:

Nouakchott, Mauritania 1965 February.
Abidjan, Ivory Coast 1965 May (Mauritania, Cameroon, Congo Republic absent).

Tananarive, Madagascar 1966 June.
Niamey, Niger 1968 January.
Kinshasa, Zaïre 1969 January.
Yaoundé, Cameroon 1970 January.
Fort Lamy, Chad 1971 January.
Lomé, Togo 1972 April.
Port Louis, Mauritius 1973 May.

The next meeting was scheduled to be held in Bangui, Central African Republic, in January 1974.

COUNCIL OF MINISTERS

Composed of Foreign Ministers of member states. Meets once a year in ordinary session. Responsible for implementing co-operation between OCAM countries as directed by the Conference of Heads of State.

TECHNICAL COMMITTEES

Committee on Sugar: implements provisions of the Common Sugar Market (see below, Accord africain et malgache du sucre), in particular the fixing of a guaranteed price for sugar in OCAM countries.

Scientific and Technical Research Committee: concerned with co-ordination of national research programmes.

Committee of PTT Experts.

Ad hoc Committee for Insurance.

Ad hoc Meat Committee.

Meeting of Statisticians.

Meeting of Film Makers

SECRETARIAT

Responsible for the administration of OCAM. Appointed by the Conference of Heads of State, upon the proposal of the Council of Ministers, for a minimum of two years.

Secretary-General: FALLOU KANE (Senegal).

Directeur de Cabinet: ALI B. TALL (Upper Volta).

DEPARTMENTS

Département des affaires économiques et financières: Dir. AMBROISE FOALEM (Cameroon).

Département des affaires culturelles et sociales, et santé: Dir. ALBERT EKUE (Dahomey).

OCAM is represented at the International Civil Aviation Organization (ICAO) in Montreal, Canada.

AIMS

Harmonization of Customs regulations.
Setting up an African Common Market.
Agreement on Double Taxation.
Regularization of insurance and other costs on trade exchanges.

Stabilization Funds in support of steady prices.
Harmonization of investment codes.
Suppression of subversion in African states.

AFRO—MALAGASY CO-OPERATION

Accord africain et malgache du sucre (Common Sugar Agreement): Secretariat: Ndjamena, Chad; signed in June 1966, came into force in October 1966 and was adopted in a new form at the Port Louis Conference, Mauritius, in May 1973. Both the sugar-producing countries (Congo Republic and Madagascar) and the consumer countries benefit from this agreement, which provides for the fixing each year of a guaranteed price for sugar in OCAM countries and a quota for the exporting countries. This quota represents 70 per cent of the needs of the importing countries. A levy is imposed on sugar imported from non-member countries, though preference is given to European sugar (mainly from Belgium and France). This levy is placed in a common fund; Exec. Dir. ANTOINE ESSOMÉ.

Air Afrique: B.P. 21.017, Abidjan, Ivory Coast; provides international air services between the 11 member states and other countries (Cameroon withdrew from the airline in January 1971 and later set up her own national company); Pres. and Dir.-Gen. AOUSSOU KOFFI (Ivory Coast).

Comité des ministres des transports: Dakar, Senegal; f. 1962 to study transport problems within the former Union Africaine et Malgache (UAM); Sec.-Gen. CHEIKH FAL (Senegal).

Ecole Inter-Etat d'Ingénieurs de l'Équipement Rural (EIÉR): P.O.B. 139, Ouagadougou, Upper Volta.

Institut Culturel Africain, Malgache et Mauricien (ICAM) (Cultural Institute): f. 1971; aims to align the activities of cultural centres in member countries, promote culture and co-operate with similar bodies in other areas.

Mouvement d'étudiants de l'organisation commune africaine, malgache et mauricienne (MEOCAM): f. 1967; student movement of the Afro-Malagasy Common Organization; Pres. KACK KACK (Cameroon).

Office africain et malgache de la propriété industrielle (OAMPI) (Afro-Malagasy Industrial Property Office): B.P. 887, Yaoundé, Cameroon; f. 1962 at Libreville on signature of an agreement by all OCAM states except Rwanda and Congo (Kinshasa), now Zaire; entered into force January 1964; administers the common national legislation on industrial designs, patents, and trade marks; Pres. KONAN BEDIÉ (Ivory Coast); Dir.-Gen. DENIS EKANI.

Organisation africaine et malgache du café (OAMCAF): Paris, France. The eight coffee producing countries of OCAM, including Togo, Dahomey and Ivory Coast, have formed themselves into the African and Malagasy Coffee Organization, which is treated as one unit for purposes of operation of the International Coffee Agreement. These countries receive a block quota under that Agreement and distribute it among themselves through their own consultative machinery.

Organisation pour le développement du tourisme en Afrique—ODTA: Lomé, Togo; Pres. M. MAMODOU ABDOU; Dir.-Gen. Y. GUEYE.

Union africaine et malgache des postes et télécommunications (UAMPT): B.P. 44, Brazzaville, Congo; f. 1961; the UAMPT is a restricted union of Posts and Telecommunications set up to study problems of common interest and to promote the co-ordination of postal and telecommunications services in member countries. Last meeting: April 1974; Gen. Dir. JOACHIM BALIMA; publ. Revue UAMPT, Compte rendu des conférences et des réunions.

Other Co-operation. There are plans to establish two multinational insurance companies, a joint shipping company, and to provide for mutual consultation on Planning. The Scientific, Technical Research Committee aims to co-ordinate national research programmes.

A Permanent African Committee on Higher Education has been established, with an office in each state. The African Computer Institute in Libreville, opened in October 1971, is run by OCAM, and trains computer specialists. In August 1972 France made a donation of 85.7 million CFA francs to the Institute, which will enable it to increase the maximum student intake from 20 to 75.

During a conference of the UAM at Tananarive in September 1961, the following agreements were drawn up, and remain in force between the members of OCAM:

Convention générale relative à la représentation diplomatique: foresees common diplomatic missions and meetings of heads of missions accredited to France and the United Nations to harmonise their policies.

Convention générale de coopération en matière de justice: the courts of each country are open to nationals of any other member country without discrimination. Aims to simplify and unify existing national judicial systems.

Convention générale relative à la situation des personnes et aux conditions d'établissement: provides for free movement of persons between member states.

ORGANISATION POUR LA MISE EN VALEUR DU FLEUVE SÉNÉGAL—OMVS

(Organization for the Development of the Senegal River)

Dakar, Senegal

Founded in March 1972 to replace the Organisation des États Riverains du Sénégal. Its scope of activities is similar to that of the former Inter-States Committee for the Senegal River Basin, its prime object being the development of the Senegal River Basin.

MEMBERS

Mali

Mauritania

Senegal

ORGANIZATION

CONFERENCE OF HEADS OF STATE

The Conference of Heads of State meets whenever necessary to decide policy. The Chair is taken in alphabetical rotation for a two year term by each state.

Chairman: MOKTAR OULD DADDAH (Mauritania).

COUNCIL OF MINISTERS

The Council of Ministers is composed of one Minister from each member state and meets at least once a year, with extra-ordinary sessions if necessary. The Council formulates general policy, and approves development programmes concerning member states.

President: MAMADY KEITA (Mali).

GENERAL SECRETARIAT

The General Secretariat is responsible to the Council of Ministers, and carries out its decisions. The Secretary-General is in charge of the administrative functions of the organization.

Secretary-General: MOHAMED OULD AMAR (Mauritania).

AIMS AND ACTIVITIES

The OMVS aims to implement the agreement of 11 March 1972 on the Statute of the Senegal River, to promote and co-ordinate the studies on and works for the development of the resources of the Senegal River Basin on the national territories of its member states, and to carry out all technical and economic missions entrusted to it by member states.

Study projects on the development of the basin have been concluded. The data acquired has permitted OMVS to formulate a policy for the development of the basin beginning with the regulation of the flow of the river at Bakel to 300 cubic metres a second. The following works are to be constructed:

- (i) hydro-electric barrage dam at Manantali (Mali),
- (ii) irrigation dam on the delta at Diama (Mauritania, Senegal),
- (iii) river/maritime port at St.-Louis (Senegal),
- (iv) river port at Kayes (Mali),
- (v) arrangement of harbour installations and ground-sills in the Senegal river.

Additionally OMVS is undertaking projects in its member countries, with assistance from U.S. AID, on the development of poultry farming and cereal stabilization.

ORGANISATION FOR ECONOMIC CO-OPERATION AND DEVELOPMENT—OECD*

2 rue André-Pascal, 75775 Paris, Cedex 16, France

Founded September 1961 to achieve high economic growth and employment among member countries, to co-ordinate and improve development aid and to help expand world trade.

COUNCIL

The governing body of the OECD is the Council on which each member country is represented. The Council meets regularly at official level (heads of national delegations) and from time to time (usually once a year) at ministerial level. The Council is responsible for all questions of general policy and may establish subsidiary bodies as required to achieve the aims of the Organisation.

The Chairman of the Council at the ministerial level is elected each year. The Chairman of the Council at the official level is the Secretary-General of the Organisation.

Chairman of Ministerial Council (1974): (vacant).

Vice-Chairmen (1974): (vacant).

Chairman of Permanent Council: The Secretary-General.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE

(12 members)

Each year the Council designates 13 of its members to form the Executive Committee which prepares the work of the Council. It is also called upon to carry out specific tasks where necessary. Apart from its regular meetings, the Committee meets occasionally in special sessions attended by high government officials.

Chairman: ROGER OCKRENT (Belgium).

Vice-Chairmen: FRANÇOIS VALÉRY (France), BUNROKU YOSHINO (Japan).

Members (1974): A representative of Australia, Canada, Federal Republic of Germany, Italy, Norway, Portugal, Switzerland, United Kingdom and the United States.

AUXILIARY BODIES

A total of some 50 Committees and Working Parties have been created. The main Committees are the following:

Economic Policy Committee
Economic and Development Review Committee
Committee for Monetary and Foreign Exchange Matters
Environment Committee
Development Assistance Committee
Technical Co-operation Committee
Trade Committee
Payments Committee
Committee for Invisible Transactions
Insurance Committee
Committee on Fiscal Affairs
Committee of Experts on Restrictive Business Practices

Manpower and Social Affairs Committee Steering Committee of the Programme of Co-operation in the Field of Road Research
Steering Committee of the Programme on Educational Building
Governing Board of the Centre for Educational Research and Innovation
Committee on Financial Markets

Working Parties are established to treat specific problems or to conduct specific studies, either on a permanent basis or for a limited period. Working Party No. 3 of the Economic Policy Committee deals in particular with the Promotion of better International Payments Equilibrium.

SPECIALIZED AGENCIES

The Nuclear Energy Agency (NEA) (see below): Originally established in 1957 as the European Nuclear Energy Agency, it took its present form in 1972 when Japan joined the 19 European member countries of OECD. Its objective is to encourage the orderly development of the uses of nuclear energy for peaceful purposes.
Director-General: EINAR SÆBLAND (Norway).

The Development Centre was set up in 1962. Its purpose is to bring together the knowledge and experience available in member countries of both economic development and the formulation and execution of general policies of economic aid; to adopt such knowledge and experience to the actual needs of countries in the process of development and to put the results at the disposal of these countries by appropriate means.
President: P.-M. HENRY (France).

CONVENTION ON OECD

ARTICLE 1

The aims of the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development shall be to promote policies designed:

To achieve the highest sustainable economic growth and employment and a rising standard of living in member countries, while maintaining financial stability, and thus to contribute to the development of the world economy.

To contribute to sound economic expansion in member as well as non-member countries in the process of economic development.

To contribute to the expansion of world trade on a multilateral, non-discriminatory basis in accordance with international obligations.

ARTICLE 2

In the pursuit of these aims, the members agree that they will:

Promote the efficient use of their economic resources.

Promote the development of their scientific and technological resources, encourage research and promote vocational training.

Pursue policies to achieve economic growth and financial stability.

Pursue their efforts to reduce or abolish obstacles to the exchange of goods and services and current payments and maintain and extend the liberalisation of capital movements.

Contribute to the economic development of member and non-member countries.

ARTICLE 3

Members agree that they will:

Furnish each other with information.

Consult together, carry out studies and participate in agreed projects.

Co-operate closely and where appropriate take co-ordinated action.

ARTICLE 4

The Contracting Parties to this Convention shall be members of the Organisation.

ARTICLE 5

The Organisation may:

Take decisions binding on all the members.

Make recommendations.

Enter into agreements with members, non-members and international organisations.

ARTICLE 6

Decisions shall be taken and recommendations shall be made by mutual agreement.

Each member shall have one vote. If a member abstains from voting such abstention shall not invalidate the decision, which shall be applicable to the other members but not to the abstaining member.

No decision shall be binding on any member until it has complied with the requirements of its own constitutional procedures. The other members may agree that such a decision shall apply provisionally to them.

ARTICLE 7

A Council composed of all the members shall be the body from which all acts of the Organisation derive.

ARTICLE 8

The Council shall designate each year a Chairman, who shall preside at its ministerial sessions, and two Vice-Chairmen.

ARTICLE 9

The Council may establish an Executive Committee and such subsidiary bodies as may be required.

ARTICLE 10

A Secretary-General responsible to the Council shall be appointed by the Council for a term of five years. He shall be assisted by one or more Deputy Secretaries-General or Assistant Secretaries-General appointed by the Council.

The Secretary-General shall serve as Chairman of the Council meeting at sessions of Permanent Representatives.

ARTICLE 11

The Secretary-General shall appoint such staff as the Organisation may require. Staff regulations shall be subject to approval by the Council.

The Secretary-General and staff shall neither seek nor receive instructions from any of the members or from any government or authority external to the Organisation.

ARTICLE 12

The Organisation may:

Address communications to non-member states or organisations.

Establish relations with non-member states or organisations.

Invite non-member governments or organisations to participate in activities of the Organisation.

ARTICLE 13

Representation in the Organisation of the European Communities shall be as defined in Supplementary Protocol No. 1 to this Convention.

ARTICLE 14

This Convention shall be ratified or accepted by the Signatories in accordance with their respective constitutional requirements.

Instruments of ratification or acceptance shall be deposited with the Government of the French Republic.

Manner of coming into force of the Convention:

ARTICLE 15

When this Convention comes into force the reconstitution of the Organisation for European Economic Co-operation shall take effect.

ARTICLE 16

The Council may decide to invite any government to accede to this Convention.

ARTICLE 17

Any Contracting Party may terminate the application of this Convention to itself by giving twelve months' notice to that effect.

ARTICLE 18

The headquarters of the Organisation shall be in Paris, unless the Council agrees otherwise.

ARTICLE 19

The legal capacity of the Organisation shall be as provided in Supplementary Protocol No. 2 to this Convention.

ARTICLE 20

Each year the Secretary-General shall present to the Council for approval an annual budget.

General expenses of the Organisation, as agreed by the Council, shall be apportioned in accordance with a scale to be decided upon by the Council.

ARTICLE 21

Upon the receipt of any instrument of ratification, acceptance or accession, or of any notice of termination, the depositary government shall give notice thereof to all the Contracting Parties and to the Secretary-General of the Organisation.

SUPPLEMENTARY PROTOCOL No. 1

The Commissions of the European Economic Community and of the European Atomic Energy Commission as well as the High Authority of the European Coal and Steel Community shall take part in the work of the Organisation.

OECD

SUPPLEMENTARY PROTOCOL No. 2

The Organisation shall have legal capacity and the Organisation, its officials, and representatives to it of the members shall be entitled to specified privileges, exemptions, and immunities.

PROTOCOL ON THE REVISION OF THE CONVENTION FOR EUROPEAN ECONOMIC CO-OPERATION, 1948

ARTICLE 1

The Convention shall be revised and as a consequence thereof it shall be replaced by the Convention on the Organisation for Economic Co-operation.

ARTICLE 2

This Protocol shall come into force when the Convention on the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development comes into force.

The Convention shall cease to have effect as regards any Signatory of this Protocol when the Convention on the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development comes into force.

OECD NUCLEAR ENERGY AGENCY—NEA

38 Boulevard Suchet, Paris 16e, France

Tel.: 870-46-10

In 1957 the Organisation for European Economic Co-operation (OEEC) adopted a Decision to set up a Nuclear Energy Agency, which came into existence in February 1958 under the name of the European Nuclear Energy Agency. In September 1961, the Agency was taken over by the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD) and in April 1972, when Japan became the first non-European full member, the Agency was renamed the OECD Nuclear Energy Agency. A second non-European country, Australia, became a full member in October 1973. The functions of the Agency are confined to the peaceful uses of nuclear energy.

Director-General: EINAR SÆLAND.Deputy Director-General: IAN G. K. WILLIAMS.

NEA Steering Committee: Chair. Dr. REINHART LOOSCH (Federal Republic of Germany); Vice-Chair. Dr. J.-M. PICTET (Switzerland), M. KURAMOTO (Japan).

The OECD Nuclear Agency aims to foster the development of the production and uses of nuclear energy for peaceful purposes. Its functions include promotion of scientific and technical co-operation between participating countries, co-ordination of nuclear research programmes (especially through international scientific committees); development of uniform legislation on health and safety, liability and insurance; assessments of nuclear fuel resources and the contribution of nuclear power towards meeting future energy requirements. A security control system is in operation to prevent the use of joint undertakings for military purposes.

ACTIVITIES

EUROCHEMIC (European Company for Chemical Processing of Irradiated Fuels). EUROCHEMIC is a $38 million international shareholding company constituted in 1959 to build and operate an experimental reprocessing plant for used uranium fuels from reactors in participating countries. Present shareholders are governments, public authorities and industrial organisations in Austria, Belgium, Denmark, France, the German Federal Republic, Italy, the Netherlands, Norway, Portugal, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland and Turkey. The company's plant at Mol, Belgium, begun in 1960, entered into service in July 1966 since when it has reprocessed well over 100 tons of irradiated fuels from more than 20 reactors. In October 1969 the formation of Société de Fluoration de l'Uranium (S.F.U.) was announced, to build and operate at Mol an installation for converting uranyl nitrate from the main reprocessing plant into uranium tetrafluoride, a stage in the production of hexafluoride for feeding to enrichment plants. More recently growing capacity for commercial fuel reprocessing in Europe has led to proposals to adapt the EUROCHEMIC facilities for research into methods for the treatment and storage of highly radioactive reprocessing wastes.

HALDEN Project. The Experimental 20 MWt. Boiling Heavy Water Reactor at Halden, Norway, first became an OECD joint undertaking under an Agreement signed in 1958 between the Norwegian Institutt for Atomenergi (owner of the reactor), Austria, the Danish Atomic Energy Commission, EURATOM, AB Atomenergi of Sweden, Switzerland, and the U.K. Atomic Energy Authority. The original three-year duration of this Project was twice extended by eighteen months. Under a separate Agreement with the Norwegian Institutt, the Finnish Atomic Energy Commission also took part in the Project.

In 1964 a new Agreement was reached between a number of the original participants (the Norwegian Institutt, the Danish and Finnish Commissions, Reactor Centrum Nederland, AB Atomenergi, Switzerland and the U.K. Atomic Energy Authority) for a further three-year joint programme to include tests of prototype fuel elements and certain other specialised research and development work. This new programme was subsequently joined by the U.S. Atomic Energy Commission, the Italian National Nuclear Energy Committee, and a German industrial group. It has since been prolonged three times and, under present arrangements, will continue until at least 1975. By the end of this period total expenditure by the Project since its inception is expected to be some 22 million.

DRAGON Project. The Dragon (U.K.) Experimental High-Temperature Reactor project was set up under a 1959 Agreement signed by the U.K. Atomic Energy Authority, Austria, the Danish A.E.C., EURATOM, the Norwegian Institutt for Atomenergi, AB Atomenergi of Sweden and Switzerland. Supporting research is being done in many European countries. In November 1962, the original five-year period of the Project was extended to eight years, and the original budget of £13.6 million was increased to £25 million. Construction of the Dragon Reactor was completed early in 1964, first criticality was achieved in August, and its full design power of 20 MWt. in April 1966. At the end of 1966 the Project was further extended to March 31st, 1970, and two subsequent extensions have prolonged the project to March 31st, 1976, bringing the overall budget to some £47 million over the 17 years. Modified objectives were adopted in 1969 to enable maximum assistance to be given to industry in participating countries for the commercial exploitation of the Dragon system.

Food Irradiation. On October 14th, 1970, 17 OECD and 2 non-OECD countries signed an agreement setting up an International Project in the Field of Food Irradiation. The Project, which is jointly sponsored by NEA, the International Atomic Energy Agency, and the Food and Agriculture Organization (FAO) of the United Nations, came into being on January 1st, 1971: its main objectives are wholesomeness testing of selected food products preserved by irradiation processes, together with investigations into the methodology of wholesomeness testing. Most of this work is being carried out under contract in specialist laboratories and institutions in the Project's participant countries. The overall programme is co-ordinated through a small headquarters organization accommodated in the German Federal Research Institute for Food Preservation at Karlsruhe. Since its inception, 3 further countries have joined the Project, bringing the number of participants to 22 (Austria, Belgium, Brazil, Canada, Denmark, France, Finland, Germany, Hungary, Israel, Italy, Japan, Netherlands, Norway, Portugal, South Africa, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, Turkey, United Kingdom and the United States).

Common Services. In June 1964, agreements were concluded with EURATOM and the French Commissariat à l'Energie Atomique for the establishment of a NEA Computer Programme Library at the EURATOM Joint Research Establishment at Ispra (Italy), and a NEA Neutron Data Compilation Centre at the Saclay Centre d'Etudes Nucléaires (France). Both these Common Services operate in close co-operation with equivalent services in the U.S.A. and, through the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA), with services in the rest of the world.

Scientific Committees. The European-American Nuclear Data Committee (EANDC) was set up in 1959 to review and co-ordinate research programmes for data measurements. An analogous committee for reactor physics research, the European-American Committee on Reactor Physics (EACRP) was established in 1962. The work of both Committees includes detailed examinations of experimental work under way and proposed in their respective fields, in order to assess relative priorities and suggest the most appropriate division of such work between laboratories equipped to carry it out. In 1965 an International Committee on Reactor Safety Technology (CREST) was created to survey current work on reactor safety and to promote international co-operation for its improvement. The scope of this committee was extended in November 1973 to include nuclear installations other than reactors, and the committee was renamed the Committee on the Safety of Nuclear Installations.

Special Studies. A study of possible uses in Europe for radioisotopic power generators, and of European industrial potential for their production, was begun in 1965. In June 1967 Austria, Denmark, France, Federal Republic of Germany, Portugal, Spain, Sweden and Switzerland—subsequently joined by Canada—launched a collaborative programme for the development of "radioisotopic batteries". The world's first human implantation of an isotope-powered heart pace-maker, in Paris in April 1970, was part of this programme.

A second study, begun at the end of 1964, concerns the long-term rôle of nuclear power in meeting future energy demands. This involves examining the characteristics of the different power reactor systems which are envisaged and estimating corresponding requirements for fuel production, enrichment, fabrication and reprocessing capacities. A number of specialized reports have been published.

Following proposals by the Agency's Working Group on Gas-cooled Fast Reactors, in October 1971 seven countries (Austria, Belgium, Germany, Netherlands, Sweden, Switzerland and U.K., subsequently joined by France) decided to collaborate—through a special Co-ordinating Group set up for the purpose—in a programme of development work in this field, to be carried out in a number of their national research and industrial centres. The Gas Breeder Reactor Association (GBRA), a Brussels-based association established in 1969 by a number of interested industrial groups, participates in the work of the NEA Co-ordinating Group.

Radiation Protection. NEA's Committee on Radiation Protection and Public Health was established in 1973 to take over the work of the former Health and Safety Committee. The committee, in close liaison with IAEA, has prepared international protection norms against ionizing radiations. These norms are revised from time to time to take account of advances in scientific knowledge. Applications of the norms to specific circumstances, for example for regulations governing the use of radioisotopes in certain products on public sale (e.g. radio-luminous paints), or the manufacture and use of radioisotopic generators, are the subjects of separate recommendations. Problems of radioactive waste disposal in the sea are being examined, and internationally planned and controlled disposal operations were carried out deep in the Atlantic Ocean in 1967, 1969, 1971, 1972 and 1973.

Third Party Liability. The 1960 OECD (Paris) Convention on Third Party Liability in the Field of Nuclear Energy, signed by most of NEA Member countries, came into force in April 1968. The Convention defined for the first time the underlying principles of all international agreements on nuclear liability, and also of most national legislation in this field. It is now in force in eight countries: Belgium, Finland, France, Greece, Spain, Sweden, Turkey and the United Kingdom; preparations are under way in a number of other countries for ratification or accession.

In January 1963 a Supplementary Convention to the Paris Convention, extending the maximum limit of compensation but maintaining the principles of the Paris Convention was signed in Brussels. This Convention, however, is not yet in force.

Security Control. A Convention on Security Control, based on a system of inspection and control of the movement and use of fissile materials to ensure that these are not diverted to any military purpose, has been in force since 1959. A Control Bureau, established under the Convention, has adopted detailed rules for the joint undertakings HALDEN, DRAGON and EUROCHEMIC, and inspections take place. Rules applicable to facilities using nuclear materials recovered or obtained in NEA joint undertakings have also been adopted.

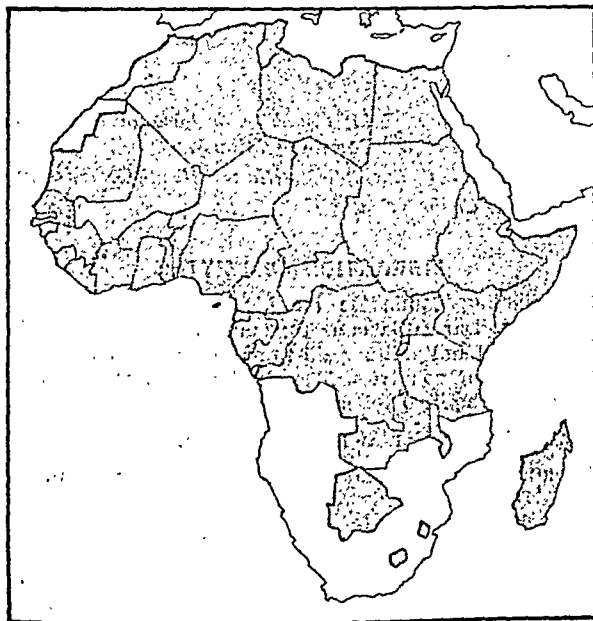

Budget. The NEA budget forms part of the OECD budget, and for 1974 was approximately $1.7 million for the Central Secretariat, with a further $1.0 million for the Common Services at Saclay and Ispra which are financed under the Secretariat budget. The EUROCHEMIC, HALDEN and DRAGON Projects, and the Karlsruhe Food Irradiation Project, are financed separately, and now represent a total investment of well over $150 million.

Publications: Annual activity reports of NEA and joint projects, specialized series publications (e.g., Nuclear Law Bulletin, Radioisotopic Generator Newsletter, Food Irradiation Information Bulletin), reports on nuclear fuel resources, production and utilization, and Proceedings of Agency-sponsored conferences and symposia.

HISTORICAL INTRODUCTION

There were various attempts at establishing an inter-African organization before the OAU Charter was drawn up. In November 1958 Ghana and Guinea (later joined by Mali) drafted a Charter which was to form the basis of a Union of African States. In January 1961 a conference was held at Casablanca, attended by the heads of state of Ghana, Guinea, Mali, Morocco, and representatives of Libya and of the provisional government of the Algerian Republic (GPRA). Tunisia, Nigeria, Liberia and Togo declined the invitation to attend. An African Charter was adopted and it was decided to set up an African Military Command and an African Common Market.

Between October 1960 and March 1961 three conferences were held by French-speaking African countries, at Abidjan, Brazzaville and Yaoundé. None of the twelve countries which attended these meetings had been present at the Casablanca Conference. These conferences led eventually to the signing in September 1961, at Tananarive, of a charter establishing the Union africaine et malgache, which was succeeded in 1965 by the Organisation commune africaine et malgache.

In May 1961 a conference was held at Monrovia, attended by the heads of state or representatives of nineteen countries: Cameroon, Central African Republic, Chad, Congo Republic (ex-French) Dahomey, Ethiopia, Gabon, Ivory Coast, Liberia, Madagascar, Mauritania, Niger, Nigeria, Senegal, Sierra Leone, Somalia, Togo, Tunisia and Upper Volta. They met again (with the exception of Tunisia and with the addition of the ex-Belgian Congo Republic) in January 1962 at Lagos, and set up a permanent secretariat and a standing committee of Finance Ministers, and accepted a draft charter for an Organization of Inter-African and Malagasy States.

It was the Conference of Addis Ababa, held in 1963, which finally brought together African states despite the regional, political and linguistic differences which divided them. The Foreign Ministers of thirty African states attended the Preparatory Meeting held in May: Algeria, Burundi, Cameroon, Central African Republic, Congo (Brazzaville), Congo (Léopoldville), Dahomey, Ethiopia, Gabon, Ghana, Guinea, Ivory Coast, Liberia, Libya, Madagascar, Mali, Mauritania, Morocco, Niger, Nigeria, Rwanda, Senegal, Sierra Leone, Somalia, Sudan, Tanganyika, Tunisia, Uganda, United Arab Republic, Upper Volta.

The topics discussed by the meeting were: (1) creation of the Organization of African States; (2) co-operation among African states in the following fields: economic and social; education, culture and science; collective defence; (3) decolonization; (4) apartheid and racial discrimination;

ORGANIZATION OF AFRICAN UNITY

(5) effects of economic groupings on the economic development of Africa; (6) disarmament; (7) creation of a Permanent Conciliation Commission; (8) Africa and the United Nations.

The Heads of State Conference which opened on May 23rd drew up the Charter of the Organization of African Unity, which was then signed by the heads of thirty-one states on May 26th, 1963. The Charter was essentially functional and reflected a compromise between the concept of a loose association of states favoured by the Monrovia Group and the federal idea supported by the Casablanca Group, and in particular by Ghana.

ORGANIZATION

ASSEMBLY OF HEADS OF STATE

The Assembly of Heads of State and Government meets annually to co-ordinate policies of African States. Resolutions are passed by a two-thirds majority, procedural matters by a simple majority. Tenth meeting May 1973, Addis Ababa. Eleventh meeting June 1974, Mogadishu, Somalia.

Special Consultative Committee on Security.

FUNCTIONS

1. Economic and Social Matters. Regional projects have been established relating to economic development and its social aspects, international trade, basic products, transportation and travel, social welfare, co-operatives, social insurance, immigration and colonization, labour, housing and urban development, and technical co-operation. The Inter-American Economic and Social Council has established close working relationships at all levels. In September 1960 all members, except Cuba, signed the Charter of Punta del Este, establishing the Alliance for Progress. (For details see separate section.)

2. Juridical Matters. The Inter-American Juridical Committee, one of the principal organs of the Organization, serves as an advisory body on juridical matters; promotes the progressive development and codification of international law; studies juridical problems related to the integration of the developing countries of the hemisphere, and in so far as may appear desirable the possibility of attaining uniformity in legislation.

3. Cultural Matters. The Council and Executive Secretariat for Education, Science and Culture carry out a broad cultural programme. Activities cover education, philosophy and letters, music, art, film, science, and libraries. Co-operation is maintained with UNESCO projects.

ORGANIZATION OF AMERICAN STATES

4. Agriculture. An OAS specialized agency, the Inter-American Institute of Agricultural Sciences (IAIAS), is helping to improve plant strains, crop yields, and breeds of cattle, and to conserve the natural resources of forest, water, soil and wild life. It also conducts research and initiates training schemes for post-graduates.

5. Public Health. The OAS Pan American Health Organization also acts as the regional organization of the UN World Health Organization. It plans joint action against communicable diseases, strengthens the health services, and expands the education and training facilities for health workers. Canada is a member.

6. Statistics. The four main objectives of the Inter-American Statistical Institute (IASI) are: to stimulate better methods in the collection, tabulation, analysis and publication of statistics; to provide a medium for professional collaboration among statisticians; to co-operate with national and international organizations in advancing the science and administration of statistics. Plans have been devised for co-ordinating national censuses and for conducting agricultural censuses. Canada is a member of the Institute.

7. Geography and History. The Pan American Institute of Geography and History (PAIGH) encourages and co-ordinates these studies. It works through commissions on cartography, geography and history, and committees on oceanography, vulcanology, and other subjects.

8. Status of Women. The Inter-American Commission of Women (IACW), has campaigned since 1928 to raise the political, economic, social and cultural status of women in the Americas.

9. Child Welfare. Founded in Montevideo in 1927, the Inter-American Children's Institute (IACI) serves as a centre of social action, documentation, study, advice, and information on childhood and the family.

10. Indian Affairs. The Inter-American Indian Institute (IAII) deals with problems affecting Indians in the Americas. Develops research on Indian groups. Provides technical assistance in establishing programmes of Indian Community development. Trains personnel to work in this area.

11. Defence. The Inter-American Defense Board, Washington, D.C., works towards the co-ordination of common defence measures and the establishment of the broadest possible basis for inter-American military co-operation. The Inter-American Defense College, Washington, D.C., a teaching institution for high-ranking officers of the Latin American armed forces, was established in 1962.

12. Nuclear Energy. The Inter-American Nuclear Energy Commission, set up in 1959, facilitates co-operation among the member States in matters relating to the peaceful applications of nuclear energy. In 1960 an agreement for co-operation was signed with the International Atomic Energy Agency.

13. Human Rights. The Inter-American Commission on Human Rights studies problems in this field.

14. Peace. Two treaties cover the area of peaceful settlement of disputes, The Inter-American Treaty of Reciprocal Assistance (Rio Treaty), and the American Treaty on Pacific Settlement (Pact of Bogotá). The Permanent Council is assisted in the maintenance of friendly relations by the Inter-American Committee on Peaceful Settlement.

15. Alliance for Progress. For details see separate chapter.

16. Special Consultative Committee on Security. Established in March 1962 to make recommendations in the field of security. Advises member states or the Permanent Council upon request.

ORGANIZATION OF AMERICAN STATES

INTER-AMERICAN ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL—IA-ECOSOC

General Secretariat, Washington, D.C. 20006, U.S.A.

Created in 1945 to supersede the Inter-American Financial and Economic Advisory Committee. Incorporated in the Charter of OAS in 1948.

MEMBERS

All members of OAS.

ORGANIZATION

MEETINGS AT MINISTERIAL LEVEL

Held annually and attended by the permanent titular representatives on the Council, usually the Minister of Finance or Economy. Under the Charter of Punta del Este IA-ECOSOC reviews the economic and social progress of the members under the Alliance for Progress.

MEETINGS AT EXPERT LEVEL

Held annually immediately prior to the Ministerial Level Meetings and attended by expert representatives, usually the Alternate Representatives of Member States. Reviews the development of the Alliance for Progress Program and makes recommendations to the Ministerial Level Meetings.

SECRETARIAT

The General Secretariat of OAS acts as the Secretariat of IA-ECOSOC. The Executive Secretary is appointed by the Secretary-General of OAS.

Executive Secretary: WALTER J. SEDWITZ.

ACTIVITIES

1 Promotes economic and social well-being by planning the best utilization of natural resources, the development of agriculture and industry, and the raising of the standards of living of the peoples.

2 Reviews annually at the Ministerial Level the Alliance for Progress, based on the prior view of the Inter-American Committee for the Alliance of Progress (CIAP) (see Chapter, Alliance for Progress), which is the permanent executive committee of IA-ECOSOC.

3 Submits recommendations to the General Assembly.

4 Approves the Special Development Assistance Fund budget, which includes the Program of Technical Co-operation of the OAS.

5 Approves the budget of the General Secretariat in economic and social fields, subject to final approval by the General Assembly.

6 Provides technical assistance.

7 Acts as co-ordinating agency of Inter-American activities in the economic and social fields.

8 Undertakes studies on its own initiative or at the request of members.

9 Obtains information and prepares reports.

10 Suggests specialized conferences.

INTER-AMERICAN JURIDICAL COMMITTEE

Rio de Janeiro, Brazil

Founded 1948 as the Inter-American Council of Jurists an organ of the Council of the Organization of American States.

MEMBERS

All members of OAS.

ORGANIZATION

INTER-AMERICAN JURIDICAL COMMITTEE

Replaces the Inter-American Council of Jurists under the amendments to the Charter ratified in 1970. Composed of eleven jurists, nationals of different member states, elected for a period of four years with the possibility of re-election once. Equitable geographical distribution is sought as far as possible, and a proportion of members are replaced each year. Meetings are held at least annually for a period of up to three months. Special meetings can also be called.

SECRETARIAT

The General Secretariat provides full services for the Committee.

FUNCTIONS

To serve as an advisory body to the Organization on juridical matters; to promote the progressive development and codification of international law, and to study juridical problems related to the integration of the developing countries in the hemisphere, and in so far as may appear desirable the possibility of attaining uniformity in legislation.

Chairman: DR. ADOLFO MOLINA ORANTES.

BUDGET

The Budget of the Inter-American Juridical Committee is part of the General Secretariat Budget.

ORGANIZATION OF AMERICAN STATES

INTER-AMERICAN NUCLEAR ENERGY COMMISSION— IANEC

Organization of American States, Washington, D.C. 20006, U.S.A.

ANEC was established in 1959 as a Technical Commission of the Organization of American States. It makes recommendations to member governments and to OAS.

MEMBERS

Argentina	Ecuador	Panama
Barbados	El Salvador	Paraguay
Bolivia	Guatemala	Peru
Brazil	Haiti	Trinidad and Tobago
Chile	Honduras	U.S.A.
Colombia	Jamaica	Uruguay
Costa Rica	Mexico	Venezuela
Dominican Republic	Nicaragua

ORGANIZATION

COMMISSION

The Commission is made up of one delegate from each of the member states, and the Secretary-General of OAS (who may speak but not vote). Regular meetings are held every two years.

The Chairman and Vice-Chairman are elected by and from the members and hold office until the next regular meeting.

COMMITTEES

The Commission may set up such working committees as it considers necessary. The committees elect their own Chairman and Rapporteur from among their members.

SECRETARIAT

Executive-Secretary: Dr. JESSE D. PERKINSON.

The Secretary-General of OAS appoints all IANEC Secretariat staff, who form a part of OAS.

ACTIVITIES

IANEC was set up to help the American Republics to develop and co-ordinate research and training in nuclear energy. In addition to providing direct aid to Latin American institutions for work in development and research, IANEC also sends professors and researchers, finances the development of courses and defrays the expenses of Fellows in the training centres. It also distributes information and recommends public health measures.

Since 1959 the Commission has undertaken a survey of facilities available in Latin American universities and has established an Advisory Committee to make recommendations on scientific and engineering training. In 1963 studies were undertaken on nuclear power in Latin America and on Civil Liability in the field of nuclear energy.

In December 1960 an agreement for co-operation was signed between IANEC and the International Atomic Energy Agency in Vienna and in 1963 a memorandum was exchanged between the secretariats of IANEC and EURATOM establishing co-operation. Several meetings, workshops and symposia have been co-sponsored by IANEC and IAEA.

Since 1968 IANEC has organized periodic Latin American Conferences on radiochemistry, increasing agricultural production through the use of radio-isotopes, hydrology and food irradiation. It has held a number of meetings of study groups on other topics related to nuclear energy.

Since 1969 IANEC has been in charge of the Multi-national Nuclear Energy Project of the OAS Regional Program for Scientific and Technological Development.

ORGANIZATION OF AMERICAN STATES

PAN AMERICAN HIGHWAY CONGRESSES

Organization of American States, Washington, D.C. 20006, U.S.A.

Inaugurated 1925 to promote the construction of a highway to link the U.S.A. with South and Central America.

MEMBERS

The 23 members of the Organization of American States

ORGANIZATION

PAN AMERICAN HIGHWAY CONGRESS

Held every four years to promote road building and inform member governments, the Organization of American States and the Inter-American Economic and Social Council on matters relating to Highway planning and construction and maintenance. Made up of representatives of member states (who may speak and vote), the Permanent Executive Committee, Chairmen of the Technical Committees and the Secretary-General of OAS (who have no vote), and observers and special observers (who may speak but not vote).

The Chairman is elected by the delegates.
Next meeting: 1975, in San José, Costa Rica.

PERMANENT EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE

Attached to the Inter-American Economic and Social Council. Composed of specialists representing eleven of the member countries, nine elected by Congress. Functions are to implement the resolutions of Congress. It meets at least once a year.

TECHNICAL COMMITTEES OF EXPERTS

Set up by Congress, as necessary. There are three permanent Committees: Planning, Highway Studies and Construction and Maintenance, Highway Operations, and seven subcommittees as follows:

Darien Subcommittee: Created in 1954 to promote interest in the construction of a road to connect the existing highway systems of North and South America through the Darien region of Panama and adjacent area of Columbia. This Committee administers the work of the survey teams now working on the project.

Subcommittee on the Pan American Transversal Highway in South America: Created in 1963 to promote the construction of a highway to connect Paranaguá, Brazil, with Asunción, La Paz and Lima.

Subcommittee on the Bolivarian Forest Edge Highway

(Carretera Bolivariana Marginal de la Selva): Created in 1965 to encourage the construction of a continuous highway along the lower eastern edge of the Andes in Venezuela, Colombia, Ecuador, Peru, Bolivia and Paraguay. This will extend and interconnect penetration roads leading from the Andean highlands to points in Brazil and Argentina.

Co-ordinating and Study Group on the Caribbean Circuit:

Established to determine the possibility of constructing a highway which, by crossing the Atrato River, would connect a point on the Panama-Colombian border with points along the coast to Venezuela as part of the Caribbean Circuit.

Lima-Brasília Highway, via Pucallpa, Peru:

Bolivia-Brazil-Peru Subcommittee established for a highway to link Lima with the Brazilian capital, now including a spur to La Paz and Bolivia.

Pan-Amazonic Subcommittee:

Subcommittee created 1965 for the construction of a highway to establish a connection between the Pacific Ocean and the Amazon basin, so as to take advantage of river transportation throughout the length of the Amazon River and its principal tributaries. First meeting of Subcommittee held in Bogotá in March 1967.

International Bridge over the Uruguay River:

This bridge will link Puerto Unzué, Argentina, to Fray Bentos, Uruguay, and is considered to be a high priority project in the highway system of both countries.

PERMANENT SECRETARIAT

The services are provided by the General Secretariat of the OAS, Washington D.C.

THE HIGHWAY

The total mileage of the Pan American Highway System, including alternative routes, is 49,315 miles of which 27,513 are paved.

Mexico. The Highway has four sections converging on Mexico City. The eastern road enters at Laredo, Texas, with branches to Brownsville and McAllen, Texas; the Central Highway runs from El Paso, Texas; the Pacific Highway is along the west coast from Nogales, Arizona; and the Constitution Highway begins at Piedras Negras.

Guatemala. The Highway through Guatemala has been completed and paved throughout. An additional road from the Talisman Bridge to the border with El Salvador has been added.

El Salvador. Paved throughout. An alternative route from La Hachadura on the Guatemalan border to the junction with the Pan American Highway has been added.

Honduras. Paved. A 57-mile branch road leads to Tegucigalpa, the capital.

ORGANIZATION OF AMERICAN STATES

Nicaragua. Paved throughout. The Highway joins the Atlantic Highway at San Benito.

Costa Rica. On the southern section the bridges were completed in 1963.

Panama. Thirty-eight miles east of Panama City the road ends. Construction of the 574-mile Darien Gap between Chepo, Panama, and the Highway in Colombia, now under construction, will complete the Highway.

Venezuela. The Highway runs from La Guaira, via Caracas to the Colombian frontier at Cúcuta.

Colombia. Continuation of Venezuelan road south east to Ipiates on the Ecuadorian frontier. An all-weather road links Barranquilla on the north coast to the Highway at Palmira and a branch runs to Buenaventura.

Ecuador. The Ecuadorean section of the Highway is an all-weather road. An alternative route enters Peru at Aguas Verdes.

Peru. Highway is planned to enter at La Tina. In the south the Highway forks, the Franklin D. Roosevelt Highway continuing southward into Chile and the main route going east and south into Bolivia.

Chile. Highway runs due south to Santiago. At Los Andes a branch turns east to Argentina. The Uspallata Pass section is closed for six months every year owing to heavy winter snows, when cars may be shipped by rail through the Transandine Railroad Tunnel.

Bolivia. Two routes lead from the Peruvian frontier to La Paz, whence the Highway continues southward to the Argentinian frontier at Villazón.

Argentina. Four routes converge on Buenos Aires. Eastward from Los Andes in Chile; southeast from Bolivia; south along the west bank of the Paraguay and Paraná rivers from Asunción in Paraguay; and south-west from Uruguaiana in Brazil and joining the Asunción road at Santa Fé.

Paraguay. The Highway runs from the Argentinian border to Asunción and eastward to Brazil at Foz do Iguaçu. A branch turns south to Encarnación on the Argentinian border.

Uruguay. From Montevideo the route in use runs north to enter Brazil at Aceguá, with alternative branches entering at Rio Branco and Chuy.

Brazil. The official road from Uruguay travels from Aceguá to Brasília. Alternative routes, from Jaguarão, Chuí and Uruguaiana, converge on Brasília. There is a connection with Paraguay at Foz do Iguaçu.

DOUGLAS HENDERSON (U.S.A.).

Created in November 1963, at the Second Annual Meeting of IA-ECOSOC in São Paulo, Brazil. Consists of a Chairman elected for a four-year term, ten members and ten alternate members elected for a two-year term. The representatives of the countries are appointed by the Inter-American Economic and Social Council for a two-year period, at the proposition of a country or a group of countries, as shown above.

CIAP is the permanent Executive Committee of IA-ECOSOC and the multilateral representative body of the Alliance for Progress. It co-ordinates Alliance action as established by the Charter of Punta del Este and carries out the mandates it receives from IA-ECOSOC.

Its principal objectives and functions are to evaluate the internal development efforts of each member country in order to estimate the needs and availabilities of external financing; to act on behalf of recipient countries in obtaining financing, and to promote the co-ordination of development assistance among lending agencies.

CIAP's activities are carried out through its own plenary meetings, usually held four times a year, and the meetings of 23 subcommittees in charge of the annual country reviews. A delegation from the respective country participates in the review process, together with representatives of the international financial community, of several United Nations organs, and of non-member countries that might assist in financing development programmes. At the end of each review, a set of specific conclusions and recommendations pertaining to the entire breadth of the development effort is worked out, including quantitative targets for internal and external resource mobilization.

ADVISORY SPECIAL GROUP OF EXPERTS

Was established under the Charter of Punta del Este. Its organization was modified at the Fourth Annual Meeting of IA-ECOSOC in March 1966 and in the light of CIES Statutes. The reconstituted body is attached to CIAP and it is composed of not more than five members elected by CIAP on the recommendations of the Secretary-

ORGANIZATION OF AMERICAN STATES

General of OAS, the Chairman of CIAP, the President of IDB and the Executive Secretary of ECLA.

The main functions of the Group of Experts are the following: to participate in the continued evaluation made by CIAP through the country reviews, to carry on specific tasks requested by CIES or CIAP, including participation in working groups, special missions to advise the countries or similar studies, as well as studies undertaken on its own initiative.

SECRETARIAT

The General Secretariat of OAS provides the personnel required by CIAP and the Advisory Special Group of Experts.

ACTIVITIES

National development: OAS, through the Inter-American Committee for the Alliance for Progress, conducts annual reviews of the member countries of the Inter-American system. The reviews are held by CIAP subcommittees, with the participation of each country, representatives of international financial institutions, and observers from non-OAS member countries. Their objective is to evaluate economic performance and to determine the amount of foreign assistance needed to achieve the country's economic and social development goals. A report on these subjects is prepared by the Secretariat and is used as a working paper at the meetings. CIAP is also engaged in the co-ordination of external assistance, both technical and financial.

Technical Co-operation: OAS extends technical assistance services and training programmes to member states based on the National Technical Co-operation Programmes prepared by the governments. It also utilizes the potential co-operation offered by non-member states for regional and national development objectives. Centralizes information to facilitate the co-ordination of the Organization's technical co-operation activities. Trains nearly 3,000 professionals yearly and provides more than 1,000 man-months of technical assistance.

Private Enterprise: The Secretary-General of OAS has established a 23-member Business Advisory Council aimed at reinforcing the role of the business sector in Latin America's development efforts. National business liaison committees are expected to be created in each OAS member state.

Manpower and Employment: The OAS Secretariat provides technical training and assistance for labour ministry personnel, trade union staff, and university labour study and research faculty in programmes related to their active participation in national development programmes. The Inter-American labour system provides guidance to the Secretariat through the Inter-American Conference of Ministers of Labour, the Permanent Technical Committee on Labour Matters (COTPAL) and the Trade Union Technical Advisory Council (COSATE). In this area, the Secretariat has begun a pilot activity to assist countries in identifying projects which will maximize employment growth. Missions of high-level project experts are being sent to countries to help the latter develop a shelf of employment-generating projects for subsequent internal and external financing. Close co-ordination and joint activities are carried out with ILO, IDB and UNDP. The major focus of the entire programme deals with combating unemployment in Latin America.

Export Promotion: An Inter-American Export Promotion Centre was established in 1968 at Bogotá. The Centre will help to place more Latin American products in international markets. A publication in Spanish, Nuevos Mercados, gives information on export markets and marketing techniques. The Centre has an office in Europe to facilitate contacts with European institutions in the public and private sectors. In addition, an office has been opened in the World Trade Centre in New York to take advantage of the facilities which this building offers for contacts with the United States Market. A fourth office is located in Brazil.

Population and Development: The Secretariat continues its activities aimed at creating an awareness in the member countries of the importance of the population variable in their development efforts and to spur them to establish policies and programmes in this field. CIAP examines the social sectors of a number of countries from a demographic standpoint.

Tax Reform: Since it began in 1961, the Joint OAS/IDB Tax Programme has sent a large number of technical assistance missions to member states to work in the areas of tax policy and tax administration, has sponsored two inter-American conferences on tax matters, has assigned missions to LAFTA, the Andean Group and CACM to assist in tax harmonization policies and has published numerous studies on tax and fiscal policy. Training in taxation is provided through the Inter-American Centre on Tax Studies, a co-operative venture with the government of Argentina.

Integration: With ratification of the Protocol of Buenos Aires on February 27th, 1970, which introduced some reforms to the Charter of the OAS, the quest for integration became a contractual obligation to the members of this Organization.

The programme towards a Latin American Common Market envisaged in the Declaration on Presidents of 1967, however, has suffered some setbacks. The CACM has not yet recovered from the consequences of the conflict between El Salvador and Honduras. LAFTA, at the same time, is proceeding now at a slower pace than the Treaty of Montevideo provided. The Protocol of Caracas has extended by seven years the establishment of the free trade zone. Furthermore, the emergence of subregional groupings indicates that the road toward integration in Latin America will be facilitated by subregional schemes where memberships are more homogeneous and levels of development less accentuated.

Regarding technical co-operation, the OAS General Secretariat extends help to the integration organizations by means of joint programmes. They are mainly in the field of fiscal policies and tax harmonization, social security, natural resources development, transportation, physical infrastructure and others.

ORGANIZATION OF AMERICAN STATES

CHARTER OF PUNTA DEL ESTE

Signed at Punta del Este, Uruguay, on August 17th, 1961, to co-ordinate Inter-American development and set up the Alliance for Progress.

SUMMARY

OBJECTIVES

1. To achieve a substantial and sustained growth of per capita incomes at a rate designed to attain levels of income capable of assuring self-sustaining development. In order to reach these objectives within a reasonable time, the rate of economic growth in any country of Latin America should not be less than 2.5 per cent per capita per year.

2. To make the benefits of economic progress available to all through a more equitable distribution of national income.

3. To achieve balanced diversification in national economic structures, while attaining stability in the prices of exports or in income derived from exports.

4. To accelerate the process of rational industrialisation so as to increase the productivity of the economy as a whole. Special attention should be given to the establishment and development of capital-goods industries.

5. To raise greatly the level of agricultural productivity and output and to improve storage, transport and marketing services.

6. To encourage programmes of comprehensive agrarian reform.

7. To eliminate adult illiteracy and by 1970 to assure access to six years primary education for each school-age child; to modernize and expand vocational, secondary and higher education; to strengthen basic research and to provide the competent personnel.

8. To increase life expectancy at birth by a minimum of five years by improving individual and public health. To attain this goal to provide potable water and drainage to 70 per cent of the urban and 50 per cent of the rural population; to reduce the mortality rate of children under five by half; to control serious transmissible diseases; to eradicate illnesses for which effective cures are known; to improve nutrition; to train medical and health personnel; to improve basic health services; to intensify scientific research.

9. To increase the construction of low-cost housing and to provide necessary public services.

10. To maintain stable price levels.

11. To strengthen existing agreements with a view to the ultimate fulfilment of a Latin American Common Market.

12. To develop co-operative programmes designed to prevent the harmful effects of excessive fluctuations in foreign exchange earnings and to adopt measures to facilitate exports to international markets.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL DEVELOPMENT

Basic Requirements for Economic and Social Development

1. That comprehensive and well-conceived national programmes of economic and social development be carried out.

2. That national programmes of economic and social development be based on the principles of self-help.

3. That women should be placed on an equal footing with men.

4. That Latin American countries should obtain sufficient external financial assistance and that capital from all external sources of at least 20,000,000,000 dollars be made available to the Latin American countries during the coming ten years.

5. That institutions in both the public and private sectors be strengthened and improved, and that the necessary social reforms be effected to permit a fair distribution of the fruits of economic and social progress.

National Development Programmes

1. Participating Latin American countries agree to introduce or strengthen systems for the preparation, execution and periodic revision of national programmes for economic and social development. The countries should formulate long-term development programmes.

Immediate and Short-Term Action Measures

1. Recognizes that a number of Latin American countries may require emergency financial assistance; the United States will provide funds.

2. Participating Latin American countries should immediately increase their efforts to accelerate development.

3. The United States will assist in the realisation of these short-term measures by the provision of more than 1,000,000,000 dollars in the year ending March 1962.

External Assistance in Support of National Development Programmes

1. The economic and social development of Latin America will require a large amount of financial assistance from capital-exporting countries. The Act of Bogotá and the Charter provide the framework within which this assistance can be provided.

2. The United States will assist those countries whose development programmes establish self-help measures, adequate to realise the goals envisaged. The participating countries will request the support of other capital-exporting countries and appropriate institutions.

3. The United States will help in the financing of technical assistance projects.

4. The participating Latin American countries recognise that each has a capacity to assist fellow republics by providing external technical and financial assistance.

Organization and Procedures

1. In order to provide technical assistance for the formulation of development programmes the OAS, ECLA and the Inter-American Development Bank will strengthen their agreements for co-ordination in this field.

2. The Inter-American Economic and Social Council will appoint a panel of nine experts, attached to the Council but enjoying complete autonomy in the performance of their duties.

3. Each government may present its programme for economic and social development for consideration by an ad hoc Committee.

4. The Committee will study the development programme, exchange opinions with the Interested Government and report its conclusions to the Inter-American Development Bank and other governments and institutions prepared to extend assistance.

5. In considering a programme the ad hoc Committee will examine the consistency of the programme with the principles of the Act of Bogotá and this Charter.

ORGANIZATION OF AMERICAN STATES

6. The General Secretariat of OAS will provide the personnel needed by the experts.

7. A government whose programme has been recommended by the ad hoc Committee may submit the programme to the Inter-American Development Bank to undertake the negotiations for obtaining finance. However, all governments will have full freedom to resort to any other channels. The Committee shall not interfere with the right of governments to formulate their own goals. The recommendation of the Committee will be of great importance in determining the distribution of public funds under the Alliance. The participating governments will use their good offices that these recommendations be accepted.

8. The Inter-American Economic and Social Council will review annually the progress achieved and will submit to the Council of the OAS such recommendations as it deems pertinent.

ECONOMIC INTEGRATION OF LATIN AMERICA

The American Republics recognize that:

1. The Montevideo Treaty and the Central American Treaty on Economic Integration are appropriate instruments for the attainment of these objectives.

2. The integration process can be intensified and accelerated through the use of the agreements for complementary production within economic sections provided for by the Montevideo Treaty.

3. To ensure balanced and complementary economic expansion, integration should take into account the condition of less-developed countries.

4. To facilitate economic integration it is advisable to establish effective relationships between LAFTA and the Central American Economic Integration Treaty countries and other countries.

5. The Latin American countries should co-ordinate their actions to meet unfavourable treatment accorded to their trade in world markets.

6. In application of resources under the Alliance, special attention should be given to investment for multi-national projects and expansion of trade in industrial products.

7. To facilitate the participation of countries at a relatively lower stage of economic development in multi-national programmes special attention should be given to these countries.

8. Economic integration implies a need for additional investment and funds provided under the Alliance should cover these needs.

9. Latin American countries having their own institutions for financing economic integration should channel financing through them. The co-operation of the Inter-American Development Bank should be sought for inter-regional contributions.

10. To approach the International Monetary Fund and other sources for solving temporary balance-of-payments problems.

11. The promotion and co-ordination of transportation and communications systems, and encourage multi-national enterprises.

12. To achieve co-ordination of national plans.

13. To promote the development of national Latin American enterprise.

14. The active participation of the private sector.

15. Countries still under Colonial rule should be invited to participate on achieving independence.

BASIC EXPORT COMMODITIES

National Measures

National measures affecting primary products should be directed and applied to: avoid undue obstacles to expansion of trade; avoid market instability; improve efficiency of international plans and mechanisms for stabilization; increase markets.

Therefore: Importing members should reduce restrictions and discriminatory practices affecting consumption and importation of primary products, and support stabilization programmes for primary products.

Industrialized countries should give special attention to hastening economic development in less-developed countries.

Producing countries should formulate plans for production and export and try to avoid increasing uneconomic production of goods.

Adopt measures to direct technological studies towards finding new uses and by-products of primary commodities.

Try to reduce export subsidies and other measures which cause instability.

International Co-operation Measures

1. Members should make co-ordinated efforts designed to:

Eliminate undue protection of primary products.
Eliminate taxes and reduce excessive domestic prices.
Seek to end preferential agreements.

Adopt consultation mechanisms.

2. Industrialized countries should give maximum co-operation to less-developed countries.

3. Members should suggest to international organizations when considering loans, that they should take account of the effect on the production of surplus products.

4. Support the national commodity study groups and the Commission on International Commodity Trade.

5. The Secretary-General of OAS shall convene a group of experts appointed by their respective governments to meet and report not later than March 31st, 1962, on measures to provide means of offsetting the effects of fluctuations in volume and prices of exports of basic products.

6. Support efforts to improve and strengthen international commodity agreements.

7. Should request other countries to co-operate in stabilization programmes.

8. Recognize that the disposal of accumulated reserves can achieve the goals.

RESOLUTIONS

The member countries also passed resolutions recommending means whereby the goals set forth in the Charter might be achieved. These resolutions covered two Ten-Year Programmes for Education and Health, Tax Reform, Planning and the setting up of bodies to deal with specific problems.

ORGANIZATION OF AMERICAN STATES

AMENDMENTS

Amendments to the OAS Charter, approved in March 1967 and ratified in 1970, provide for the following:

The supreme organ of the OAS will be the General Assembly, which will meet annually.

The Permanent Council will supervise the day-to-day business of the Organization.

IA-ECOSOC will deal with economic and social matters, while the IA-CESC will concentrate on educational, scientific and cultural affairs.

The Inter-American Juridical Committee will devote itself to legal matters, and the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights will concern itself with eventual violations of such rights.

The Secretary-General and Assistant Secretary-General of OAS will be elected by the Assembly for a five-year term, with the possibility of one re-election.

DECLARATION OF THE PRESIDENTS OF AMERICA

Signed at Punta del Este, Uruguay, on April 17th, 1967, by the Presidents of the member states of OAS and the Prime Minister of Trinidad and Tobago.

SUMMARY

1. Creation by 1985 of a Latin American Common Market through the progressive convergence of the Latin American Free Trade Association and the Central American Common Market.

Further, to:

2. Lay the physical foundations for Latin American economic integration through multi-national projects;

3. Increase substantially Latin American foreign-trade earnings;

4. Modernize rural living conditions, raise agricultural productivity and increase food production;

5. Promote education for development;

6. Harness science and technology for the service of the peoples;

7. Expand health programmes;

8. Eliminate unnecessary military expenditures.

ORGANIZATION OF CENTRAL AMERICAN STATES —ODECA

(ORGANIZACIÓN DE ESTADOS CENTROAMERICANOS—ODECA)

Oficina Centroamericana, Pino Alto, Paseo Escalón, San Salvador, El Salvador

Founded in 1951 by the Charter of San Salvador, ODECA seeks to re-establish the unity of Central America. A new Charter became effective in 1965.

MEMBERS

Costa Rica

El Salvador

Guatemala

Honduras

Nicaragua

AIMS

To strengthen the bonds which unite the states of Central America; to establish mutual consultation in order to guarantee and maintain fraternal relations; to forestall and prevent misunderstandings and to ensure the peaceful settlement of disputes; to offer mutual assistance and to seek common solutions to common problems; to promote economic, social and cultural development through joint action.

ORGANIZATION

THE MEETING OF HEADS OF GOVERNMENT

The Heads of Government of the five member states in conference form the supreme organ of ODECA.

THE CONFERENCE OF FOREIGN MINISTERS

The Conference of Foreign Ministers is the principal organ of the Organization. Meetings, at which each member state has one vote, normally take place every year; extraordinary meetings may be held at the request of not less than three members. Its function is to initiate proposals, to consider recommendations and proposals made by the Economic Council and to elect the Secretary-General. It may also convene meetings of other Ministers to discuss particular problems which call for collective study and planning. At the July 1973 Conference of Foreign Ministers held in San Salvador it was decided to reduce the organizations' staff to a minimum and abolish the post of Secretary General. A commission comprising the Foreign Ministers was set up to reorganize ODECA. It was to meet every two months.

THE EXECUTIVE COUNCIL

The Executive Council is composed of the Foreign Ministers of the five republics or their appointed representatives. Its function is to direct and co-ordinate the policy of the Organization, and to elect the Secretary-General, though the post has now been abolished. It is a permanent body, meeting at least once a week. The President is elected annually.

President: Ing. MAURICIO ALFREDO BORGONOVO (El Salvador).

THE LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL

The Legislative Council is composed of three members of each of the Legislative Assemblies of the member states. Its function is to advise on legislative matters; it is also to study the possibilities of uniform legislation in the Central American Republics. Meetings are held once a year; extraordinary meetings may be convened by the Executive Council at the request of at least two member states.

CENTRAL AMERICAN COURT OF JUSTICE

Composed of the Presidents of the Supreme Courts of each member state. Meetings are held whenever necessary, or when convened by the Executive Council.

THE ECONOMIC COUNCIL

The Economic Council is composed of the Ministers of Economy of the member countries and meets at least once a year. Its functions are the planning, co-ordination and execution of Central American economic integration.

THE MONETARY COUNCIL

This comprises the Presidents of the Central Banks of the member countries, who operate the Central American Clearing House.

OTHER BODIES

The following bodies bring together the Ministers of each member country (or their representatives) for the relevant sphere of concern: Cultural and Educational Council; Defence Council; Labour and Social Welfare Council; Central American Tourism Council; Central American Council for Government, Migration and Internal Affairs; Agricultural Council; Central American Council of Public Health; Infrastructure Council; Commission of Geography and Cartography; Central American Commission of Communications.

THE CENTRAL AMERICAN BUREAU

The General Secretariat has its seat in San Salvador. Its functions are to co-ordinate the work of the organs of ODECA, to assist them and to prepare and distribute information. Originally the Secretary-General was elected for a non-renewable period of four years by the Executive Council but the post was abolished in July 1973.

PUBLICATIONS

Boletín Informativo de la ODECA (monthly).
Memoria (every two years).

ORGANIZATION

THE CONFERENCE

Supreme authority of the Organization, responsible for the formulation of its general policy. It consists of representatives of member countries, decides upon reports and recommendations submitted by Board of Governors. Meets at least twice a year, the first meeting being in Vienna, and the second in the capital of a member country. It approves the appointment of Governors from each country and elects the Chairman of the Board of Governors. It works on the unanimity principle.

CONSULTATIVE MEETING OF CHIEF REPRESENTATIVES

Meetings held by chief representatives for the formulation of recommendations to the Conference concerning current issues.

THE BOARD OF GOVERNORS

Directs management of the Organization; implements resolutions of the Conference; draws up an annual Budget. It consists of one Governor for each member country, appointed for two years, and meets at least twice a year.
Chairman (1973): MUSTAFA MANSOURI (Iran).

THE ECONOMIC COMMISSION

A specialized body operating within the framework of the Secretariat, with a view to assisting the Organization in promoting stability in international oil prices at equitable levels; consists of a Board, national representatives and a commission staff; the Board meets at least twice a year.

SECRETARIAT

Secretary-General: Dr. ABDERRAHMAN KHENE (Algeria).

Administration Department: Deals with personnel matters, budget and accounting, filing and archives, conference services, general correspondence and clerical services.

Economics Department: Consists of Financial, Supply and Demand, and General Economics Sections; is responsible for all economic studies and reports.

Information Department: Responsible for a programme of general and technical publications and periodicals, appropriate relations with other oil industry institutions with a view to expanding the Information Centre of the Organization.

Legal Department: Consists of Concessions and Special Studies sections; is responsible for all legal studies and reports.

Technical Department: Carries out studies mainly on petroleum technical matters, including exploration, production and processing.

Statistics Unit: Collects, edits, collates and analyses statistical information from both primary and secondary sources.

Office of the Secretary General: Assists him in matters of protocol and implementation of the recommendations and decisions of the Conference calling for action by member countries.

REGIONAL CO-OPERATION FOR DEVELOPMENT

JOINT UNDERTAKINGS

RCD Cultural Institute: RCD Secretariat, Teheran, Iran.

RCD Insurance Centre: Pakistan Insurance Building, Bunder Rd., P.O.B. 4777, Karachi, Pakistan.

RCD Joint Chamber of Commerce and Industry: RCD Secretariat, Teheran, Iran.

RCD Shipping Services: on intra-regional routes, Tesvikiye, Sisli, P.O.B. 35, Istanbul, Turkey.

Five Regional Reinsurance Pools: Accident and Engineering, managed by Iran; Marine (Hull and Cargo and Aviation), managed by Pakistan; Fire, managed by Turkey.

Industry: About fifty joint industrial projects have been approved for establishment, of which seventeen are in various stages of implementation. Fifteen of these have already gone into production: Bank Note Paper Plant, Machine Tools, Methanol, Urea Formaldehyde, Gear Box and Differentials, Borax and Boracic Acid, Machinery for Tea Industry, Tungsten Carbide, Filters for the Chemical Industry, Locomotive Diesel Engines, Polystyrene, Glycerine (two) and Tetracycline. Six more projects are nearing completion.

Steps are being taken by member governments to encourage the participation of the private sector in joint ventures.

A study was recently completed by UNIDO on the establishment of RCD Heavy Engineering and Electrical Corporation(s) in order to evolve an integrated approach, wherever practicable. It is hoped that this study would help in adequately setting up and distributing heavy engineering projects in the region.

In the field of petroleum and petrochemicals co-operation amongst the RCD countries is progressing satisfactorily. Measures are being taken for exploration, drilling, exploitation, refining, transportation and distribution for petroleum and natural gas in the region. The Izmir Oil Refinery project is progressing very well. The question of constructing a pipeline to carry oil from Iranian fields to a Mediterranean port in Turkey is at an advanced stage of negotiations. Furthermore, exchange of petrochemicals on joint enterprise basis and setting up of joint petrochemical plants are under consideration of member governments.

Trade and Finance: Measures include the establishment of the RCD Chamber of Commerce and Industry, the RCD Shipping Services, Agreement on the RCD Union for Multilateral Payments Arrangement, preparation of the RCD Banking Manual, the creation of the RCD Reinsurance Pools, and the RCD Agreement on Trade to promote intra-regional trade.

In pursuance of the decision of the RCD Commerce and Economy Ministers held in Teheran in September 1968, a study was entrusted to UNCTAD with a view to identifying all barriers impeding intra-regional trade and making recommendations for the liberalization and expansion of trade. This study has been submitted by UNCTAD and is under the active consideration of the three governments. The Izmir Summit meeting in May 1970 issued directive to respective Commerce/Economy Ministers for taking effective decisions towards the reduction of tariff barriers and relaxation of quantitative restrictions and other non-tariff obstacles. The member governments are also considering the establishment of a preferential arrangement for the region. The drawing up of a preferential arrangement will go a long way in promoting trade in the region. Meanwhile member governments are taking administrative action such as barter arrangement and single-country licensing to increase the flow of intra-regional trade.

The possibilities of establishing an RCD Commercial Bank and a joint Development Bank are being explored.

In the field of insurance, the RCD Insurance Manual has already been published by the RCD Insurance Centre and the Reinsurance Pools have been functioning effectively and several national companies have joined the pools. During 1970, the insurance business in the region is estimated to have amounted to U.S. $2,056,111.

Transport and Communications: The construction of the RCD Highway linking Ankara-Teheran and Karachi is making reasonably good progress. The Pakistan railway system extends up to the Iranian city of Zahidan, the railway link between Teheran and Kashan is already in operation and the section Kashan-Yazd-Kerman is expected to be completed shortly. The Teheran-Ankara rail link became operational in September 1971. The RCD Shipping Services started operating on intra-regional routes and from U.S. ports to Turkey and Pakistan in 1966. The three airlines are considering the possibility of establishing a fourth airline to operate subsonic and supersonic aircraft. Operator trunk dialling system has been introduced between Teheran, Ankara and Karachi. An agreement has been reached between Turkey and Iran for the routing by Turkey of a telephone circuit Ankara-New York through Iran's new Earth Station at Asadabad. Postage, telephone and telegraphic rates have been reduced within the region.

Technical Assistance: A Regional Technical Assistance Programme was launched in 1965. Between 1965 and 1970, 1,737 students and trainees and 168 experts were provided for under the programme and 32 seminars had been organized on subjects such as financing of development programmes, management research, status of women, family planning, control and eradication of quarantinable diseases, water resource development, Islamic architecture, etc. Four joint courses on public administration were held in 1967 and 1970 and a fifth was held in September of 1971.

Tourism: Visas were abolished for nationals of member countries in 1964.

Scientific Research: The setting up of a Regional Advisory Council is being considered.

Cultural Co-operation: The Regional Cultural Institute is engaged in systematic research into the common historical and cultural heritage of the RCD countries. It has published a number of translations, in various languages of the region, of classics and well-known works of the member countries.

The RCD Annual Cultural Exchange Programme includes exchange of professors, writers and artists and the holding of art and cultural exhibitions.

Information: Collaboration is encouraged between national news agencies. A joint documentary film on general aspects of RCD emphasizing cultural and social developments in the region is being planned. RCD countries participated jointly in Expo 1970 at Osaka.

AIMS OF REGIONAL CO-OPERATION FOR DEVELOPMENT

Enunciated in Istanbul, July 23rd, 1964, by the Foreign Ministers of the Member States

1. The emergence of regional economic groupings enjoying a community of interest is an outstanding feature of our time for accelerating the pace of economic growth. Efforts directed towards regional economic collaboration have gained international acceptance and the present move to promote collaboration amongst countries of the region is directed towards the same aim, viz., the strengthening of their development efforts through active and sustained collaboration on a regional basis. This is particularly true in the case of Iran, Pakistan and Turkey since the desire and basis for such a close collaboration and co-operation exist amongst them and will continue in view of the cultural and historic ties of friendship amongst the peoples of the three countries, and further because increasing regional economic co-operation has become a necessity. Economic and cultural collaboration amongst them is therefore most desirable, and should be raised to the highest possible level. There are great possibilities for such collaboration to the mutual benefit of the three countries which should be achieved expeditiously.

Measures

2. The measures for economic collaboration suggested in the following paragraphs may be broadly divided into two categories—(a) Those which can be worked out and implemented forthwith and (b) Those which will require detailed study and scrutiny by Regional Planning Council.

3. A Regional Planning Council composed of the Heads of the Planning Organizations is established. It will be assisted by advisers and could meet in any of the regional countries, preferably by rotation.

4. The Council will study the development plans and production potential of countries of the region with a view inter alia to making recommendations on joint purpose projects and long-term purchase agreements. Joint purpose projects will feed the requirements of the three countries. There are several projects for which none of these countries can provide a sufficient domestic market yet they can be valuable projects if the total requirements of the three countries are taken into consideration.

5. The Council may also make proposals regarding the harmonization of the national development plans in the wide interest of accelerated regional development.

6. The Council will submit its reports to the Ministerial meetings. The first report is to be submitted to the next such meeting.

7. Efficient and effective means of communication and transport are essential for the promotion of the regional economic and cultural collaboration. The preparation of recommendations in this field and their implementation should be given the highest priority.

Air Transportation

8. A Committee on air transportation is set up to study measures required to—(a) improve the transport services in the region so that quick and frequent movement of passengers and freight within the region be possible; (b) establish a strong and competitive international airline among the three countries; (c) foster co-operation among the civil and commercial aviation authorities of the three countries.

The report of the Committee should be available for the next Ministerial meeting.

Shipping

9. Collaboration among the countries of the region in shipping is highly desirable. A Committee on shipping is set up to investigate the possibility of securing a close co-operation in this field including the establishment of a joint maritime line.

Roads and Railways

10. Committees on road, railways and telecommunications are established immediately. The Committee will inter alia study and report on the following:

- (a) The measures which should be taken to complete expeditiously the rail and road links among the countries of the region.
- (b) Whether any additional rail and road links are considered necessary.
- (c) Reduction of telephone rates.
- (d) Establishment of P.T.T. offices in border areas.
- (e) Feasibility of providing services such as direct dialling between the countries of the region and telecommunication, etc.

11. It is agreed that the postal and telegraph rates among Iran, Pakistan and Turkey be reduced to the levels of internal rates within the respective countries. The implementation of this decision is entrusted to the P.T.T. authorities of the three countries.

12. The construction of roads from the western and central parts of Iran to Zahidan and from Karachi to Zahidan should be given consideration by Iran and Pakistan so that the two countries are effectively linked by road. The Zahidan-Kashan rail link should be given further consideration with a view to developing it as early as possible.

Trade

13. Economic collaboration should provide for effective measures to build up and promote trade since expansion of inter-regional trade, apart from being highly desirable, in itself tends further to promote regional economic growth and amity.

14. A Committee on trade is established to study, report and recommend inter alia on the following measures on which agreement in principle has been reached:

- (a) Free or freer movement of goods among the countries of the region through practicable means such as the conclusion of trade agreements, etc.;
- (b) transit trade arrangements;
- (c) establishment of closer collaboration between existing chambers of commerce and establishment of a joint chamber of commerce;
- (d) establishment of halls and showrooms, provision of special customs facilities for exhibitions and increased participation in each other's fairs;

REGIONAL CO-OPERATION FOR DEVELOPMENT

- (e) dissemination of information on a large scale of the export and import potential of the three countries and investigation of the possibilities of joint publicity and joint marketing policy outside the region for similar exportable products.

Petroleum

15. A Committee on petroleum is established to consider measures for co-operation among the three countries in the field of petroleum and natural gas and for their exploration drilling; exploration; refining; transportation; distribution, etc. Collaboration in this field could be developed to mutual advantage.

Petrochemicals

16. A Committee on petrochemical industries is established for development of these industries in the region.

Tourism

17. A Tourist Agreement will be signed at an early date among the countries of the region with a view to promoting tourist traffic among themselves and to increase the flow of tourists from other countries. A Committee on tourism should be established immediately to prepare an agreement on tourism which should inter alia cover co-operation in publicity, group or package tourist arrangements. Promotion of inter-regional travel, substitutes of passports by documents valid for travelling in the three countries. Efforts with the aim of exchanging and training of tourist personnel, technicians, tourist investments, tourist propaganda and utilization of the services and facilities of their tourist organizations, travel bureaux and other agencies in their countries and abroad. As economic collaboration grows, inter-regional travel should increase considerably; it does however need a special effort if it is to be developed to a substantial degree in the immediate future.

Abolition of Visas

18. The abolition of visas for travel purposes by their nationals in the three countries is accepted in principle; the procedure for the implementation of this decision should be worked out by the Committee on tourism.

Banking and Insurance

19. A Committee on Banking and Insurance is established for collaboration in these fields.

Technical Co-operation

20. The countries of the region should provide technical assistance to each other in the form of exports and training facilities. Such a programme will, apart from intrinsic utility, promote regional understanding and harmony. The Planning Council will be directly responsible for progress in this matter.

Joint Purpose Enterprises

21. The Committee carries out feasibility studies in regard to the development of some industries on a joint purpose basis.

Cultural Co-operation

22. Iran, Pakistan and Turkey are bound to one another by historical and cultural ties, they share a common heritage. Their cultural ties go far back in history and their national cultures owe much to continuous exchanges which have gone on for centuries. In the modern world they must integrate their traditional cultures with the new scientific outlook.

23. Co-operation in the field of education, science and culture is necessary to develop consciousness of the common cultural heritage and to promote social and economic development and political collaboration.

24. During the last few years a certain measure of progress has been achieved in cultural relations through bilateral programmes. However, there is considerable scope for further action. At the same time there is strong need for a joint sponsorship of many cultural activities under a regional programme.

Cultural Relations

25. The programme of cultural relations should be particularly oriented towards the following aims: (a) creating mass consciousness of the common cultural heritage. To this end the three countries should jointly sponsor an institute for initiating studies and research in this field and bringing out clearly those traditions which bind the people of the region together. Further, school books should be carefully reviewed to eliminate misleading interpretations of history and to promote greater understanding of their common interests; (b) disseminating information about history, civilization and culture of the people of the region. To this end each country should consider: (1) establishment of chairs for the study of its language, history, civilization and culture in universities of the other countries; (2) increasing substantially the number of scholarships for the students of other countries to enable them to study together in their educational institutions; (3) establishment of cultural centres in the other two countries; (4) provision as far as possible of facilities for the teaching of international language in the schools of other member countries; the media of mass communications, radio, films, television, etc., should be extensively used for the propagation of information and ideas aimed at a closer understanding of the people of the region.

26. Cultural co-operation may also be extended through: (a) exchanges in the field of fine arts; (b) exchanges of visits by teachers, scientists, educational administrators, writers, artists, journalists, etc.; (c) exchanges of information on educational techniques, experiences, and programmes; (d) collaboration in regard to programmes for radio, films and television; (e) elimination of obstacles in the way of free exchange of books, films and other printed materials of an educational and cultural character; (f) organization of regional tournaments; (g) co-operation in the field of joint production of films.

Organization

27. The organizational arrangements for planning and promoting economic and cultural collaboration amongst Iran, Pakistan and Turkey should be simple and effective. As the scope of co-operation widens these arrangements could be modified as required.

28. The highest decision-making body for regional co-operation shall be a Council of Ministers consisting of the Ministers nominated by each of the three countries concerned. It shall consider and decide upon measures for regional economic and cultural co-operation. It will also follow the programmes in the implementation of its decisions. The Council shall meet once in four months and more frequently if necessary. The Chairman of the Council shall be the Head of State or Head of Government of the host country.

29. The Council will be assisted by a Regional Planning Council composed of the Heads of the three Planning Organizations. They will deal with work relating to regional collaboration including detailed preparatory negotiations and preparation of recommendations for submission to the Council. The Committee will be assisted by Sub-committees which will report to it. If necessary the Committee may engage expert consultants to examine particular subjects for regional co-operation.

30. The host country will for the time being provide secretarial facilities (including office accommodation, etc.). The officials of the countries deputed by their Governments to serve on the Secretariat will draw their emoluments and allowances from their own Governments.

31. After 12 months the Council of Ministers will review the position and decide upon the setting up of a permanent Secretariat.

ST. LAWRENCE SEAWAY

Opened 1959 to allow ocean-going ships to enter the Great Lakes of North America

ORGANIZATION

Canada: St. Lawrence Seaway Authority: 330 Sparks St., Ottawa, Ontario K1R 7R9; f. 1954; maintains and operates the sections of the St. Lawrence Seaway in Canadian territory; Pres. PAUL D. NORMANDEAU, Eng.; Vice-Pres. J. J. QUIGG; Sec. L. E. BÉLAND.

U.S.A.: Saint Lawrence Seaway Development Corporation: Seaway Circle, Massena, N.Y.; f. 1954; maintains and operates sections lying in U.S. territory; Administrator D. W. OBERLIN.

THE SEAWAY

MILEAGE AND LOCKS

The Seaway was built by the joint efforts of the St. Lawrence Seaway Authority and the Saint Lawrence Seaway Development Corporation. Work started in 1954 on the Montreal-Lake Ontario section of the waterway, consisting of seven locks, which was opened to navigation in 1959. In 1963 the Canadian government approved a project for the twinning of the five single locks in the Welland Canal. This project was later deferred pending study of more extensive rebuilding of the Welland and a major programme to improve existing installations was launched. An 8½-mile by-pass channel has been constructed near the city of Welland and was opened for navigation at the beginning of the 1973 season.

The Seaway extends 412 miles from Montreal Harbour 43 miles into Lake Erie and includes the Welland Canal, built 1913-32 between Lakes Ontario and Erie. There are 15 locks on the Seaway; 7 between Montreal and Lake Ontario, total lift about 225 ft.; 8 on the Welland Canal, total lift 326 ft.

Shipping Channel: Minimum depth 27 ft.; width 200-800 ft.

Welland Canal: Minimum depth 27 ft., length 27 miles.

Locks built and maintained by Canada:

St. Lambert	13-20 ft. lift, Montreal Harbour to Laprairie Basin.
Côte Ste. Catherine	33-35 ft. lift, Laprairie Basin to Lake St. Louis by-passing Lachine rapids.
Lower Beauharnois	38-42 ft. lift, by-passing Beauharnois Power Station.
Upper Beauharnois	36-40 ft. lift to Lake St. Francis.
Iroquois	0.5-6.0 ft. lift; by-passing Iroquois Control Dam.
Welland 1	46 ft. lift; St. Catherines.
Welland 2	46.5 ft. lift; St. Catherines.
Welland 3	46.5 ft. lift; St. Catherines.
Welland 4, 5, 6	Flight locks; 139.5 ft. lift; Thorold.
Welland 7	46.5 ft. lift; Thorold.
Welland 8	2-11 ft. lift; Port Colborne.

Locks built and maintained by the U.S.A.:

Snell	45-49 ft. lift to Wiley-Dondero Canal.
Eisenhower	38-42 ft. lift to Lake St. Lawrence.

GREAT LAKES SYSTEM

Shipping channels in the Great Lakes above the Seaway are being dredged to a minimum depth of 27 ft.

NAVIGATION SEASON

HYDRO-ELECTRIC POWER

The St. Lawrence Power project was undertaken jointly by the Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario and the Power Authority of the State of New York, to develop 2.2 million horse-power of electricity at the Saunders-Moses dam in the International Rapids section of the St. Lawrence.

COST OF SEAWAY

The total cost of the Seaway was $458 million, of which Canada contributed $330 million and the U.S.A. $128 million. The power scheme cost $600 million, equally divided between the two countries.

Revenue to defray the cost of construction and maintenance comes from tolls and lockage fees. Tolls for the Welland Canal were suspended in July 1962, but in 1967 a new lockage fee was instituted for the Canal.

SOUTH-EAST ASIA TREATY ORGANIZATION— SEATO

P.O. Box 517, Bangkok, Thailand

Telephone: 811322.

SEATO is a defensive alliance organized in accordance with Article 51 of the United Nations Charter. The eight member countries of the Manila Pact and Pacific Charter of September 1954 pledged themselves to collective action to resist armed attacks, and to counter subversion aimed at the overthrow of their governments. The pact is officially known as the South-East Asia Collective Defence Treaty. SEATO liaises with NATO and CENTO.

MEMBERS

Philippines
Thailand

United Kingdom
U.S.A.

Note: Pakistan left SEATO on November 7th, 1973.

ORGANIZATION

THE SEATO COUNCIL

The SEATO Council, which consists of the Foreign Ministers of the seven member countries, sets the broad common policies required for the fulfilment of the objectives of the South-East Asia Collective Defence Treaty. The Council usually meets once a year in the capital cities of member countries. Most recent meeting in New York, in September 1973.

Following decisions taken at the thirteenth annual meeting of the SEATO Council in New York on September 28th, 1973, the military staff of SEATO is expected to be cut by more than 82 per cent. The military and civil sides of the organization are to be merged. This general reorganization is primarily due to the changing defence needs of the region resulting from the recent détente with China.

CIVIL SIDE

SEATO COUNCIL REPRESENTATIVES: This body usually meets once a month and consists of the Ambassadors in Bangkok of the six member nations and a special Ambassador appointed by the Government of Thailand. It carries on the overall political direction of SEATO affairs, and controls the non-military activities of the Organization.

PERMANENT WORKING GROUP: This group meets weekly and is made up of senior staff members of the Council Representatives. The Group's duty is to carry out preparatory work on proposals and policy matters for the Council Representatives.

EXPERT STUDY GROUPS: Convened from time to time to provide advice on specific subjects, e.g. community development, counter-subversion, culture, economics, education, information, labour and security.

SECRETARIAT-GENERAL: International staff posts in the Secretariat-General are filled on the basis of the accepted pattern of distribution among member countries.

Secretary-General: H.E. SUNTHORN HONGLADAROM (Thailand).

Deputy Secretary-General: ROBERT HYSLOP (Australia).

Special Assistant: Pol. Gen. CHAMRAS MANDUKANANDA (Thailand).

Offices within the Secretariat-General: Office of the Secretary-General, Office for Counter Insurgency and Counter Subversion, Office of Cultural and Economic Affairs, Public Information Office and Administration Office.

MILITARY SIDE

MILITARY ADVISERS GROUP: This group directs SEATO military activities and is responsible to the SEATO Council. Each member nation nominates one high-ranking officer at Chief of Staff or Theatre Commander level as its military adviser. The Military Advisers Group holds two conferences each year.

SEATO MILITARY PLANNING OFFICE: This office carries out military planning at SEATO Headquarters. The Chief, SEATO Military Planning Office, is a senior officer of the armed forces of one of the member nations provided on a rotational basis. He is responsible to the Military Advisers Group for the functioning of the office and for maintaining close liaison with the Secretary-General. He is assisted by a Deputy Chief, Military Planning Office. Each Military Adviser is represented in the Military Planning Office by an officer of Colonel's rank or equivalent, called the Military Adviser's Representative. Each nation contributes a number of planners drawn from their respective armed forces.

SOUTH-EAST ASIA TREATY ORGANIZATION

The Secretary-General of SEATO, Sunthorn Hongladarom, announced in November that the office would be replaced by an Office of Security Affairs. The formulation of plans for joint military action against aggression had been suspended, but plans could be brought out and reactivated by military chiefs of staff of member nations.

Chief, Military Planning Office: Brig.-Gen. A. N. VENADAS (Philippines).

Deputy Chief, Military Planning Office: Capt. F. T. ROONEY, U.S.N. (U.S.A.)

Military Advisers' Representatives: Capt. N. A. BOASE, R.A.N. (Australia); vacant (France); Col. R. I. LAUNDER, O.B.E., R.N.Z.I.R. (New Zealand); Col. A. C. FERRER, P.C. (Philippines); Capt. SUJIT BUNNAG, R.T.N. (Thailand); Col. E. J. BARDELL, O.B.E. (United Kingdom); Col. J. J. DE RIENZO, U.S.A.F. (United States).

Head of Planning: Gp.Capt. M. D. MARSHALL, R.A.F. (U.K.).

Head of Military Secretariat: Lt.-Col. J. F. DAVIS, R.R.F. (U.K.).

Head of Administration: Lt.-Col. J. J. BLESSING, U.S.A.F. (U.S.A.)

Deputy Director (Military), Public Information Office: Lt.-Col. P. G. HICKS, R.A. (U.K.).

ACTIVITIES

PROJECT ASSISTANCE

Today SEATO activities are concentrated upon small-scale schemes in rural, and often sensitive, areas. These are contributing positively to raising living standards, inculcating the habit of self-government at local levels, and helping to impede the survival of subversive forces. SEATO-assisted projects are administered by the Organization's Cultural and Economic Affairs Office, and financed by the joint budget plus additional bilateral aid funds from SEATO members.

Health: SEATO assists the rural health services of Thailand with the provision of equipment for health centres and assistance in training auxiliary health workers.

Three major research centres have been initiated (see below). In order to assist the Thai Government's Clean Water Programme for Rural Schools, 16 wells have been dug in north-east Thailand and teams trained to continue the well-drilling scheme in the north and north-east of the country. The Philippine and Thai Child-Care Programmes receive assistance for equipment, salaries and training.

Development: SEATO is helping the Thai Government resettlement programme for hilltribe evacuees from areas exposed to Communist subversion. There are approximately half a million tribesmen distributed throughout the mountainous areas of northern Thailand; because some of them are engaged in the cultivation of opium poppies, they pose an economic and social problem, as well as a security threat, to the Thai authorities.

The Organization has constructed an earthwork dam for a multi-tribal resettlement village in Nan Province, and is embarking upon the construction of a cannery for local produce. An associated project is the Hilltribe Agricultural Extension Centre, where cash crops suitable for the hilltribes are being identified and reared. SEATO members continue to support a Hilltribe Research Centre and radio station, both in Chiang Mai, Northern Thailand.

A SEATO-Thai Rural Development Technical

Assistance Centre was set up at Ubon in north-east Thailand in 1962. The Centre encourages villagers within its service area to exercise, initiate and formulate their own development plans, for which it provides technical assistance. Since 1970, SEATO has conducted a Village-of-the-Year Award Programme in conjunction with the Thai and Philippine Governments. Prizes are awarded annually in each country to villages exhibiting the most marked improvements in community development.

SEATO has contributed funds for the construction of multi-purpose centres (providing medical, educational and administrative facilities) for the poorer barrios of Central Luzon, Philippines. Funds are also being donated to purchase rice and corn mills to be managed by co-operatives.

Education: The SEATO Cultural Programme, launched in 1957, today places emphasis on education in rural areas, especially where minority groups need special help. A Rural Education Assistance Programme was launched in 1973—ten scholarships will be granted under the Programme to children from rural and hilltribe areas, and assistance will be given to train village and hilltribe teachers.

Grants continue to be awarded under the Cultural Programme to post- and undergraduate students from the regional SEATO countries. A total of 156 grants for postgraduate studies were awarded between 1959 and 1973. SEATO also provides scholarships to the Asian Institute of Technology.

The Fellowship and Advisory Programme, an amalgamation of the previous SEATO Research Fellowship Awards and the SEATO Professorship programme, will operate to meet the specific requirements of the regional members. The Organization is continuing to give assistance to vocational and technical training schools (see below). During 1973-74 SEATO funds will buy basic tools and equipment, and a water-supply and irrigation system, for the Technical Training Centre for Central Luzon at Magalang, Pampanga Province.

SOUTH-EAST ASIA TREATY ORGANIZATION

SEATO-INITIATED PROJECTS

It is SEATO policy to help projects it has launched to become independent. This enables the Organization continually to review new possibilities for launching other projects that will contribute to the development of the Treaty Area. The following SEATO-initiated projects are now administered independently, although they continue to maintain close relations with the Organization, and to receive bilateral aid from SEATO members.

SEATO Medical Research and Clinical Research Laboratories, established in Bangkok in 1960 and 1963 respectively, are centres for research and training in tropical diseases.

Cholera Research Laboratory, established in Dacca in 1960, is one of the world's largest institutes of research into the disease, employing more than 800 scientists, nurses, field workers and technicians. Studies conducted show that cholera can now be treated effectively at small cost by the oral therapy method developed at the laboratory.

Asian Institute of Technology (AIT) was founded in 1959 as the SEATO Graduate School of Engineering. It became an independent institution, under the management of an international Board of Trustees and its Executive Committee, in 1967. Over 550 students from all over Asia graduated between 1959 and 1972.

Vehicle Re-build Workshop was established in 1965 as a joint Thai-Australian military project under SEATO auspices to handle the repair and maintenance of Thai military and government vehicles.

Vocational and Technical Training Schools: SEATO assistance has helped to establish 20 vocational training schools in the major towns of Thailand; Technical Training Centres in Karachi and Dacca; and, in the Philippines, a Textile Workers' Training Centre (now integrated within the programme of the Marikina School of Arts and Crafts) and a Labour Market Information and Statistics Service Project.

Military Technical Training School is a joint Australian-Thai project providing training for technical supervisors, foremen, skilled workmen and instructors of the Royal Thai Armed Forces. The school has been expanded to accommodate a Motor Mechanics Training Centre, and an Electronics Wing is scheduled for completion in early 1975.

Meteorological Telecommunications Project, launched by SEATO in 1961-62 to improve the telecommunications system for collecting meteorological and aeronautical information in the Philippines and Thailand, is now nationally operated with continuing U.S. assistance.

Agricultural Research Project was commissioned by SEATO in 1968, bringing together a team of consultants in the various fields of agricultural research; a report, containing far-reaching recommendations, was presented in March 1969.

Cultural Projects were initiated originally to encourage the arts. The reconstruction of Pimai, a Khmer temple in Thailand, was undertaken with the assistance of a French architect; SEATO literary prizes were awarded annually from 1968 to 1973.

BUDGET

Total (1972-73): approx. $1.7 million.

THE SOUTH-EAST ASIA COLLECTIVE DEFENCE TREATY

MANILA PACT—Signed September 8th, 1954.

The Parties to this Treaty,

Recognizing the sovereign equality of all the Parties,

Reiterating their faith in the purposes and principles set forth in the Charter of the United Nations and their desire to live in peace with all peoples and all governments,

Reaffirming that, in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations, they uphold the principle of equal rights and self-determination of peoples, and declaring that they will earnestly strive by every peaceful means to promote self-government and to secure the independence of all countries whose peoples desire it and are able to undertake its responsibilities,

Desiring to strengthen the fabric of peace and freedom and to uphold the principles of democracy, individual liberty and the rule of law, and to promote the economic well-being and development of all peoples in the Treaty Area,

Intending to declare publicly and formally their sense of unity, so that any potential aggressor will appreciate that the Parties stand together in the area, and

Desiring further to co-ordinate their efforts for collective defence for the preservation of peace and security,

Therefore agree as follows:

Article 1

The Parties undertake, as set forth in the Charter of the United Nations, to settle any international dispute in which they may be involved by peaceful means in such a manner that international peace and security and justice are not endangered, and to refrain in their international relations from the threat or use of force in any manner inconsistent with the purposes of the United Nations.

Article 2

In order more effectively to achieve the objectives of this Treaty, the Parties, separately and jointly, by means of continuous and effective self-help and mutual aid will maintain and develop their individual and collective capacity to resist armed attack and to prevent and counter subversive activities directed from without against their territorial integrity and political stability.

SOUTH-EAST ASIA TREATY ORGANIZATION

Article 3

The Parties undertake to strengthen their free institutions and to co-operate with one another in the further development of economic measures, including technical assistance, designed both to promote economic progress and social well-being and to further the individual and collective efforts of governments towards these ends.

Article 4

1. Each Party recognizes that aggression by means of armed attack in the Treaty Area against any of the Parties or against any State or territory which the Parties by unanimous agreement may hereafter designate would endanger its own peace and safety, and agrees that it will in that event act to meet the common danger in accordance with its constitutional processes. Measures taken under this paragraph shall be immediately reported to the Security Council of the United Nations.

2. If, in the opinion of any of the Parties, the inviolability or the integrity of the territory or the sovereignty or political independence of any Party in the Treaty Area or of any other State or territory to which the provisions of paragraph 1 of this Article from time to time apply is threatened in any way other than by armed attack or is affected or threatened by any fact or situation which might endanger the peace of the area, the Parties shall consult immediately in order to agree on the measures which should be taken for the common defence.

3. It is understood that no action on the territory of any State designated by unanimous agreement under paragraph 1 of this Article or on any territory so designated shall be taken except at the invitation or with the consent of the government concerned.

Article 5

The Parties hereby establish a Council, on which each of them shall be represented, to consider matters concerning the implementation of this Treaty. The Council shall provide for consultation with regard to military and any other planning as the situation obtaining in the Treaty Area may from time to time require. The Council shall be so organized as to be able to meet at any time.

Article 6

This Treaty does not affect and shall not be interpreted as affecting in any way the rights and obligations of any of the Parties under the Charter of the United Nations or the responsibility of the United Nations for the maintenance of international peace and security. Each Party declares that none of the international engagements now in force between it and any other of the Parties or any third party is in conflict with the provisions of this Treaty, and undertakes not to enter into any international engagement in conflict with this Treaty.

Article 7

Any other State in a position to further the objectives of the Treaty and to contribute to the security of the area may, by unanimous agreement of the Parties, be invited to accede to this Treaty. Any State so invited may become a Party to the Treaty by depositing its instrument of accession with the Government of the Republic of the Philippines. The Government of the Republic of the Philippines shall inform each of the Parties of the deposit of each such instrument of accession.

Article 8

As used in this Treaty, the "Treaty Area" is the general area of South-East Asia, including also the entire territories of the Asian Parties, and the general area of the South-West Pacific not including the Pacific area north of 21 degrees 30 minutes north latitude. The Parties may, by unanimous agreement, amend this Article to include within the Treaty Area the territory of any State acceding to this Treaty in accordance with Article 7 or otherwise to change the Treaty Area.

Article 9

1. This Treaty shall be deposited in the archives of the Government of the Republic of the Philippines. Duly certified copies thereof shall be transmitted by that Government to the other signatories.

2. The Treaty shall be ratified and its provisions carried out by the Parties in accordance with their respective constitutional processes. The instruments of ratification shall be deposited as soon as possible with the Government of the Republic of the Philippines, which shall notify all of the other signatories of such deposit.

3. The Treaty shall enter into force between the States which have ratified it as soon as the instruments of ratification of a majority of the signatories shall have been deposited, and shall come into effect with respect to each other State on the date of deposit of its instrument of ratification.

Article 10

This Treaty shall remain in force indefinitely, but any Party may cease to be a Party one year after its notice of denunciation has been given to the Government of the Republic of the Philippines, which shall inform the Governments of the other Parties of the deposit of each notice of denunciation.

Article 11

The English text of this Treaty is binding on the Parties, but when the Parties have agreed to the French text thereof and have so notified the Government of the Republic of the Philippines, the French text shall be equally authentic and binding on the Parties.

UNDERSTANDING OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

The United States of America in executing the present Treaty does so with the understanding that its recognition of the effect of aggression and armed attack and its agreement with reference thereto in Article 6, paragraph 1, apply only to Communist aggression but affirms that in the event of other aggression or armed attack it will consult under the provisions of Article 4, paragraph 2.

PROTOCOL TO THE TREATY

Designation of states and territory as to which provisions of Article 4 and Article 3 are to be applicable:

The Parties to the South-East Asia Collective Defence Treaty unanimously designate for the purpose of Article 4 of the Treaty the States of Cambodia and Laos and the free territory under the jurisdiction of the State of Viet-Nam.

The Parties further agree that the above-mentioned states and territory shall be eligible in respect of the economic measures contemplated by Article 3.

This Protocol shall enter into force simultaneously with the coming into force of the Treaty.

SOUTH-EAST ASIA TREATY ORGANIZATION

THE PACIFIC CHARTER

The delegates of Australia, France, New Zealand, Pakistan, the Republic of the Philippines, the Kingdom of Thailand, the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, the United States of America:

Desiring to establish a firm basis for common action to maintain peace and security in South-East Asia and the South-West Pacific;

Convinced that common action to this end in order to be worthy and effective, must be inspired by the highest principles of justice and liberty;

Do hereby proclaim:

First, in accordance with the provisions of the United Nations Charter, they uphold the principle of equal rights and self-determination of peoples and they will earnestly strive by every peaceful means to promote self-government and to secure the independence of all countries whose peoples desire it and are able to undertake its responsibilities; .

Second, they are each prepared to continue taking effective practical measures to ensure conditions favourable to the orderly achievement of the foregoing purposes in accordance with their constitutional procedures;

Third, they will continue to co-operate in the economic, social and cultural fields in order to promote higher living standards, economic progress and social well-being in this region;

Fourth, as declared in the South-East Asia Collective Defence Treaty, they are determined to prevent or counter by appropriate means any attempt in the Treaty Area to subvert their freedom or to destroy their sovereignty or territorial integrity.

HISTORY AND AIMS

Following the Canberra Agreement of 1947, the Commission was set up in 1948 and moved to its present headquarters in 1949. In 1951 Guam and the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands were brought within the scope of the Commission. Western Samoa, which attained independence in 1962, was accepted as a member Government in 1965 and formally acceded to the Agreement in July 1965. Nauru became a member of the Commission in July 1969, and in May 1971 Fiji also acceded to the Canberra Agreement. In 1962 the Netherlands, one of the original members, withdrew when it ceased to be responsible for Dutch New Guinea (now West Irian).

Each territory has its own programme of economic and social development. The Commission assists these programmes by bringing people together for discussion and study, by research into some of the problems common to the region, by providing expert advice and assistance and by disseminating technical information.

ACTIVITIES

The Commission organizes conferences of technical experts, seminars and training courses. It finances study tours by technical officers, promotes research and collects, prepares and distributes information. The work of the Commission falls within three fields:

Health: Public health, health education, maternal and child health, nutrition, epidemiology, environmental sanitation, parasitology, mental health and preventive psychiatry, dental health, training and research.

Social Development: Literature promotion, language-teaching, community education, urbanization problems, youth work, applied research and training, labour, housing, social welfare, visual aids, home economics, population studies and educational broadcasting.

Economic Development: Improvement in plant and animal production, plant and animal protection, quarantine, extension of agriculture, fisheries, economic affairs, research and training, land tenure, co-operatives, forestry and statistics.

L'UNION DOUANIÈRE ET ÉCONOMIQUE DE L'AFRIQUE CENTRALE—UDEAC

(Central African Customs and Economic Union)

B.P. 969, Bangui, Central African Republic

Came into operation in January 1966 and replaces the former Union douanière équatoriale (f. 1959).

MEMBERS*

Cameroon

Central African Republic

Congo (Brazzaville)

Gabon

* Central African Republic and Chad withdrew from the Union in April 1968 to form the Union des états de l'Afrique centrale (UEAC) together with Congo Kinshasa (now Zaire). Central African Republic subsequently rejoined UDEAC in December 1968.

ORGANIZATION

COUNCIL OF HEADS OF STATES

Meets at least once a year to determine general policy; the supreme organ of the Union. The presidency of the Council is by annual alphabetical rotation.

President (1974): AHMADOU AHIDJO (Cameroon).

CONSULTATIVE COMMITTEE

Permanent deliberative body of the Union; comprises the Finance Ministers and Ministers concerned with economic development from each of the participating countries, and meets at least once a year.

GENERAL SECRETARIAT

In charge of the executive functions of the Union; composed of a Customs, Statistics and Fiscal division and a division of Development and Industrialization; associated with the Inter-State Accounts Agency; in January 1966 the Secretariat of the Conférence des chefs d'état de l'Afrique équatoriale was merged with that of UDEAC but became a separate institution again in December 1967. Sec.-Gen. PIERRE TCHANQUE (Cameroon).

FUNCTIONS

The main provisions of the Union, embodied in the Treaty of Brazzaville, aim to rationalize and harmonize the tariff and tax systems of the four member states, and include:

Customs Union: The group of four states constitutes a free trade area, in which the circulation of persons, merchandise, services and capital is free. A common external tariff, additional to previous duties and fiscal charges, is levied on all imports entering the region, except on goods from members of the European Economic Community and of the former Union africaine et malgache. A common investment code has been established.

Solidarity Fund: Compensates the land-locked Central African Republic for the loss of customs revenue on imports cleared in coastal member states but then re-exported inland. A total of 1,900 million frs. CFA have been donated to this fund.

Repartition of Industrial Projects and Harmonization of Development Plans and Transport Policies: The Union stimulates the rational development and diversification of the economies of member states, in order to multiply inter-state exchanges and to improve the standard of living of the population. The Executive Council decides on measures to harmonize development plans and transport policies. An oil refinery at Port Gentil, Gabon, is being constructed as a joint enterprise.

Uniform Tax System: The many internal revenue-raising taxes on industrial production have now been replaced by a single tax regime, fixed by the Executive Committee. The Council of Heads of State adopted an act regulating this matter in 1965.

Free Circulation of Persons and the Right of Establishment: Regulated by the convention signed in 1961 by UAM (see Chapter on OCAM).

Banque des états de l'Afrique Centrale: 29 rue de Colisée, Paris 8e, France; f. 1955; sole issuing bank for the four members of UDEAC; Pres. PAUL MOUKAMBI (Gabon).

* The Central African Republic was one of the original members of UEAC but withdrew at the end of 1968.

ORGANIZATION

CONFERENCE OF HEADS OF STATE

This, the supreme organ of the Union meets at least once a year to fix the Union's budget and to orientate and harmonize policies in the fields of economy, trade, customs, transport, telecommunications, education, culture, health, science, technology, defence and security.

COUNCIL OF MINISTERS

Meets at least twice a year.

OFFICERS OF THE UNION

Executive Secretary-General: M. TRAOTOBAYE.

Chairman: General MOBUTU (Zaire).

Military Administrator: Colonel MOLANGIA (Zaire).

FUNCTIONS

Under its charter the Union has the following aims: the adoption of common tariffs for imports and the free movement of capital and persons between member states; cultural, scientific and technological co-operation between member states; solidarity and military assistance in the event of foreign aggression.

Membership of the Union is open to every independent African state.

UNION OF INTERNATIONAL FAIRS

(Union des Foires Internationales)

60 rue la Boétie, 75008 Paris, France

The Union was founded in 1925 to increase co-operation between international fairs, safeguard their interests and extend their operations.

ORGANIZATION

ANNUAL CONGRESS

The Annual Congress, which is the sovereign body of UFI, is held every year in a different town. The Congress lays down UFI policy, decides upon applications for membership and determines the programme of work for the coming year.

Each member fair of UFI is entitled to a certain number of votes in the Congress deliberations. Decisions are carried by an absolute majority of the total number of votes.

SECRETARIAT

Secretary-General: A. L. BLANCHOT (France).

Assistant Secretary-General: R. H. WEBER.

Treasurer: A. FARINA (Italy).

STEERING COMMITTEE

The Steering Committee carries out the decisions of Congress. It also co-ordinates and supervises the activities of the Commissions and Technical Committees.

President: C. T. STEIDLE (Federal Republic of Germany).

Vice-Presidents: F. WONSACK (German Democratic Republic), C. T. STEIDLE (Federal Republic of Germany), G. GIACOVELLI (Italy), M. TAELEMAN (France), J. MICHEL (Luxembourg).

Counsellors: C. BERTOLOTI (Italy), P. BRETON (France), G. CHANTREN (Belgium), L. DAL FALCO (Italy), A. ELLEFSEN (France), A. ESCODA-COROMINAS (Spain), A. FARINA (Italy), J. FAURE-BRAC (France), H. G. FUCHS (Federal Republic of Germany), O. HEROLD (Finland), O. KIBAR (Turkey), J. KOLACNY (Czechoslovakia), L. KRISTOF (Hungary), R. KRUGMANN (Federal Republic of Germany), L. MERLIN (Italy), H. B. G. MONTGOMERY (U.K.), M. NEVES (Portugal), F. RIHA (Austria), K. SCHOOP (Federal Republic of Germany), J. H. D. VAN DER KWAST (Netherlands).

AIMS

UFI has defined the conditions to be fulfilled to qualify as an "International Fair". It has drafted, in co-operation with the International Chamber of Commerce, a series of criteria applicable to international specialized displays. It seeks to discourage inferior displays.

Questions studied by UFI include:

1. Establishment of bonded warehouses within fair premises.
2. Facilitating customs formalities.

3. Authorization of temporary imports.
4. Granting of special quotas for the sale of foreign goods exhibited at fairs.
5. Reduction of transport rates for visitors and for goods on display.
6. Granting of visas free of charge for users of fairs.
7. Allotment of foreign exchange quotas for exhibitors.
8. Protection of inventions on display.

THE WARSAW TREATY OF FRIENDSHIP, CO-OPERATION AND MUTUAL ASSISTANCE— THE WARSAW PACT

Headquarters of the Joint Command: Moscow, U.S.S.R.

The Warsaw Treaty of Friendship Co-operation and Mutual Assistance (The Warsaw Pact) was signed in Warsaw in May 1955. The Treaty supplemented agreements already in existence between the U.S.S.R. and Czechoslovakia (1943), Poland (1945), and Bulgaria, Hungary and Romania (1948).

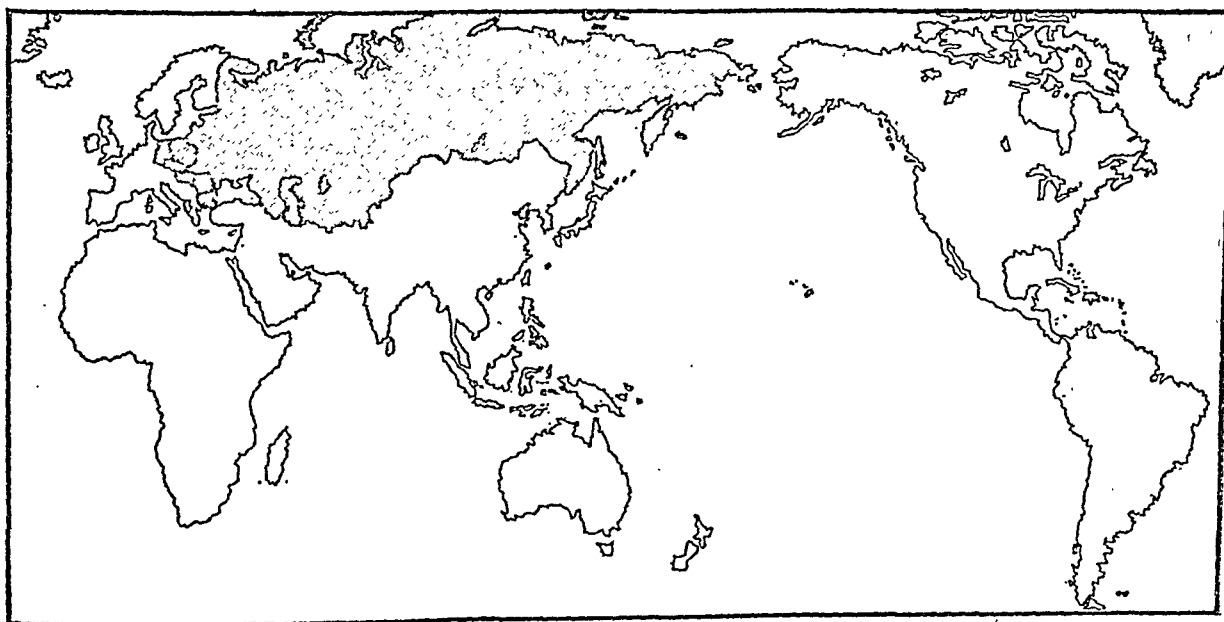

MEMBERS

Bulgaria
Czechoslovakia
German Democratic Republic

Hungary
Poland

Romania
U.S.S.R.

Albania has not participated in Warsaw Pact activities since 1961, and in September 1968 announced her withdrawal from the Pact.

ORGANIZATION

POLITICAL CONSULTATIVE COMMITTEE

The Committee was intended to meet not less than twice a year, but in fact there have been fewer meetings, the most recent being in January 1972 in Prague. The Chairmanship is held by each member country in turn for one year. Delegations of member states normally include the First Secretary of the Party, the Chairman of the Council of Ministers, the Minister of Defence and the Foreign Minister.

MILITARY COUNCIL

Set up March 17th, 1969; Chair. Marshal YAKUBOVSKY.

TECHNICAL COMMITTEE OF THE JOINT ARMED FORCES

Set up March 17th, 1969.

COMMITTEE OF DEFENCE MINISTERS

Set up March 17th, 1969; Chair. Marshal YAKUBOVSKY.

JOINT SECRETARIAT

Established in January 1956 in Moscow; Sec.-Gen. N. P. FIRYUBIN (U.S.S.R.).

THE WARSAW PACT

THE WARSAW TREATY

ARTICLE ONE

The contracting parties pledge themselves in conformity with the Charter of the UN to refrain in their international relations from a threat or use of force, and to resolve their international disputes by peaceful means in such a way so as not to threaten international peace and security.

ARTICLE TWO

The contracting parties declare that they are ready to participate in the spirit of sincere co-operation in all international actions aimed at safeguarding international peace and security and will fully dedicate their efforts to the realization of these aims. The contracting parties will strive for the adoption by agreement with other States desiring to collaborate in this matter of effective measures for the general reduction of armaments and the prohibition of atomic, hydrogen and other weapons of mass destruction.

ARTICLE THREE

The contracting parties shall consult each other on all important international questions affecting their common interests, being guided by the requirements of strengthening international peace and security. They shall consult with each other without delay at any time when in the opinion of any one of them a threat arises of armed attack on one or several States signatory to the Treaty, in the interests of ensuring joint defence and the maintenance of peace and security.

ARTICLE FOUR

In case of armed attack in Europe on one or several States signatory to the Treaty, by any State or group of States, each State signatory to the Treaty, by way of exercising the right to individual or collective defence, in conformity with Article 51 of the UN Charter, shall render the State or States subjected to such attack immediate aid individually and by agreement with other States signatory to the Treaty, with all the means which it shall deem necessary, including the use of armed force. The States signatory to the Treaty shall immediately consult each other as to the joint measures which must be taken to secure and maintain international peace and security. The measures adopted on the basis of this Article will be reported to the Security Council in conformity with the Articles of the UN Charter. These measures will be terminated as soon as the Security Council launches measures necessary for the restoration and maintenance of international peace and security.

ARTICLE FIVE

The contracting parties have agreed to set up a Joint Command of their armed forces to be placed, by agreement between the Powers, at the disposal of this Command acting on the basis of jointly established principles. They shall also take other co-ordinated measures necessary for the strengthening of their defensive capacity in order to protect the peaceful labour of their peoples, guarantee the integrity of their frontiers and territories and ensure defence against possible aggression.

ARTICLE SIX

With the object of carrying out consultations provided by the present Treaty between the States participating in the Treaty and for the examination of questions arising in connection with the realization of this Treaty, a Political Consultative Committee is being set up in which each State participating in the Treaty will be represented by a member of its Government or another specially appointed representative. The Committee may set up any auxiliary organs it considers necessary.

ARTICLE SEVEN

The contracting parties pledge themselves to refrain from taking part in coalitions or alliances of any kind and from concluding any agreements the aims of which conflict with the aims of this Treaty. The contracting parties declare that their commitments under existing international Treaties are in no way contradictory to the provisions of this Treaty.

ARTICLE EIGHT

The contracting parties declare that they will act in the spirit of friendship and co-operation with the aim of further developing and strengthening economic and cultural relations between them, following the principles of mutual respect for their independence and sovereignty and non-interference in domestic affairs.

ARTICLE NINE

The Treaty is open for accession to other States, irrespective of their social and State systems which may express their readiness by means of participating in this Treaty to promote the unification of the efforts of the peace-loving countries for the purpose of ensuring peace and the security of the peoples. Accession to the Treaty shall enter into force by agreement with the States participating in the Treaty after the document of accession has been deposited with the Government of the Polish People's Republic.

ARTICLE TEN

The present Treaty is subject to ratification, and the ratification instruments shall be deposited with the Government of the Polish People's Republic. The Treaty shall enter into force on the day when the last ratification instrument has been deposited. The Government of the Polish People's Republic shall inform the other States signatory to the Treaty of the depositing of each ratification instrument.

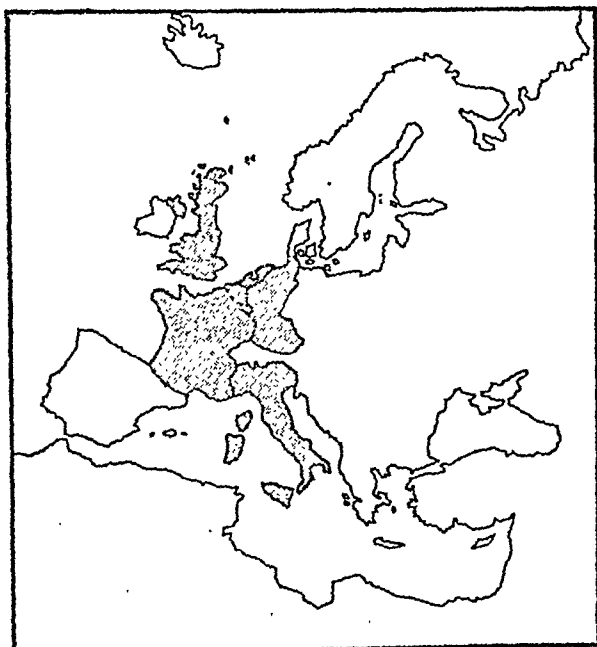

ARTICLE ELEVEN

The present Treaty shall remain in force for 20 years. For the contracting parties who do not hand to the Government of the Polish People's Republic a declaration denouncing the Treaty one year before the expiration of this term it shall remain in force for the following 10 years. Should a system of collective security be set up in Europe and an all-European treaty of collective security concluded for this purpose, towards which the contracting Powers will continue to aspire, the present Treaty is to lose its validity on the day on which an all-European treaty comes into force.

WESTERN EUROPEAN UNION—WEU

9 Grosvenor Place, London, S.W.1, England

Based on the Brussels Treaty of 1948, Western European Union was set up in 1955. Member States seek to co-ordinate their defence policy and equipment, and to co-operate in political, social, legal and cultural affairs.

HISTORY

Western European Union is a development of the Brussels Treaty signed by Belgium, France, Luxembourg, the Netherlands and the United Kingdom in 1948. That Treaty provided for collective self-defence, mutual automatic military assistance in the event of a repetition of hostilities and for collaboration in economic, social and cultural matters between these five states. At the time of its signature, the Treaty was a unique instrument, creating the most closely-knit international co-operative association ever known. Furthermore, it contributed directly to the creation of larger similarly combined efforts: on the military side NATO, and on the civil side the Council of Europe.

As a sequel to the collapse in 1954 of the plans for creating a European Defence Community, a nine-power conference was convened in London in order to attempt to reach a new agreement. In particular some means had to be found of associating the defence effort of the Federal Republic of Germany with NATO. The conference was attended by Ministers representing Belgium, Canada, France, the Federal Republic of Germany, Italy, Luxembourg, the Netherlands, the United Kingdom and the United States of America. A document was drawn up stating that the occupation régime in Germany would be ended and that Germany would join NATO; the former Brussels Treaty would be strengthened and extended, and Germany and Italy would be invited to accede to it.

These decisions were embodied in a series of agreements, signed in 1954, which form the substance of the seven-power Western European Union, the seven powers being Belgium, France, the Federal Republic of Germany, Italy, Luxembourg, the Netherlands and the United Kingdom. The ratification of these agreements was completed by May 6th, 1955, on which date Western European Union came into being.

On the ratification of the agreements, Western European Union was also charged with the specific task of settling the future of the Saar. Under a Franco-German agreement, the Saar was to have a European Statute within the framework of WEU, provided that this Statute was approved by a referendum. A Commission was set up in May 1955 to supervise the referendum, which was held on October 23rd, 1955. The result showed that the Saar majority had voted against the adoption of the European Statute and had furthermore expressed a wish to be incorporated in the Federal Republic of Germany. The Saar then became a Land of the Federal Republic of Germany, but remained linked economically to France. The final incorporation of the territory, now re-named Saarland, took place on July 5th, 1959.

The activities of the four main social and cultural committees were transferred to the Council of Europe in June 1960.

The Council of WEU has formally approved certain relaxations of the restrictions on German arms production imposed by Protocol III of the revised Brussels Treaty. They concern specified long-range and guided missiles, influence mines, and the construction of certain ships and submarines.

In July 1963, following the suspension of negotiations for Britain's entry into the Common Market, it was agreed that the WEU Council would meet at quarterly intervals and that the economic situation in Europe would be an item regularly on its agenda. The Commission of the EEC would be invited to be represented during the discussion of this point. These meetings continued between 1963 and 1970. Although political consultation continues, discussions on the economic situation have been suspended since the re-opening at the end of June 1970 of negotiations for the enlargement of the European Economic Community.

WESTERN EUROPEAN UNION

Several proposals were put forward at Council Meetings held during 1968 for closer political and defence consultations within the framework of WEU and, specifically, for discussions relating to Britain's role in Europe.

At a ministerial meeting in Luxembourg in February 1969 the United Kingdom's proposal for a meeting to discuss the Middle East situation was approved by all members except France. This meeting, organized by the WEU Secretariat in London later in the month, was boycotted by France, who declared that she would not attend ministerial meetings until further notice, because the convening of the present meeting without the unanimous approval of WEU members was a breach of treaty.

France rejoined the Council in June 1970.

THE BRUSSELS TREATY

(as amended by Protocol No. 1, signed in 1954, modifying and completing the Treaty)

ARTICLE I

Convinced of the close community of their interests and of the necessity of uniting in order to promote the economic recovery of Europe, the High Contracting Parties will so organise and co-ordinate their economic activities as to produce the best possible results, by the elimination of conflict in their economic policies, the co-ordination of production and the development of commercial exchanges.

The co-operation provided for in the preceding paragraph, which will be effected through the Council referred to in Article VIII as well as through other bodies, shall not involve any duplication of, or prejudice to, the work of other economic organisations in which the High Contracting Parties are or may be represented but shall on the contrary assist the work of those organisations.

ARTICLE II

The High Contracting Parties will make every effort in common, both by direct consultation and in specialised agencies, to promote the attainment of a higher standard of living by their peoples and to develop on corresponding lines the social and other related services of their countries.

The High Contracting Parties will consult with the object of achieving the earliest possible application of recommendations of immediate practical interest, relating to social matters, adopted with their approval in the specialised agencies.

They will endeavour to conclude as soon as possible conventions with each other in the sphere of social security.

ARTICLE III

The High Contracting Parties will make every effort in common to lead their peoples towards a better understanding of the principles which form the basis of their common civilisation and to promote cultural exchanges by conventions between themselves or by other means.

ARTICLE IV

In the execution of the Treaty the High Contracting Parties and any organs established by them under the Treaty shall work in close co-operation with the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation.

Recognising the undesirability of duplicating the military staffs of NATO, the Council and its Agency will rely on the appropriate military authorities of NATO for information and advice on military matters.

ARTICLE V

If any of the High Contracting Parties should be the object of an armed attack in Europe, the other High Contracting Parties will, in accordance with the provisions of Article 51 of the Charter of the United Nations, afford the Party so attacked all the military and other aid and assistance in their power.

ARTICLE VI

All measures taken as a result of the preceding Article shall be immediately reported to the Security Council. They shall be terminated as soon as the Security Council has taken the measures necessary to maintain or restore international peace and security.

The present Treaty does not prejudice in any way the obligations of the High Contracting Parties under the provisions of the Charter of the United Nations. It shall not be interpreted as affecting in any way the authority and responsibility of the Security Council under the Charter to take at any time such action as it deems necessary in order to maintain or restore international peace and security.

ARTICLE VII

The High Contracting Parties declare, each so far as he is concerned, that none of the international engagements now in force between him and any of the High Contracting Parties or any third State is in conflict with the provisions of the present Treaty.

None of the High Contracting Parties will conclude any alliance or participate in any coalition directed against any other of the High Contracting Parties.

ARTICLE VIII

1. For the purposes of strengthening peace and security and of promoting unity and of encouraging the progressive integration of Europe and closer co-operation between them and with other European organisations, the High Contracting Parties to the Brussels Treaty shall create a Council to consider matters concerning the execution of this Treaty and of its Protocols and their Annexes.

2. This Council shall be known as the "Council of Western European Union"; it shall be so organised as to be able to exercise its functions continuously; it shall set up such subsidiary bodies as may be considered necessary; in particular it shall establish immediately an Agency for the Control of Armaments, whose functions are defined in Protocol No. IV.

At the request of any of the High Contracting Parties the Council shall be immediately convened in order to permit them to consult with regard to any situation which may constitute a threat to peace, in whatever area this threat should arise, or a danger to economic stability.

The Council shall decide by unanimous vote questions for which no other voting procedure has been or may be agreed. In the cases provided for in Protocols II, III and IV it will follow the various voting procedures, unanimity, two-thirds majority, simple majority, laid down therein. It will decide by simple majority questions submitted to it by the Agency for the Control of Armaments.

ARTICLE IX

The Council of Western European Union shall make an annual report on its activities and, in particular, concerning the control of armaments to an Assembly composed of representatives of the Brussels Treaty Powers to the Consultative Assembly of the Council of Europe.

ARTICLE X

In pursuance of their determination to settle disputes only by peaceful means, the High Contracting Parties will apply to disputes between themselves the following provisions:

The High Contracting Parties will, while the present Treaty remains in force, settle all disputes falling within the scope of Article 36, paragraph 2, of the Statute of the International Court of Justice by referring them to the Court, subject only, in the case of each of them, to any reservation already made by that Party when accepting this clause for compulsory jurisdiction, to the extent that that Party may maintain the reservation.

In addition, the High Contracting Parties will submit to conciliation all disputes outside the scope of Article 36, paragraph 2, of the Statute of the International Court of Justice.

In the case of a mixed dispute involving both questions for which conciliation is appropriate and other questions for which judicial settlement is appropriate, any Party to the dispute shall have the right to insist that the judicial settlement of the legal questions shall precede conciliation.

The preceding provisions of this Article in no way affect the application of relevant provisions or agreements prescribing some other method of pacific settlement.

ARTICLE XI

The High Contracting Parties may, by agreement, invite any other State to accede to the present Treaty on conditions to be agreed between them and the State so invited.

Any State so invited may become a Party to the Treaty by depositing an instrument of accession with the Belgian Government.

The Belgian Government will inform each of the High Contracting Parties of the deposit of each instrument of accession.

ARTICLE XII

The present Treaty shall be ratified and the instruments of ratification shall be deposited as soon as possible with the Belgian Government.

It shall enter into force on the date of the deposit of the last instrument of ratification and shall thereafter remain in force for fifty years.

After the expiry of the period of fifty years, each of the High Contracting Parties shall have the right to cease to be a party thereto provided that he shall have previously given one year's notice of denunciation to the Belgian Government.

The Belgian Government shall inform the Governments of the other High Contracting Parties of the deposit of each instrument of ratification and of each notice of denunciation.

WESTERN EUROPEAN UNION

SUMMARY OF PROTOCOLS

PROTOCOL No. I

This Protocol is incorporated in the text of the revised Treaty as printed above.

PROTOCOL No. II

This Protocol sets upper limits on the size of the land and air forces which the members of WEU maintain on the continent of Europe in peace-time and place under the command of the Supreme Allied Commander, Europe. For Belgium, France, the Federal Republic of Germany, Italy and the Netherlands these limits are the same as in the Annex to the EDC Treaty; for Luxembourg the limit is one regimental combat team, while for the United Kingdom it is four divisions and the Second Tactical Air Force. The level of naval forces are determined annually by NATO. These limits are not to be increased except by unanimous agreement, and the level of internal defence and police forces are also to be established by internal agreement. Finally, the United Kingdom agreed not to withdraw or diminish her forces in Europe against the wishes of the majority of her partners, except in the event of an acute overseas emergency.

PROTOCOL No. III

Under the third Protocol, the Federal Republic of Germany undertook not to manufacture atomic, chemical or biological weapons, or certain other weapons on a list (including guided missiles, warships and strategic bombers) which can be amended by the Council of WEU by a two-thirds majority. The Federal Republic agreed to supervision to ensure that these undertakings were respected and the other members agreed that their stocks of various weapons would be subject to control.

PROTOCOL No. IV

This Protocol provided for the setting up of the Agency for the Control of Armaments, which has the task of ensuring that the commitments contained in the third Protocol are observed. A Resolution was also passed setting up the Standing Armaments Committee. (See Organization above.)

SUMMARY OF THE CONSTITUTION

Preamble: Declaration of Principles (Luxembourg Congress, October 1968).

The World Confederation of Labour (WCL) is an international movement of workers' trade union organizations.

The WCL is convinced that men's fulfilment, as also the development of nations—whether it be in the technical, economic, political, social or cultural fields—has a spiritual as well as material content. This is particularly true of the view men form of the purpose of life. The WCL's statement of its principles and definition of its objectives and methods of action are consistent with either a spiritual concept based on the conviction that man and the universe are created by God, or other concepts that lead together with it to a common effort to build a human community united in freedom, dignity, justice and brotherhood.

The WCL, which originated in the Christian-inspired trade union movement, now addresses its message in the present Declaration of Principles to all workers everywhere in the world who are willing to subscribe to it, whatever may be their creed, concept of life, race or sex.

ARTICLE 1. The WCL devotes its action to studying, promoting, representing and defending the material, moral and spiritual interests of the workers. It takes full responsibility for its action, deciding this independently of any outside authority, whatever its kind, political, religious or other.

SECRETARIAT

General Secretary: Dr. PHILIP A. POTTER (West Indies).

Director, Finance and Central Services: FRANK NORTHAM (U.K.).

PRINCIPAL ACTIVITIES

Studies. Theological research work is undertaken, and conferences and commissions study the reunion of the Churches, evangelism and missionary work, the role of the Church in society, religious liberty, racial and cultural relations, and the place of the layman in the Church today.

Inter-Church Aid. Provides funds for Churches in need and considers each year a list of projects, allocating funds for those approved.

Refugee and World Service. Provision of financial and material relief in disaster areas and distribution of food, clothing, medical supplies and tents. Thousands of refugees have been re-settled by the Council, which also provides medical care, homes for aged refugees and educational facilities.

Education. The Office of Christian Education was set up in 1971 when the integration with the World Council of Christian Education took place. The office is concerned with both religious and general education. The Council provides scholarships for theological students to continue their education in other countries, largely in places provided by member Churches in their theological schools. The Ecumenical Institute holds educational courses, study conferences and a graduate course in ecumenical studies in connection with the University of Geneva, at Bossey, Switzerland.

WORLD COUNCIL OF CHURCHES

International Affairs. The Commission of the Churches on International Affairs represents the Council at conferences of international bodies such as the United Nations, and works for peace, justice and freedom.

Mission and Evangelism. The Council's Commission on World Mission and Evangelism (formerly the International Missionary Council) serves the Churches and missionary societies in the maintenance of missionary work and promotes co-operation in the common task of evangelism.

Youth Activities. The Council promotes world youth projects and ecumenical work camps as well as providing opportunities for voluntary service by young people.

Faith and Witness. The Commission on Faith and Order was reconstituted at the Uppsala Assembly in 1968. Its first meeting with Roman Catholics present as full members was held in Louvain, Belgium, in August 1971. The main theme of the meeting was "The Unity of the Church and the Unity of Mankind".

Programme to Combat Racism. This was inaugurated in August 1969 by the Central Committee. The first grants, amounting to $300,000, were made from the Fund in September 1970 to liberation movements in Europe, South America, Japan and Africa. The second allocation, totalling $200,000, was made in September 1971 to movements in South Africa, North America, South America, the Caribbean, Japan and Europe. The third allocation, totalling $450,000, was made in February 1974 to movements in southern Africa, North America, South America, Japan and Europe.

WORLD FEDERATION OF TRADE UNIONS

SUMMARY OF THE CONSTITUTION

Adopted by the World Trade Union Conference, October 3rd, 1945; modified by the amendments adopted by the 2nd and 4th World Trade Union Congress (1949 and 1957), and by the 16th Session of the General Council mandated by the 6th World Trade Union Congress (1966), and by the 7th World Trade Union Congress (1969).

The World Federation of Trade Unions exists to improve the living and working conditions of the people of all lands and to unite them in pursuit of the objectives sought by all freedom-loving peoples as set forth in the Declarations of the London World Trade Union Conference in February 1945, and the resolutions and decisions of principle adopted by the First World Trade Union Congress in Paris in October 1945. The WFTU works for a world system where social injustices and every form of exploitation of man by man will be banished. While retaining its independence of political parties and governments, the WFTU accepts co-operation with all progressive forces in the world which are fighting against imperialism, colonialism and neo-colonialism, for social progress, national independence and peace. (Followed by a proclamation of the prime purposes of WFTU and its working principles.)

ARTICLES 1-2. Composition: Bona fide union organizations. As a general rule, affiliation shall be confined to a single national trade union centre from each country. The Executive Bureau shall make decisions about admission, subject to ratification by the General Council and the Congress.

ARTICLE 3. Structure: World Trade Union Congress; General Council; Executive Bureau; Secretariat.

ARTICLE 4. World Trade Union Congress: Congress, the sovereign authority of WFTU, shall be convened every four years.

ARTICLE 5. General Council, elected by the World Congress, shall meet every year.

ARTICLE 6. Executive Bureau: Elected by the General Council and consists of the President, General Secretary and other members from the different continents, the number of which is decided at each Congress. Meets in three ordinary sessions per year.

ARTICLE 7. Secretariat: Consists of the General Secretary and the Secretaries, taking into account the representation of all the regions of the world.

ARTICLES 8-9. Auditors, Budget and Funds: Funds are to be provided by affiliation fees given on a total membership basis and paid quarterly.

ARTICLES 10-11. Internal Administration and Headquarters.

ARTICLE 12. Discipline: Deleted.

ARTICLE 13. Trade Unions Internationals (TUI's) (originally Trade Departments): Organization; Functions; relationship with WFTU. Every TUI shall be represented at the Congress and the General Council by one delegate and one deputy delegate. These delegates have the right to vote, by a show of hands, but shall not participate in the event of a card roll call vote.

ARTICLE 14. Regional Trade Union Activities.

WORLD FEDERATION OF UNITED NATIONS ASSOCIATIONS—WFUNA

Centre International, 3 rue de Varembe, 1211 Geneva 20, Switzerland

Founded in 1946 as a peoples' movement supporting the United Nations.
Members: United Nations Associations in 80 countries.

ORGANIZATION

PLENARY ASSEMBLY

The supreme organ of the Federation, responsible for policy. Meets in ordinary session every two years. Delegates appointed by member Associations and the International Youth and Student Movement for the United Nations.

President: U. THANT (Burma).

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE

Consists of 13 representatives of the Member Associations and one member from the International Youth and Student Movement for the United Nations. Responsible for the execution of policy decisions, administration and finance.

Chairman: SIDNEY WILLNER (U.S.A.).

SECRETARIAT

Secretary-General: L. H. HORACE PERERA (Sri Lanka).

Responsible for the day-to-day administration and the general affairs of the Federation.

AIMS AND ACTIVITIES

The Federation aims to be a peoples' movement for the United Nations and to co-ordinate and further the activities of the United Nations Associations. It also seeks to promote tolerance, understanding, solidarity and international co-operation among all people regardless of race, religion, sex or language, to contribute to peaceful co-operation among nations, to strive for security, justice, disarmament and the recognition of human rights and to improve economic and social conditions. It conducts seminars, regional conferences and study courses about the United Nations. There have been seminars for educators on teaching about the United Nations in Cuba, France, Lebanon, India, El Salvador, Liberia, Somalia, Philippines, Uruguay, Germany, Denmark, Italy, Pakistan, Australia, Ghana, Malaysia, Tanzania, Dahomey, Paraguay, Mexico, Poland, Egypt and Venezuela. Seminars on adult education have been held in Thailand and Romania.

There have been several study courses on the various specialized agencies of the United Nations. The Federation also conducts annually in co-operation with the International Student Movement for the United Nations a Summer School on a special aspect of the work of the United Nations or of its Specialized Agencies. The Federation enjoys Consultative Status I with the United Nations Economic and Social Council and Consultative and Associate Status A with UNESCO. It also has consultative relations with the World Health Organization, the International Labour Organization, UNICEF, the World Meteorological Organization, the Food and Agriculture Organization and the International Atomic Energy Agency. These relations enable the Federation to present the suggestions and views of its members to the Specialized Agencies.

BUDGET

Annual dues paid by Member Associations in proportion to the contributions paid by their governments to the United Nations are the main source of revenue. The balance is provided by donations from Foundations and private individuals, and special projects are financed by UNESCO.
